SALONIKI BEST FORTIFIED CITY IN WORLD NOW; BUILDER VERDUN'S DEFENSES DID IT

Post-Dispatch Correspondent, With Permit From Gen. Serrail, Who Was Transferred to Greek Front From Western Line to Make Position Secure, Sees Miles and Miles of Concrete Gun Positions and Iron Roofed Bomb Proofs.

By Arno Dosch-Fleurot.

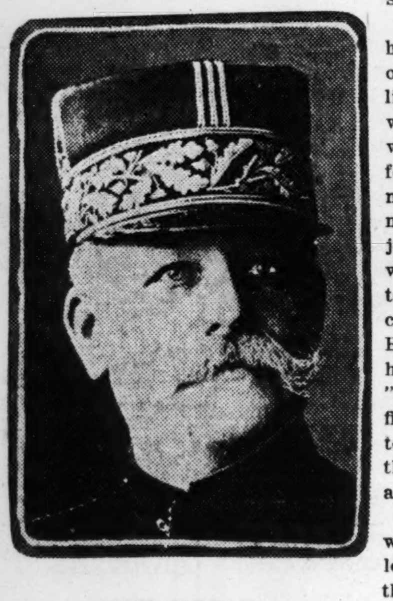
SALONIKI, March 25.

SALONIKI is the best fortified city in the world today. All that has been learned about fortifying cities during this illuminating war has been taken advantage of in building the 90 miles of Saloniki's wonderful defenses.

The work has been done by Gen. Sarrail, who prepared the trenches at Verdun. From the lowlands of the Vardar to the Gulf of Orphano is one continuous maze of trenches and underground fortresses, where great armies can defend the city in comparative safety. Passing over the country, one sees nothing but the barbed wire entanglements; and yet there are nearly a quarter of a million men underground.

I have just been taken out to see these defenses by Capt. Jose Frappa of the French army, under the direction of Gen. Sarrail. I went without much enthusiasm, feeling that trenches which are not being fired upon have little news value, but I have come back impressed with the thoroughness and permanent value of the defenses. I feel I have had a liberal education in how to defend a city.

Before going I had tow quite different receptions by the English and the French armies here. I was sent first by Maj. Villiers, the provost marshal, with a letter to one of the divisional bureaus of the British headquarters. As I started to mount the steps a gruff Sergeant ordered me to remain in the street. I told him he was ruder than any Prussian I had ever met, whereupon he turned to the sentry and said: "If this man tries to enter before he is sent for, put him out."



GEN. SARRAIL.

A polite Lieutenant took me in, but though I had a French military pass, he said he could do nothing for [illegible] "We have two correspondents se[illegible] to us by the War Office, so there [illegible] are," he said helplessly. "You be[illegible]r see what the French will do for you. This is really their show, you know."

Decidedly French.

AND it is decidedly, in every way French. Except for the work of the "Balkan Rough Riders," the English troops who were in Servia at the beginning, the whole affair is French. Gen. Sarrail is in command here because he has the m[illegible] troops. He planned the defens[illegible]rried them out and has his own [illegible] in the most important positions. [illegible]ke all the great French Generals in this war, he does his own work and makes his own troops take the most dangerous positions.

When I presented myself at the big, bleak building of the French headquarters, a Zouave with a rosy, boyish face and a roving eye, said:

"Gen. Sarrail? Right upstairs. I'll show you the way."

He dashed up ahead of me, three steps at a time, flinging back over his shoulder comments on the rain, dirt and general lack of resemblance to France offered by Saloniki.

I asked to see some member of Gen. Sarrail's staff. Another Zouave with a big blond beard, who took my card, said: "The General is here himself. You might as well see him."

He entered a door and during the time he was gone a tall General with hair erect on a high forehead and big, frank blue eyes passed briskly through the anteroom. I recognized him at once at Gen. Sarrail, largely on account of his noticeable resemblance to the well-known portrait Victor Hugo. Before he shaved off the beard he wore at Verdun the resemblance, I am told, was even stronger.

Amid Flaming Prairie.

AS he was putting on his cap to go out I feared I was going to miss him, but just as he gained the corridor the bearded Zouave came back and caught sight of him. In three astoundingly agile catlike leaps he was across the room and had laid a detaining hand on the General's arm.

"Here's someone who wants to see you," he said, handing Gen. Sarrail my card.

Gen. Sarrail studied my card a moment and came back with outstretched hand.

"Just arrived?" he asked. "Come out to see our little show? We will have to see what we can do for you. We cannot show you much fighting just yet, but we will be delighted to do what we can for you. Ballin" — calling his secretary — "see if you can find someone not too busy to show this gentleman around."

And, as always, when the French let you see anything they let you see everything. We even saw a fight, as that was the day the first German patrols in force crossed the Greek frontier and were driven out by a French division of mountain batteries.

Saloniki is so situated at the head of the Gulf of Saloniki that the eastern half of the city is partially defended by a steep ridge, but to the westward the city ends at the edge of open prairie country, with just enough roll to the land to give an enemy good cover. This prairie, which is quite fertile, and, at this time of year, covered with all sorts of highly colored wild flowers, is practically uninhabited. The sheep and goats are herded across it, and that is all the advantage taken of the rich soil. It has been troubled country too long. No one has cared to risk planting crops. Someone else was too sure to reap them. The few houses are in villages and are poor affairs at that.

Soldiers' Spring Planting.

WE bowled out the Monastir road, which Capt. Frappa remarks, "is not entirely open yet." It is a good road, too, kept in good repair by French soldiers. All along the way were base hospitals, aviation camps of different kinds, some for reconnoissance, others for bomb dropping, and well built military camps with planted flowers growing before the barracks.

At Topsin, about half way to the Vardar, which reaches the gulf about twenty miles to the westward, the Parisian taxicab driver who was driving us turned off the road and began climbing the rolling hillocks over the grass. The prairie was cut up for miles with the deep ruts of last winter's tough hauling. But the mud was drying and soft spring breezes bent the heads of the wild flowers. We passed camp after camp, first the heaviest artillery, then on down to the 105-mm. and 75-mm. guns. At each camp floral designs were being worked out in the best station master's art, with white washed stones to complete the design. The poilus were doing this work with loving care, and at one place an officer was giving minute directions for the planting of bulbs.

On one sunny slope near a great camp of most destructive looking guns the poilus were at work plant-

Scenes on the Road to Verdun and a Visit to the Rising French Commander, Petain

Frank H. Simond's Writes of the Human Side of the Great Battle

American Writer Saw Only Middle-Aged men Marching to and Returning From Lines and Realization Was Forced Upon Him That the French Youth Had Fallen in Former Battles.

Chieftain Who Has Become National Hero by His Stonewall Defense of City Is a Cold Type of Soldier, Calculating and Relentless in the Use of Men as a Part of War Machine.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS.

(Copyright, 1916.)

MY road to Verdun ran through the Elysee Palace, and it was to the courtesy and interest of the President of the French republic that I owed my opportunity to see the battle for the Meuse city at close range. Already through the kindness of the French General Staff I had seen the Lorraine and Marne battleground and had been guided over these fields by officers who had shared in the opening battles that saved France. But Verdun was more difficult; there is little time for caring for the wandering correspondent when a decisive contest is going forward, and quite naturally the General Staff turned a deaf ear to my request.

FRANK H. SIMONDS.

Through the kindness of one of the many Frenchmen who gave time and effort to make my pilgrimage a success I was at last able to see M. Poincare. Like our own American President, the French chief magistrate is never interviewed, and I mention this audience simply because it was one more and in a sense the final proof for me of the friendliness, the courtesy, the interest that the American will find today in France I had gone to Paris, my ears filled with the warnings of those who told me that it was hard to be an American in Europe, in France, in the present hour I had gone expecting, or at least fearing, that I should find it so.

Instead, from peasant to President, I found only kindness, only gratitude, only a profound appreciation for all that Americans had individually done for France in the hour of her great trial. These things and one thing more I found; a very intense desire that Americans should be able to see for themselves; the Frenchman will not talk to you of what France has done, is doing. He shrinks from anything that might suggest the imitation of the German method of propaganda. In so far as it is humanly possible he would have you see the thing for yourself and testify out of your own mouth.

Thus it came about that all my difficulties vanished when I had been permitted to express to the President my desire to see Verdun and to go back to America—I was sailing within the week—able to report what I had seen with my own eyes of the decisive battle still going forward around the Lorraine city. Without further delay, discussion, it was promised that I should go to Verdun by motor, that I should go cared for by the French military authorities and that I should be permitted to see all that one could see at the moment of the contest.

Path to Battle Passes Through Peaceful Suburbs.

WE left Paris in the early afternoon; my companions were M. Henri Ponsot, chief of the press service of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and M. Huges le Roux, a distinguished Frenchman of letters, well known to many Americans. To start for the battlefield from a busy, peaceful city, to run for m[illegible]ough suburbs as quiet and lacking in martial aspect as the regions beyond the H[illegible] in the suburbs of New York, was a thing that seemed almost unreal; but only for a brief moment, for war has come very near to Paris, and one may not travel far in Eastern France without seeing its signs.

In less than an hour we were passing the rear of the line held by the British at the Battle of the Marne, and barely 60 minutes after we had passed out through the Vincennes gate we met at Courtacon the first of the ruined villages that for 200 miles line the roadways that lead from the capital to Lorraine and Champagne. Suddenly, in the midst of a peaceful countryside, after passing a score of undisturbed villages, villages so like one to another, you come to one upon which the storm has burst, and instead of snug houses, smiling faces, the air of contentment and happiness that was France, there is only a heap of ruins, houses with their roofs gone, their walls torn by shell fire, villages abandoned partially or wholly, contemporary Pompeiis, overtaken by the Vesuvius of Krupp.

Coincidentally there appear along the roadside, in the fields, among the plow furrows, on every side, the crosses that mark the graves of those who died for France—or for Germany. Along the slope you may mark the passage of a charge by these crosses; those who fell were buried as they lay, French and Germans with equal care. Indeed, there is a certain pride visible in all that the French do for their dead foes. Alongside a hamlet wantonly burned, burned by careful labor and with German thoroughness; in villages where you will be told of nameless atrocities and shameful killings, you will see the German graves, marked by neat crosses, surrounded by sod embankments, marked with plaques of black and white; the French are marked by plaques of red, white and blue, the latter invariably decorated with a flag and flowers.

GEN. PETAIN.

SINCE I saw Petain in the little Mairie at Souilly I have seen many photographs of him, but none in any real measure give the true picture of the defender of Verdun. He saw us in his office, the bare upstairs room, two years ago the office of the Mayor of Souilly. Think of the Selectmen's office in any New England village and the picture will be accurate. A bare room, a desk, one chair, a telephone, nothing on the walls but two maps, one of the military zone, one of the actual front and positions of the Verdun fighting. A bleak room, barely heated by the most primitive of stoves. From the single window one looked down on the cheerless street along which lumbered the caravan of autos. On the pegs against the wall hung the General's hat and coat, weather stained, faded, the clothes of a man who worked in all weathers. Of staff officers, of uniform, of color, there was just nothing; of war there was hardly a hint—FRANK H. SIMONDS.

A Huge Cemetery for Hundreds of Miles.

ONCE you have seen these graves by the roadside going east you will hardly go a mile in 200 which has not its graves. From the environs of Meaux, a scant 20 miles from Paris, to the frontier at the Seille, beyond Nancy, there are graves and more graves, now scattered, now crowded together, where men fought hand to hand. Passing them, in a swift-moving auto, they seem to march by you; there is the illusion of an army advancing on the hillside, until at last, beyond Nancy, where the fighting was so terrible, about little villages such as Corbessaux, you come to the great common graves, where 100 or 200 men have been gathered, where the trenches now leveled are but long graves and you read, "Here rest 179 French soldiers," or across the read, "Here 190 Germans."

Take a map of France and from a point just south of Paris draw a straight line to the Vosges; 20 or 30 miles to the north draw another. Between the two is the black district of the Marne and Nancy battlefields. It is the district of ruined villages, destroyed farms; it is the region where every hillside—so it will seem to the traveler—is marked by these pathetic crosses. It is a region in which the sense of death and destruction is abroad. Go 40 miles north again and draw two more lines, and this is the region not of the death and destruction of yesterday, but of today; this is the front, where the graves are still in the making, the region of the Oise to the Meuse, from Noyon to Verdun.

On this day our route led eastward through the villages which in September, 1914, woke from at least a century of oblivion, from the forgetting that followed Napoleon's last campaign in France to a splendid but terrible 10 days: Courtacon, Sezanne, La-Fere Champenoise, Vitry-le-Francois, the region where Franchet d'Esprey and Foch fought, where the "Miracle of the Marne" was performed. Mile after mile the countryside files by the never-changing impression of a huge cemetery, the hugest in the world, the stricken villages, now and then striving to begin again, a red roof here and there telling of the first counter offensive of peace, of construction made against the whirlwind that had come and gone.

Scene Changes Suddenly From War's Ruin to War.

ALWAYS, too, nothing but old men and women, these and children, working in the broad fields, still partially cultivated, but no longer the fields of that perfectly cared for France of the other peace days. Women and children at the plow, old men bent double by age still spending such strength as is left in the tasks that war has set for them. This is the France behind the front, and, aside from the ruined villages and graves, the France that stretches from the Pyrenees to the Marne, a France from which youth and manhood are gone, in which age and childhood remain with the women. Yet in this land we were passing, how much of the youth and manhood of France and Germany was buried in the graves the crosses demonstrated at every kilometer.

But a hundred miles east of Paris there begins a new world. The graves, the shell-cursed villages, remain, but this is no longer the France of the Marne fighting and of the war of two years ago. At Vitry-le-Francois you pass almost without warning into the region which is the back of the front today, the base of all the line of fire from Rheims to the Meuse, and suddenly along the road appear the canvas guideposts which bear the terse warning "Verdun." You pass suddenly from ancient to contemporary history, from the killing of other years to the killing that is of today—the killing and the wounding—and along the hills where there are still graves there begin to appear Red Cross tents and signs, and ambulances pass you bearing the latest harvest.

And now every village is a garrison town. For a hundred miles there have been only women and old men, but now there are only soldiers; they fill the streets; thew crowd the doorways of the houses. The fields are filled with tents, with horses, with all the impedimenta of an army. The whole countryside is a place of arms. Every branch of French service is about you—Tunisians, Turcos, cavalry, the black, the brown and the white—the men who yesterday or last week were in the first line, who rest and will return tomorrow or next day to fight again.

No Romance, No Glamour; Merely Business of Death.

UNMISTAKABLY, too, you feel that this is the business of war; you are in a factory, a machine shop; if the product is death and destruction, it is no less a matter of machinery, not of romance, of glamour. The back of the front is a place of work and of rest for more work, but of parade of the brilliant, of the fascinating, there is just nothing. Men with bright but plainly weary faces, not young men, but men of 30 and above, hard bitten by their experience, patently fit, fed, but somehow related to the ruins and the destruction around them, they are all about you, and wherever now you see a grave you will discover a knot of men standing before it talking soberly. Wherever you see the vestiges of an old trench, a hill that was fought for at this time 20 months ago, you will see new practice trenches and probably the recruits, the "Class of 1917," the boys that are waiting for the call, listening to an officer explaining to them what has been done here, the mistake or the good judgment revealed by the event. For France is training the youth that remains to her on the still recent battlefields and in the presence of those who died to keep the ground.

Just as the darkness came we passed St. Dizier and entered at last upon the road to Verdun, the one road that is the life line of the city. For to

"Supplies Best Aid U. S. Could Give Allies in Case of War With Germany"

French Minister of Munitions Says It Would Take Us Two Years to Get Sufficient Army Together for Attack and That Meanwhile Throwing Our Resources Open to the Entente Would Insure Latter's Triumph.

By LINCOLN EYRE.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, April 29.

THE effect upon American munition shipments to the allies of a rupture between the United States and Germany, French experiments with destructive gases, and the amazing increase in French artillery strength at Verdun and the actual presence at the front of the newest monster ordnance—the 400-millimeter (15.7-inch) siege gun, were among the subjects touched upon in an enlightening conversation it has been my privilege to have with Albert Thomas, Minister of Munitions.

"The Master of the Forge," as he has come to be called throughout all France, prefers, like all good workmen, to talk about his job, and, of course, Verdun is uppermost in his thoughts. Yet he has found time to follow closely President Wilson's controversy with Wilhelmstrasse, and his approval of the President's present attitude is readily discernible.

"It has been said the entry of the United States into the war would embarrass the allies by restricting their supplies of war material from America. Do you believe that?" I asked M. Thomas.

"That is for the United States to decide," came the swift reply. The Minister of Munitions, despite his scholarly appearance, talks and acts like the head of a big corporation on a busy day in Wall Street.

"If the American Government," he went on, "should take over the entire American output of munitions and raw material for their manufacture, it certainly might prove a source of temporary embarrassment. We should be obliged to seek another field, which, of course, could be found without insurmountable difficulty.

ALBERT THOMAS,
Minister of Munitions.

Expects Aid to Allies

"BUT to my mind"—M. Thomas fondled lovingly the cap of a big shell on his desk—"if your Government goes to the extreme in settling its disagreement with Germany, it must strive to bring about Germany's defeat, for only thus can peace and recognition of human rights be encompassed. And I cannot see that the United States can achieve this end more speedily than by supplying Germany's active foemen with shells and steel.

"You have no point of direct contact with the German Empire should you find yourselves at war. Your situation would be like that of Japan since the fall of Kiaochow.

"Hence your only immediate means of assuring to the American people and to humanity at large the rights which Germany has so wantonly violated would be by providing arms and ammunition wherewith Great Britain and France could enforce these rights. American shells and American guns in the hands of French artillerymen would be quite sufficient."

Two Years to Make Army

"WOULD the allies count upon military assistance from the United States in the event of it becoming at war with Germany?"

"I cannot say as to that. How long would it take the United States to build up an army the size of those engaged in this struggle? Two years, perhaps, more or less. Gen. Joffre has often expressed to me his approbation of the British troops, yet one mustn't forget it has taken England a year and a half to organize an army strong enough to make itself felt—and England had no Mexico to face when it entered the war."

I recalled to M. Thomas that last February the Ministry of Munitions informed the Post-Dispatch that no American-made shells had yet been fired from French guns, and inquired if that were still a fact.

It was the third time the Post-Dispatch had laid this inquiry before the Master of the Forge, and he smiled broadly as he responded:

"It is still true. But there are some shells now en route from America, and I hope that if no submarine intervenes they will be flying toward the enemy from French guns in a month or so. I'll take care to let you know about it, too."

A few days ago an officer friend fresh from the front told me of French experiments with a new gas on the Champagne sector. I asked the Minister of Munitions about it.

"There have been experiments," he replied frankly—he is much franker than the average American business magnate, whom he resembles—"and they have been highly satisfactory. The staff experts tell me that when our gas was carried over the German lines near Rheims by a favorable wind, all sound ceased behind their trenches altogether. Just before their batteries had been bombarding heavily. I believe their losses were very heavy.

"The Germans had a big lead over us in the manufacture of gases, owing to their superiority in the chemical industry, but I am glad to say we now have several establishments given over entirely to the production of asphyxiating gas. German fiendishness has forced us to have recourse to this weapon, but I can't say I consider it of primary importance.

Two Gases Make One Cloud

"IT'S successful use depends too much on conditions, and nowadays our protection against it is such it can have no effect, except in initial surprise attacks. The proof is that the Germans, though depending on lachrymogenous (tear-producing) and asphyxiating shells liberally, have attempted no attacks with clouds in all the Verdun fighting."

Beyond confirming my impression that the gas cloud tried out in Champagne was kept close to the earth by another gas which hung above it, wet-blanket like, M. Thomas went into no details concerning its technical aspects.

He was also inclined to be a bit taciturn about the new colossus, the 400-millimetre, two of the Brobdingnagian shells of which flank the portals of Claridge's Hotel, in which the Ministery of Munitions is housed.

"All I can authorize you to say about that is that some of the 400's are actually at the disposal of the Commander in Chief in the zone of the armies," he observed cautiously, and then added briskly, "It is an exaggeration to say the Germans use guns of caliber greater than 210 (8.3-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Treaty-Making Power.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Foreign policies have often caused a clash between the executive and legislative departments. These policies are based upon treaties, and treaties are to be made by the President "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate." To have put this weighty duty upon one man only would have been unjust and unrepublican. Gradually, however, it became the practice for the executive to make treaties and send them to the Senate for ratification merely. While the constitutional requirement as to "consent" was thus followed, that as to "advice" fell into disuse. The logical outcome of this practice has brought it within the power of one man to create conditions that enable him to say to Congress, which alone has power to declare war: "There, now file your declaration."

Ought not our practice conform to the Constitution? This can easily be done by making the Senate Committee for Foreign Relations a permanent advisory body of the President. Legislative work is done by committees and this method would establish such a close relation between the executive and the Senate that conflicts could not well occur.

The membership of this Senate Committee represents far more experience in diplomatic matters than the executive department. It also represents both political parties, and since foreign policies are not within partisan domain, the minority party ought to have a part in their formulating.

Thus this method would avoid domestic conflict, give better results and voice harmonious American, instead of a partisan, policy. It calls for no legislation. Public opinion, which eliminated the power of the electoral college, can quickly and effectively establish this method.

Mann's Accusation of Wilson.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Republican Leader Mann, in his venomous remarks on the President's recent message, says it is a "political dodge." He is evidently copying after the highly kultured trick of the German Government Count von Reventlow, et al., which is commonly known and recognized by all intelligent people as "thief crying stop thief" and mentioned by "Ignoramus" in his recent letter about the freedom of the seas. His vindictive accusation against an honest man makes it more likely that he is in the pay of the Kaiser than that Mr. Wilson is guilty of what he charges. The Kaiser should at least decorate him with the order of the red (or the yellow) eagle, but the Republican party would be wise in muzzling him.

HUGH O'DONNELL.

Authorship of Shakspeare.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

After giving your valuable space in Sunday's paper to the article by Henry Watterson about Marlow writing Shakspeare, I thank you for your editorial today, "300 Years of Shakspeare," commenting upon the decision of Judge Tuthill of Chicago, in which he arbitrarily decides that the "wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind" was responsible for the immoral plays. The truth is the man who has read the arguments and declares that Bacon wrote Shakspeare is either a "nut" or a knave. The easily answerable arguments promulgated by the Baconians may "split the ear of the groundlings, but they cannot but make the judicious grieve."

Shakspeare needs but one argument to demolish the pedestal of Bacon. It is style. The French say, "The style is the man," and no man in his writings can escape the personal expression. One has but to read Bacon's learned, heavy and ponderous writings to detect the difference between them and Shakspeare's inimitable expression, his airy, fairy fancy, and that peculiar style that is no more Bacon that I Hercules. Someone has pointedly said that if Bacon wrote Shakspeare then Shakspeare wrote Bacon.

Furthermore, there is only one poem that is stamped by Bacon, composed of several mediocre, commonplace stanzas. His prose style carries no suggestion of poetry, and it is passing strange that this is so if he really created the heritage of English literature ascribed to the "myriad-minded man."

CHARGED WITH BEING AMERICAN.

The Post-Dispatch regrets that its editorial, urging St. Louis citizens to repudiate the sentiment expressed in telegrams to Missouri Congressmen, sent in pursuance of a pro-German propaganda, asking, in effect, for support of peace at any price with Germany, is displeasing to the local German-American Alliance. We regret it more on account of the German-American Alliance than on our own account. The condemnation of the alliance is one of the penalties of free and fearless expression of newspaper opinion on a great issue. Since the issue in this case is Americanism vs. anti-Americanism, we cheerfully pay the penalty, but grieve for citizens who are so wofully misled by alien sympathies.

The issue, as the German-American Alliance seems to think, is no longer one of internal politics, based on a mere difference of opinion among Americans. It has been raised by the President of the United States, under his constitutional powers as Chief Executive and spokesman for the nation in foreign affairs. The telegrams in substance asked Congress to abandon the issue, repudiate the President and humiliatingly submit to German indignities, injuries, law violations and broken pledges. They asked Congress to go farther in the interest of Germany than the German Government has gone.

We have not, as the alliance charges, attempted to suppress free speech. On the contrary, giving full publicity to the acts and opinions of the pro-German element, we have merely exercised the right of free speech in condemning and taking issue with their sentiment and conduct, as we would condemn and take issue with any element which favored alien interests to American interests.

In the final analysis of the situation the Post-Dispatch is charged with being American and with standing for America against all other nations. We plead guilty to the charge.

IMPROVING THE IMMIGRATION BILL.

Because of features against which the Japanese Ambassador made specific protests, certain changes will be made in the pending immigration bill. Influences from that direction having been successful in forcing amendments after other powerful influences had failed, why not employ them to bring about even greater improvements in the measure?

Would it be possible to persuade the Japanese Ambassador to protest against the unwise and un-American literacy test feature?

MODERN WAR ARMOR.

"Modern warfare," says M. B. Roussy, Director of the Paris Medical Bureau, "requires new adjustments. The felt caps which our soldiers wore in the beginning of the war have all disappeared, and have been replaced by metal caps. Forty per cent of the head wounds which are now received by our soldiers are trivial, 37 per cent of them being cured without leaving as much as a scratch; and it may safely be stated that we have 90 per cent less fatalities from cranial hurts than we have had with the felt caps."

The director states that by far the greatest number of injuries to the men are due to lacerations of the face and head, owing to the fact that the modern soldier rarely exposes to view more than his head; and from the fact that so much shrapnel is exploded over the men's heads in the trenches. He gives statistics showing that over 80 per cent of the "fallen" recuperate, and nearly all return to the lines. He asserts that 200,000 men could have been saved in the early days had the men worn their present armor equipment.

He suggests that additional armor be borne by the soldiers, to prevent the next greatest source of casualties—those due to abdominal injuries from explosions, etc. To that purpose he wants the soldiers to wear metal plates suspended around the necks and covering the chest and abdomen.

DESERTERS ON THE PENSION ROLL.

That Congressman James who declines to compromise his hostility to "pork" even to give his home town of Houghton a public building or indiscriminate pensions for service in the Spanish War, of which he himself is a survivor, has introduced a new bill. Its most important feature is as follows:

> Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That from and after the passage of this act no officer or enlisted man who once deserted from an enlistment in the United States army, navy or marine corps, and who was apprehended and by courtmartial was dishonorably discharged from said service, shall be entitled to receive a pension under any law; and is further provided that neither his widow, minor children or any other dependent relative shall be entitled to receive a pension under any law.

When a "pork" Congressman gets a deserter pensioned, the invariable explanation is that the charge was "only technical." The soldier after a "brilliant" record was marked a deserter only because he went home after all the fighting was over without awaiting the red tape prescribed in obtaining a formal discharge. Or he quit because he thought as a free-born American he had a right to quit and did not appreciate the seriousness of the offense.

These deserters, thousands of whom have been unworthily pensioned under private bills, would unfortunately be little affected by the James measure. It applies to men whose offense was a subject of formal proceedings, who were found guilty after disclosure of all the facts and opportunity for defense and who were dishonorably discharged.

Why should not the bill pass and these men made ineligible? If it is too late to make the pension roll a roll of honor in the minds of the people, it might be purged of men whose names are a reproach wherever their crime is known. Who will oppose the measure?

CRESCENT'S VICTORY ON THE TIGRIS.

Rebellion in Ireland, the sinking of the battleship Russell, a renewal of Zeppelin attacks, naval raids on the English coast and the surrender of Gen. Townshend's beleagured command on the Tigris River mark what must be the most depressing week for the British since the week of Charleroi.

The allies have previously had failures, many of them, on both sea and land. Gallipoli was a failure, but the survivors of the movement were successfully withdrawn. The surrender at Kut-El-Amara is the most complete and ignominious failure of all plans formed for an important expedition that the allies have encountered since the beginning of the war.

The original expedition was undertaken with an insufficient force and badly mismanaged. The relieving expedition seems as badly mismanaged. It was caught in the spring floods of the Tigris and may have been left in an extremely perilous position by the capture of the force above.

With nearly six months to send help, the British have permitted the Turks, beaten everywhere else in Asia, to win the most important moral victory for the crescent achieved in recent times. Probably it will not be long before its effects are felt in India.

A TYPICAL INCIDENT OF THE TIMES.

A number of good people will clamor for the suppression of picture shows on account of this sad incident:

> SEATTLE, Wash., April 25.—Joseph Burke, a 12-year-old boy, has confessed to the police that he shot Frank Bealer, 58, a mill worker, who is dead from a pistol wound. "I did it the way they do it in the shows," the boy told the police.

Philosophers, seeking the causes beneath the films, will find that the heroics of small boys are fundamental human nature, common to all ages of manhood, and deadly firearms the whole world's favorite plaything. "The way they do it in the shows" is the way everybody's doing it on three or four continents. There is very little talk of anything else, and the wonder is that more small boys do not run amuck, even in this blissful realm of peace where powder mills explode every day and munition contracts are many a healthy man's ambition. No particular animus is required to shoot nowadays. People shoot just to be shooting, with the weapons everywhere at hand. It will be easier to lecture small boys later on, we hope, after certain millenial achievements including the restoration of universal sanity and good humor.

VINDICATE ST. LOUIS.

From Friday's Post-Dispatch.

The impression throughout the country that St. Louis is the center of anti-American sentiment, on account of our large percentage of citizens of German origin, is strengthened by the 14,000 pro-German telegrams sent from this city asking Congressmen to advocate and support peace in opposition to President Wilson's policy.

Let us clearly understand the purport and significance of the telegrams sent from St. Louis and elsewhere insisting upon peace. The peace the signers urged Congress to support was unqualified. It was peace at any price; at any sacrifice of American sovereignty, honor and interest; at any sacrifice of American lives and property. The telegrams demanded, in effect, the nullification of the President's ultimatum to Germany and the repudiation of his foreign policy.

Compliance with the demand would mean the setting aside of the President as the Chief Executive and spokesman of the nation in foreign affairs, the reversal of the Government's course and the unspeakable humiliation of the country. The telegrams were admittedly sent at the instigation of a pro-German organization as a part of a pro-German propaganda in behalf of German against American interests.

We believe that a very small—an almost negligible—percentage of the citizens of St. Louis indorse the sentiment of these telegrams. We believe that an overwhelming majority of citizens of all origins repudiate their demand.

The sentiment of these telegrams should be condemned by St. Louisans, for two reasons:

In the interest of the country Congressmen should be informed of the true sentiment of St. Louis concerning the maintenance of international law and American rights on the sea.

In the interest of the community the country should be informed that St. Louis is the center of Americanism, not of anti-Americanism. We should vindicate the repute of St. Louis in the mind of the nation.

To this end the Post-Dispatch suggests that St. Louisans wire or write their Congressmen to support the nation's honor and right, and the President's course in dealing with Germany. For the convenience of our readers who wish to correct the false impression of the German telegrams, we offer, merely as a suggestion, the following letter, addressed to the Missouri delegation in Congress through Speaker Clark:

HON. CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

As a citizen of St. Louis, I condemn the sentiment expressed in 14,000 pro-German telegrams sent to Senators and Representatives in Congress from Missouri, demanding, in effect, that they repudiate the President's policy and support peace at any price.

I favor peace, if consistent with the sovereignty, honor and interest of the United States, but I urge Missouri Senators and Representatives to support the President unqualifiedly in his efforts to maintain American right, international law and the interests of humanity against aggression by any foreign nation.

Please communicate the contents of this letter to other Missouri members of Congress.

Yours truly,

Citizens who do not care to write individual letters can clip, sign and send this letter to Speaker Clark at a cost of 2 cents.

Voice your protest against the Germanization of America.

THE NEW SONG OF SEVEN

I.

IN Roosevelt and his four sons—
And his two sons-in-law as well—
My faith exceeds my faith in guns
Or any sort of patent shell.
Those seven strong shall give them hell
That dare trespass upon our rights,
Nor aught impends to ring the knell
Of that in which our land delights.

Add one, two, four
And get the sum
Of what our strength
Has now become.

II.

THE valor found in human breasts
Is all with which we are prepared,
But when the case of freedom rests
Itself with these, I'm not despaired.
What else is there to be compared
With this courageous little troop,
Which waits for whatsoever dared
Upon the Colonel's warning whoop?

Let father lead,
Then four and two,
And all our cares
Go up the flue.

III.

IT may be nothing can withstand
The march of war the world around.
And after Europe this fair land
Shall in its own fell term be downed.
We know not whither we are bound,
Or by what fate may be accursed,
But these, we fancy, will be found
In that pass to have perished first.

One, four and two,
At last put out,
With countless foemen
Piled about.

"Pa, what is a casus belli?"

"It is a cause in which the bell of the typewriter is rung a good deal."

Instead of grieving that we have the Follies, the Drama League should be glad there were none when Shakspeare got his start.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

READER.—Passenger coaches, Union Station, stand north and south—ends of cars are alike.

X.—We have not the details of the German soldiers' substitute for socks. It is of muslin and wrapped around, so as to be more comfortable than socks.

CHRIS.—Cold water thrown over a dog will generally remove the present attack of a fit. Distemper, confinement, costiveness or worms may cause fits. Sometimes an active emetic will stop them.

HOPEFUL.—To develop calves, walk, run, swim or massage, for many months. Eat starchy foods. Try standing erect, then dropping slowly down until one sits on one's heels, then rise slowly, without holding anything for support.

HEARTS.—Cocoa fudge: Into agate saucepan put 3 cups fine granulated sugar, 1 cup milk, piece of butter size of egg, 2 heaping teaspoons cocoa. Stir, and as soon as it starts to boil time it and let boil 10 minutes. It will then start to sugar on sides of saucepan. Remove from fire and add 1 teaspoon vanilla extract. Stir quickly and pour into well-buttered biscuit tin.

A. R. T.—When given to either cold or warm blooded animals in repeated doses of sufficient amount, potassium bromide produces a condition of universal depression, with failure of the circulation, progressively increasing paralysis, lowering of temperature, and finally death from asphyxia or exhaustion. In man the remedy causes similar results—the series of phenomena being known as bromism. * * * It is especially valuable in epilepsy, in which disease, however, it is necessary to maintain its decided action for years. * * * It may be given, dissolved in water, in doses of from 20 grains to a dram 3 times a day. In some cases much larger amounts are required. In severe strychnine poisoning a half ounce, properly diluted, may be exhibited at once, and in tetanus there is little use in giving less than the same amount in the 24 hours. Dose 10 to 20 grains.—U. S. Dispensatory.

ANNIE.—I have no doubt whatever that quinine is to be credited with the cure of neuralgia. Quinine is a shock to the nervous system. Shock of any kind is an excellent remedy for neuralgia. A large dose of quinine will cure periodical neuralgia, especially where it is located in some part of the head. I have prescribed it repeatedly, and regard it as an excellent remedy. I have never said anything to the contrary that I am aware of. But I do not regard the quinine as having any specific curative property. It is simply the shock that it produces to the nervous system. To illustrate, a man subject to periodical neuralgia came to me for treatment. It was an excruciating pain occurring at a certain time each day, located over the left eye. He had been in the habit of having a doctor give him a hypodermic injection of morphia, under the skin, at the exact spot where the pain was located. He wanted me to give him an injection as the other doctor did. Instead, however, of giving him any morphine, I gave him a hypodermic injection of hot water at the same spot. It promptly relieved his neuralgia, and he supposed that I had given him morphine. He came to me several times afterwards, and the hypodermic injection of hot water always relieved him. The hot water operated as a shock to the nervous system, exactly as the solution of morphine did. I have known periodical neuralgia to be stopped immediately by a great fright. Sometimes grief will stop it. I have no objection, however, to quinine being used in such a way as this. It is the habit of taking quinine constantly, for every little ailment, that I object to. Especially, taking quinine for colds is a very pernicious habit. The system soon becomes accustomed to the quinine, and there are a great many quinine dope fiends in this country. Quinine is a useful remedy. In periodical ailments, such as fever and ague, neuralgia and in some cases of sciatica.—Dr. Elmer Lee.

Maximilian Harden's Advice to Germany

SPEAKING FOR WILSON.

Maximilian Harden in his paper, Die Zukunft, puts in the mouth of President Wilson the following imaginary speech:

> I demand that Germany shall, without reserve, protect the life and property of American citizens. She can protect them, for no longer may the question of the future of two great peoples—whether they shall live in friendship or in enmity—depend on the whim or the nerve of a young submarine commander who wishes to serve his fatherland, to carve his name on German oak, and who only listens to his conscience when it says, "Down with everything I catch." The leaders of the empire's business know what the results of a breach would be. Our whole hemisphere, north and south, would be made enemies of Germany. And not only for war time. Germany would lose all her ships lying in American harbors and would have to reckon considerable increase of enemy's tonnage. From the day of the breach she would have to provision Belgium itself. Holland and Scandinavia could scarcely hope any more for supplies by sea, for Germany would need them herself, and would be able to give nothing more to strangers. Whether at such a high price loss of power to England through lack of food and shipping could be bought, Germany alone must decide. That the end of the war would then disappear into an unforseeable distance is certain, and not less so because from that moment we should have a united front in America. The Germans, Irish and Austro-Hungarians of our land would forget at once everything but that they were then one under the Stars and Stripes.

PROBABLY INSPIRED.

Indianapolis News: Here is a good deal more than one German voice. For the Government would never have permitted the publication of the statement [illegible] had not desired that the people should be informed of the gravity of the crisis that confronted them. It is not necessary to assume that the sentiment of the Government is reflected in Herr Harden's words. But there can be no doubt that the words were not offensive to the Government, and that it was thought they might serve a useful purpose.

A REPUTABLE CHAMPION.

Philadelphia Ledger: Maxmillian Harden has led so many lost causes in Germany that one wonders what Mr. Wilson's emotions were when he heard that Harden was for him. For hard-hitting, truth-telling honesty no man in Germany has a higher repute than Harden, so that it is a double pleasure to find him on the side of the right and uninterrupted in his expression of opinion. Like Bernard Shaw, Harden is often perverse, but like Shaw he is frequently right, and he has such a passion for a free Germany as to make him a menace to the German Government.

APPEALS TO PHILIP SOBER.

New York World: Maxmilian Harden has rendered a great service to the United States and Germany by his frank and unprejudiced presentation of the American case. A daring thing for a German journalist to do, Mr. Harden's "If I Were Wilson" expresses what is in the minds and hearts of most Americans in this prolonged diplomatic controversy with Germany. What is equally important, he gives voice to the Germany that once was, to the Germany that knew justice and humanity better than frightfulness. Mr. Harden has appealed from Philip drunk to Philip sober, and such an appeal cannot be wholly in vain.

A PEACE ADVOCATE.

Chicago Journal: Harden sees clearly that the German sumarine campaign is contrary to neutral rights and international law. He sees that by a break with the United States, Germany will make an enemy of the last of the major Powers, and the hearts and market places of the whole world will be closed against her. He has the wit to know that no possible achievements by the undersea corsairs are worth such a price. He tells these truths, unpalatable though they be to the military clique in control of Germany, with a frankness that would be noteworthy in any country, and is astounding in the land of lese majesty.

If the hyphenated editors of the German-language press in America must follow a foreign model, let them emulate Maximilian Harden, and address their appeals for peace to the military caste of Germany.

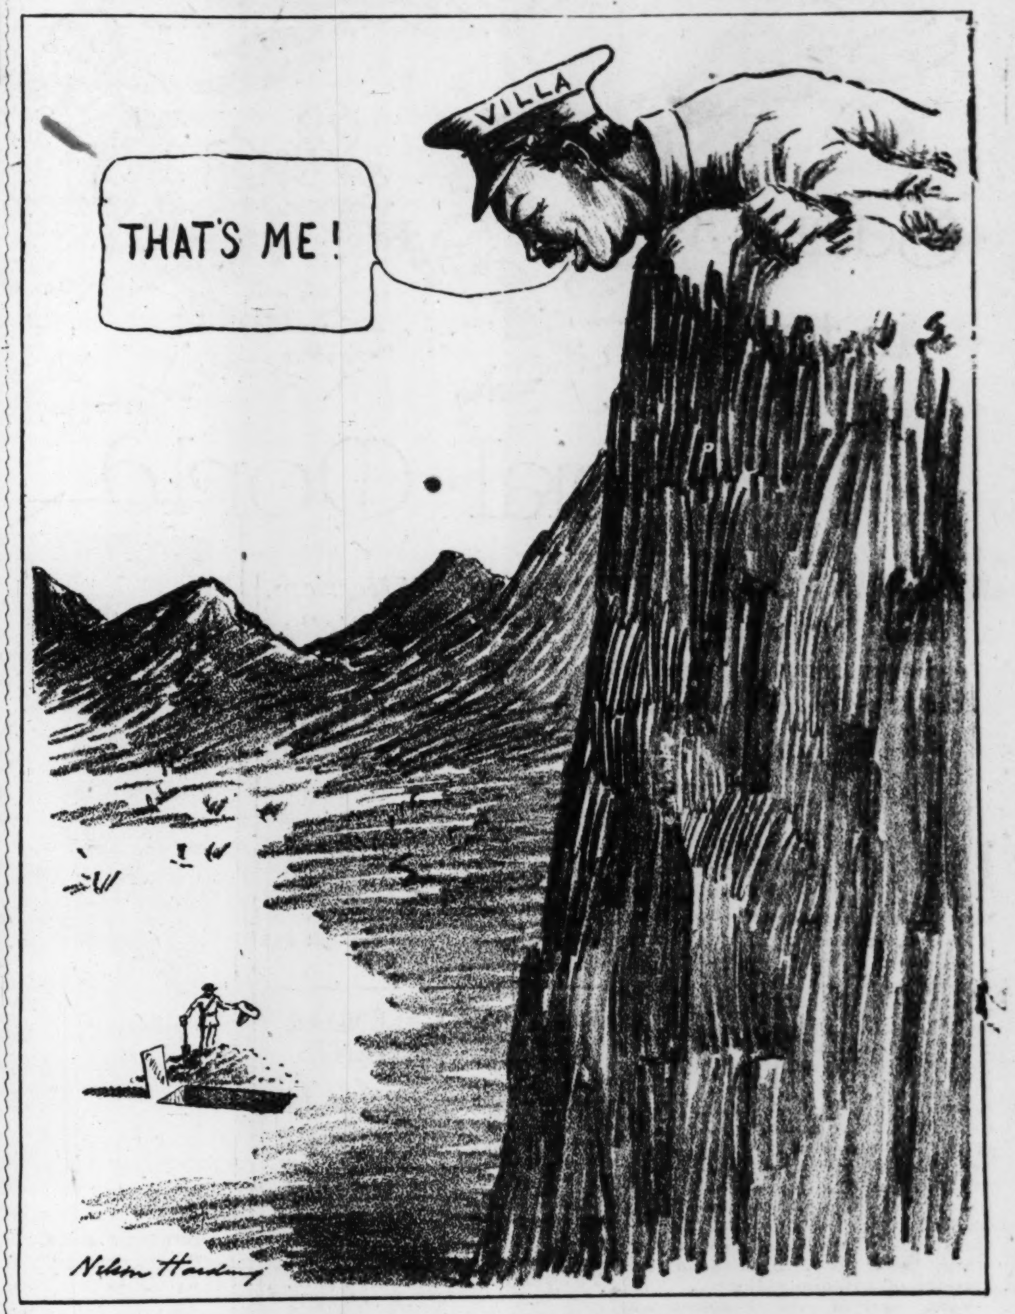
REPRESENTS SENSIBLE GERMANS.

New York Journal of Commerce: The peculiar significance of this lies in the demonstration that there are Germans, holding positions of influence in Germany, who are capable of viewing events and national conduct, even in a time of excitement, from more than one side. They may represent a large mass, there is no means of judging at this distance how large, who can see straight and judge fairly, if the light of wide information and free discussion is let in upon them. It looks as though the clouds that have been conjured over them these many years, the distorting mists through which they have been compelled to look, might be dispelled as the result of the mighty conflict with which their atmosphere has been filled all these months. The iron grasp may yet be loosened and Government in Germany may become human instead of brutal, to the relief of nations on both sides of the globe.

A VALUABLE WARNING.

Philadelphia Press: It may be assumed that the German Government will decide the submarine question from the point of view of utility, and that alone. All that President Wilson has said about the sacred rights of neutrals and noncombatants and the high principles of humanity may be expected to count but little with the Kaiser and his counselors, whose policies have been consistently impervious to such considerations. What Germany will consider is whether she can lose more by a breach with this country than she can gain by continued submarine war against allied commerce. Therefore, the passing of Harden's tactful and conciliatory editorial uncensored by the German Government must have its significance.

In the interest of both countries it is to be hoped that Harden's warning will be heeded. Nothing could promote the prospect of continued friendship between Germany and America better than the realization on the part of the Kaiser's Government that a breach with this country is too high a price to pay for freedom to carry out the policy of undersea "terribleness" and that even at this stage of the negotiations "to give way would be reckoned on neither side as weakness."



POSITIVELY IDENTIFIED.

Sir Roger Casement's Attempted Invasion

CANNOT EXPECT SYMPATHY.

Indianapolis Star: It will be difficult to work up much sympathy for Sir Roger Casement in whatever fate overtakes him, and doubtless he will not expect it. He has spent years in the service of Great Britain, acting as Consul at many important posts. He has been knighted and accepted a pension at the hands of his country.

When war broke out he became active in the support of its enemies. He was in the United States trying to stir up sentiment and went from here to Germany, where he was in co-operation with those who are fighting his own country. He was caught while in the act of assisting an enemy ship to land revolutionary supplies in his native land.

Even those who sympathize with him realize that he can hope for nothing except such as civilized nations accord to traitors. His fate, of course, is not important, but it may seriously embarrass those who have been contending for better conditions in Ireland. It does not seem likely that the disorders he has precipitated will get beyond control or will accomplish anything except to bring woe upon the heads of those who are to blame.

AN IRISH DON QUIXOTE.

Philadelphia Press: Before the war Sir Roger Casement was known to be a stanch admirer of Germans and Germany. He was at the same time an Ulster Protestant and a prominent Irish Nationalist partisan. His political views, however, did not prevent him from serving long and honorably as a British Consul in tropical countries, for which service he was knighted and pensioned. The outbreak of the war found him in America, preaching the Irish cause. He was next heard from in Germany where, to the astonishment of the British authorities, he became the author of violent diatribes against England and tried unsuccessfully to raise an army for the invasion of Ireland among the Irish prisoners taken in the battle of Mons. Despite his failure there, the German Government had enough confidence in him to supply him with a ship loaded with arms and with funds to foment an Irish uprising. That ship was sunk when Sir Roger was captured.

A PROBLEM FOR ENGLAND.

Washington Herald: The capture of Sir Roger Casement red handed in an attempt to land German arms in Ireland presents a serious problem to England. His crime merits death, and a majority of Irishmen would doubtless uphold the infliction of the penalty. Nevertheless such an execution would cause a commotion in Ireland with a possibility of results that British statesmen cannot at present ignore. Discretion may dictate that it is wiser to forego the setting of a stern example than to invite a serious and troublesome situation. Sir Roger, safe in prison, can do no harm; dead in the Tower he might prove formidable. It is not likely that his fate will be determined in haste.

A QUESTIONABLE PATRIOT.

New York Tribune: His intimates, indeed, know him as a disloyal subject of some years' standing, yet he was no rebel of the heroic brand; but rather a common and somewhat ridiculous traitor. For at least 20 years he was a servant of the British Government, a singularly able and efficient servant, too, nor was he too proud to accept English gold and English honors. It is only 10 years since he became a C. M. G.; a year but one before the war he even suffered knighthood with a good grace, and almost to the last he continued in the pay of the Government.

His friends have tried to excuse him on the score of insanity, but there is little reason to believe that he was more than rash and foolhardy. He was quite out of touch with his own countrymen, and his fantastic effort to recruit an Irish brigade from the prisoners in Germany was a sorry failure. It was a daring enterprise to attempt to land arms in Ireland, but doubtless he was forced to some desperate course, for Casement was one of those who had most grievously misled the Germans as to the state of affairs in that island.

Other traitors have been dealt with leniently by the British Government, but even if Sir Roger suffers the full penalty he will hardly be remembered as a hero or martyr.

THE HUMOR OF IT.

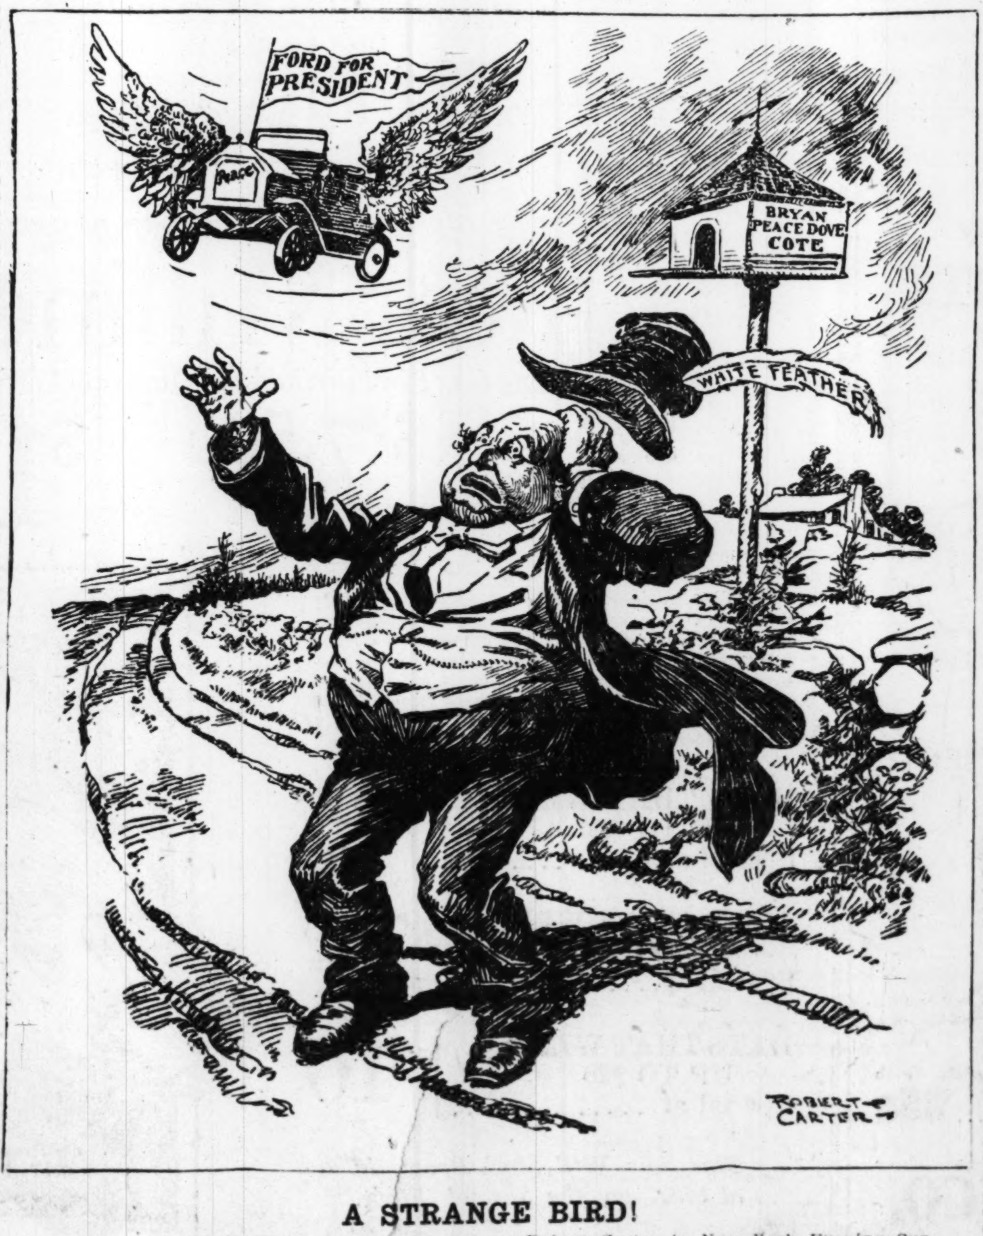
New York World: Germany may still have in mind a grand sea and air descent upon England direct across the North Sea, but its long-talked-of descent by way of Ireland under the puissant leadership of the renegade Sir Roger Casement has come and gone and will pass into history as probably the most laughable fiasco of the great war. Even Germany must have enough sense of the humorous left to extract a melancholy grin or two out of such an issue to its petted notion before and since the war began of an Ireland rising as one man at the first opportunity.

MAY PARDON HIM.

Philadelphia Inquirer: The same government which magnanimously and also wisely forgave De Wet may be expected to treat Casement with a like clemency and instead of inflicting upon him the punishment to which he is liable, to content itself with his lifelong incarceration. That will meet the claims of justice and Irish susceptibilities will at the same time be spared.

GERMAN BACKERS IGNORANT.

Philadelphia Ledger: Were it not for the Dublin issue the Casement affair by itself would be viewed from a far different angle, since there are many who were once friends and admirers of the brilliant knight who have viewed him for some time as mentally unbalanced, a somewhat sad and pathetic wreck of a once noble character. As Mr. Redmond said of him, the fact that the Germans took Casement as the typical Irishman and as a "National leader" was proof positive how little they knew about the Irish or the Irish situation. For, since he was an Ulsterman, Casement's repudiation of his own country and Government has long been viewed with peculiar abhorrence in Ireland as well as in England, and the fact that he is at last revealed as an actual conspirator at this time can hardly improve the general situation which has now developed in Ireland through the actual outbreak in Dublin.



A STRANGE BIRD!
—Robert Carter in New York Evening Sun.

Landing of Russian Troops in France

"IN FRANCE TO FIGHT."

Philadelphia Telegraph: The growing hope in many quarters that the great war might be nearing its end is not supported by this item of news. The Russian army is in France to fight, not to lay down its arms and return home.

"FORESHADOWS OFFENSIVE."

Providence Journal: Seemingly this new movement, the first of its kind during the war, foreshadows a vigorous offensive in the near future, for the French and British forces now holding this front are evidently sufficient for the purpose of resisting any potential German advance.

"ILL PORTENT FOR GERMANY."

New York Times: It is an ill portent for Germany, since it shows that the advantage of shifting troops from one front to another, which thus far has been rather exclusively her own, is now shared by her enemies.

"RUSSIA'S CONFIDENCE."

New York World: If Russia can move troops for its ally's sake to the Western front it must be from supreme confidence in its own ability to hold Germany and Austria in check from the Baltic to the Balkans and drive home its campaign against the Turks in the Caucasus.

"THE PARIS CONFERENCE."

Bridgeport Post: This is no doubt one of the first evidences of the result of that momentous military conference which was held in Paris some weeks ago. It is sensational in the highest degree.

"THE LAST STRUGGLE."

Pittsburg Dispatch: Reports of the landing of Russian reinforcements at Marseilles and simultaneously of the withdrawal of large bodies of German troops from the Balkan front to strengthen the attacks being made on the French lines look very much as though both sides regarded the last great struggle as at hand.

"THE DEDUCTION."

Springfield Republican: If Russian troops are in any considerable force the common sense deduction is that the French have suffered such heavy losses that they need greater aid than the British are at this time able to give.

SUDDEN AS NAPOLEON.

Kansas City Star. The sudden dropping of this Russian army out of the sky probably has had no parallel as a military surprise since Napoleon made his elaborate feint at England from Boulogne and then with incredible swiftness and secrecy threw his army into Ulm.

WHAT IS ENGLAND DOING?

Detroit Free Press: Taking up what might be termed the domestic aspect of this new development if we consider the quadruple entente a single Power, the coming of the Russians is a reproach to Great Britain, and will tend to deprive her of the prestige for general leadership she may possess in the eyes of the world. While the English have been wrangling over conscription the Russians have been obliged to send to France the reinforcements which it was Great Britain's natural duty to provide in a full measure. What explanation, what defense, can the British Government make that will justify its failure to furnish adequate assistance to the French, and compel them in their extremity to obtain it from a nation thousands of miles distant in line of communication? Where are those millions the British have been raising and training? What are they doing?

The Rise of Silver

Cincinnati Enquirer: Though the increase has been almost insensible in its upward trend, the steady advance in the price of silver bullion is being observed by the watchful eyes of the real leaders of the financial world. In a year it has gone up 10 per cent, and there have been no recessions. The peering eyes are seeking the destination of these bars of white metal, and there exists behind them much anxiety. What is feared is that the allied nations of Europe, now practically bankrupt under the new weight of thirty billions of war debts, being shifted from the creditor to the debtor class, will rehabilitate silver, remonetize it as legal tender for debts and so scale their obligations as to avoid repudiation.

The nation to be watched by the American financiers is England, who is bearing the financial brunt of the great conflict. It has been well said by an authority that while the thought of her desertion of the single standard is unthinkable, the answer is that English standards of honor as a creditor nation may be quite different when her situation in that respect shall be materially changed. What she would lose on this side of the globe she would gain in Indian and in Asiatic countries, where silver is the basis, despite the almost world-wide gold standard. As for our position when the expected mighty shift shall come, there is pessimism. It is predicted that we will once more occupy the place of the cloth between the shears and drink in the experience of selling our silver at a low price and purchasing it again at a tremendous advance in the shape of exchange from across the sea. It is interesting to obtain the view of one of the editors of a journal published in Wall street, where these matters are receiving the closest attention. He says:

"Now, here is the prediction: After the war is over the allies will remonetize silver. They are the buyers now. This alone will create a new value to all the silver on earth, at least five thousand million dollars toward paying their debt. In addition, it will give a new purchasing power to the silver countries of Asia, Africa and South America. Ocean freights will be all in the power of the allies and arranged for their convenience and profit. Trade destroyed by the war will be built up by giving foreign countries a new power to purchase.

"And where will Uncle Sam be? He will, as usual, come in at the tail end of the procession and shape his finances at the dictation of Europe. He will humbly accept his advances on account of the war in silver at $1 an ounce, which he is now selling to these sharp gentlemen at 60 cents.

MAY FLOWERS

Wedding of Miss Corine Nugent to De Witt Merriam, Last Wednesday, Pretty Affair—Bride's Mother Gave Daughter in Marriage—Choral Festival at Odeon Tomorrow—Miss Helen Bonsack to Wed Dutro Plumb Wednesday.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

IT is not often that one sees as much beautiful old lace at one time as was worn at Miss Corinne Nugent's wedding to DeWitt Merriam at Christ Church Cathedral Wednesday evening, and it is not often that two such remarkably handsome women as Mrs. Charles W. Nugent and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Nannie Wright, are seen to such advantage. Both are tall and stately.

WEEKLY CALENDAR OF SOCIAL EVENTS

MONDAY — Choral Festival, Apollo and Morning Choral Clubs, Odeon, 8:30 p. m.

WEDNESDAY—Wedding of Miss Helen Bonsack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Bonsack, to Dutro Plumb of New York, formerly of Detroit, Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, 5 p. m.

THURSDAY—Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Ehrlich, reception at Columbian Club in honor of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothea Gans, to Louis G. Rothschild, 8:30 to 11:30 p. m.

Mrs. Wright arrived a few minutes before the bridal party and created quite a stir. Her gown was of French blue silk almost covered with point lace. The skirt was made of a point shawl, but the hand of an artist did it. The bodice was of lace and tulle, with a bit of the blue somewhere about it, and around her neck were two strings of pearls, perfectly beautiful ones, and she wore a collar of diamonds mounted on a black velvet ribbon around her throat. Her hair, which is perfectly white, was worn high with an aigrette of paradise plumes.

Then arrived the bridegroom's parents, Judge and Mrs. Seward Merriam of Detroit. Mrs. Merriam wore a gown of white silk, brocaded in big splashy figures of gold. It was made according to the latest mode, with a full skirt and pointed train.

Mrs. Nugent was told when the plans were being made for the wedding that if she walked up the aisle with her daughter it would spoil the wedding; that two women walking together would appear awkward. But it seems that Mrs. Nugent wanted to give her daughter in marriage and so didn't care so very much about the rest of it.

Well, there never was a more impressive moment than when mother and daughter walked up the aisle. Everybody has been talking about it since.

The choristers went to the door to meet the bridal procession, singing the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, and led the way to the altar. The ushers, Messrs. Claude Mulkey, Garrie Stroh, Grierson Smith, all of Detroit, and Wright Nugent, the bride's brother, followed.

Then the bridemaids, Miss Prudence Zeibig, walking alone, and then Misses Theotiste Nugent and Clemence Garneau, then Miss Erma Gibson of Youngstown, O., and Miss Louise Nugent, another sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

The bride and her mother were last. The bride wore a gown of ivory satin that was ivory with age. Her aunt, Mrs. Wright, gave it to her and was evidently the bridal gown of some member of her family. The skirt was almost circular with two rolls of satin knotted at intervals all around. The train was wide and was pleated in organ pleats between the shoulder and fell, widening all the way, being rounded at the end.

Her veil was of point de Venice. It was arranged into a cap in front and reached almost to the end of her train. It was the veil which had belonged to Miss Anna Wright, Mrs. Wright's daughter, who married Charles Hazeltine about 20 years ago, and for whom Miss Anna Wright Benoist is named.

Mrs. Nugent's gown was of some kind of brocade very delicate in shade, with her point duchess flounces trimming it in bands that ran obliquely down the front of the bodice and formed the skirt trimming.

The bridemaids wore frocks of white net with narrow pleatings of green ribbon. They carried bunches of purple lilacs and wore hats of white net trimmed with green.

Ralph Merriam, the bridegroom's cousin, was his best man.

The bride made her debut several seasons ago, but seemed to care very little for society. That she was beautiful, but indifferent, was known. The explanation is that she was engaged all the time; that she and Mr. Merriam were sweethearts when she was a schoolgirl and met at Gratiot Beach, where both families have summer homes.

It is said the presents were very handsome. Judge and Mrs. Merriam's gift is a house which will be built during the summer. After the ceremony there was a reception at the house and a dance afterwards in the ballroom at the top of the house.

Sally Meagher Millinery Co. announce for this week a one-half reduction sale on all hats except white hats. 801 Century Building.

THE marriage of Miss Emma Webster Powell to the Rev. A. H. W. Anderson which took place yesterday was none the less important socially because being so quiet. The ceremony was at 8 o'clock in the morning, at Christ Church Cathedral, where the bridegroom had been canon a few years ago.

The service was in accordance with High Church ceremonial. The Rev. J. Boyd Cox, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, the Very Rev. Carroll M. Davis, dean of the Cathedral, and the Right Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, Bishop of the Diocese of Missouri, officiated.

The bride entered the church alone and went to the altar preceded by the two ushers, Messrs. William S. Mitchell and Robert M. Burton. She was attired in an exquisite gown of pale gray Georgette crepe with trimming of satin of the same shade. She wore a hat to match and carried an ivory prayer book with a spray of lilies of the valley to mark the place of the marriage service.

The bridegroom and his best man, the Rev. Mr. Cole of Chicago, met her at the chancel.

About 100 relatives and friends were present. Afterward, the wedding party and the immediate family went to the home of Mrs. Edwin T. Howard, the bride's sister, for breakfast.

Plans had been made for a brilliant church wedding, with an elaborate service, but on account of the death of the bride's nephew, Richard J. Howard, in France, all the arrangements were made as simple as could be. The invitations were verbal and just the closest friends of the family were bidden.

Mrs. Howard, who is in deepest mourning, did not go to the church, but the bridal party went to her home at 439 Westgate avenue. Young Howard, who was in the famous "Black Watch" Regiment of Scottish Infantry, was killed with a brother officer trying to save some of their men who had been wounded. The two young officers went out beyond the line under fire to bring them in and were killed by a shell.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John C. Powell and the sister of Mrs. Peyton H. Skipwith Jr. and of Mrs. Edwin T. Howard.

She has been the governor-general of the State of the Society of the Order of Americans of Armorial Ancestry and is a member of a number of other patriotic societies which denote distinguished forbears.

As her home will be in Chicago, where the bridegroom is rector of All Saints' Episcopal Church at Ravenswood, Mrs. William Bagnell will succeed her as State general of the armorial society.

The wedding was the culmination of a romance of long standing. It is said the bride had consecreated herself to the care of her mother, who was more or less of an invalid, and it was only after her death about a year ago that her consent was won.

Among the guests at the wedding were the bride's niece and namesake, Mrs. John Guthrie Hopkins Jr., who was Miss Emma Webster Skipwith, and Mr. Hopkins of Tivington, Va.

Miss Florence McTague's engagement to Arthur F. Lubke was announced Wednesday at a large luncheon given at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. McTague, of 5290 Westminster place.

Miss McTague and her sister, now Mrs. Charles R. Ploeser of Los Angeles, made their debut the same winter and were great favorites. They graduated from the Sacred Heart Convent, and, afterward traveled abroad.

Mr. Lubke is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lubke of Parkview.

The engagement of Miss Jessie Stocker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Stocker of 3127 Eads avenue, to Walter A. Weisert was announced Friday afternoon at a bridge and 500 party given by Mrs. Stocker in honor of Miss Gladys Roberts of Columbia, Mo., who is visiting the bride-elect. The marriage will be in the fall.

are engaged instead of making a formal announcement.

Miss Dooley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Dooley of 6314 Waterman avenue. She is a Visitation Convent girl and made her debut about three seasons ago. Mr. Rutter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rutter of 4488 West Pine boulevard. The wedding will be in October.

THE engagement of Miss Gertrude E. Kasper, daughter of Mrs. John W. Kasper, 5328 Aubert avenue, to George T. Bohn, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bohn of 5037 Maple avenue, was announced yesterday afternoon at a bridge luncheon at the home of her sister, Mrs. John Wesly Bohn of 4317 Maryland avenue. The home was decorated with jonquils and the general color scheme was yelllow and green.

Those present were: Misses Ruth O'Brien, Helen Humphrey, Ruth Zacher, Margaret Winter, Edith Roe, Ruth Clemens, Marie Able, Jean Schum, Marian Thacher, Emma Walter, Faye Salisbury, Mildred Yule, Grace Clabaugh, Jean Farmer, Helen O'Brien, Mildred Robinson, Matile Veltes, Della Lasar, Mrs. Ralph Bohn, Mrs. John R. Vaughn, Mrs. Tom Armstead, Mrs. Jack Dorn and Mrs. S. Mills.

Miss Kasper was educated at the Soldan High School. The wedding will be in the fall.

Mrs. Arthur W. Lambert of 6470 Forsythe boulevard is spending a short time at Okawville, Ill., and is expected to return the last of the week.

Miss Louise King of 6363 Waterman avenue left last week for New Orleans and Bay St. Louis, where she will be the guest of friends for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Kleekamp of 3512 Humphrey street will depart Tuesday for California on an eight weeks' tour.

Mrs. James Hope-Nelson, who was in Dublin, Ireland, for more than a year when her husband was stationed at Dublin Barracks, is now in London, where she has taken a furnished house with her sister-in-law, whose husband is in France. Mr. Hope-Nelson is in an Irish regiment which went to the front in February. Mrs. Hope-Nelson was formerly Miss Isabel Valle of St. Louis.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES DEMAREST of the Park Slope section, Brooklyn, N. Y., announced at a bridge luncheon yesterday the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Demarest to James Chester Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Brooks Johnson of 5855 Cates avenue, St. Louis. The wedding will be in June.

Mr. Johnson is a graduate of Harvard and New York University and is in the legal department of the John Wanamaker company.

The marriage of Miss Clara Crotty to William R. McDonough of Cleveland, O., took place yesterday morning at 7 o'clock at the New Cathedral. The ceremony was in the small chapel to the left of the altar and only the family was present.

The Rev. Father Francis J. O'Connor celebrated the nuptial mass and performed the ceremony. The bride's cousin, Miss Eileen McBride, who returned Friday from California, was maid of honor and John Kearney was best man.

The bride is the niece of Mrs. William C. McBride and has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. McBride since the death of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Crotty, when she was a little girl.

The bridegroom is in the steel business and was in Granite City until about a year ago. He and his bride will make their home in Cleveland.

MR. ANR MRS. M. J. EHRLICH of the Washington Hotel, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothea Gans, to Louis G. Rothchild.

The bride-elect is one of the belles in the Columbian Club set and very attractive. Mr. and Mrs. Ehrlich will receive Thursday evening from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock at the Cilumbian Club in honor of the occasion.

Miss Theodosia Barnett's engagement to Paul Stark of Louisiana, Mo., was formally announced Tuesday evening.

The wedding will be in the autumn when the home which Mr. Stark is building in Louisiana for his bride will be completed. Miss Barnett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Barnett of 5315 Delmar boulevard, and a most charming girl. She came out a year ago.

The announcement was made at a dinner given by Mrs. Barnett. There were 22 seated at the large oval table which had a heartshaped decoration made of sweet peas, snapdragons and maidenhair ferns at either end.

Mr. Stark is the son of the late Clarence Stark and is a graduate of Cornell in class of 1912.

AMONG the unusually large number of interesting engagements announced within the week was that of Miss Marie Hardenbrook, niece of Mrs. James van Sweringen Barrett of 4620 West Pine boulevard, to George Byron Ford Jr., formerly of New York, now of Ontario, Cal.

Miss Hardenbrook is the daughter of Mitchell Hardenbrook of New York, and her mother, who was Miss Annie Melton, was the sister of Mrs. Barret, who was the beautiful Harper Melton.

Miss Hardenbrook came here winter before last to make her debut under her aunt's chaperonage and was very much admired. She returned again this year for the last of the season.

The marriage will be June 1. Mr. Ford will take his bride to Ontario, near Pasadena, where he has orange groves.

A betrothal of much interest also made known last week is Miss Jane McNair's to Andrew Jackson Lindsay. Both belong to old St. Louis families with large connections. Miss McNair is the elder daughter of Lilburn G. McNair. Her mother, who was Miss

STAR FOR EVERY DRESSING ROOM AT FRIARS' FROLIC

Olympic Evolves New Labeling Scheme to Prevent Rivalry Among the Performers.

Nickel stars, denoting the star's dressing room, will be on the door of every dressing room in the Olympic Theater June 3, when two performances of the Friars' Frolic are to be given there. This arrangement has been made, according to advance announcements, because of the recognized stellar standing of the performers.

These include George M. Cohan, Louis Mann, Frank Tinney, Fred Niblo, Andrew Mack, Nat Wills, Bernard Granville, Max Figman, Lew Dockstader, George Primrose, James J. Corbett, Charles J. Ross, Hap Ward, George Sidney, Will Rogers, Julius Tannen, Gus Edwards, Albert Spalding, Bert Levy, Paul Nicholson and Loney Haskell.

Fred Block, business manager, has evolved the scheme for preventing any rivalry as to the tenancy of the star's dressing room.

More Pension for Medal Holders.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—President Wilson has signed a bill granting $10 a month additional pension to soldiers and sailors holding congressional medals of honor for heroism in action. The pension office gave notice today that applications for the pensions must be sent directly to the War Department by soldiers and to the Navy Department by sailors.

Mr. Went-And-Cut It —Here's Mr. 'Gets-It'

The New Plan Corn Cure That's as Sure as the Rising Sun.

"Glad to meat you!" says the razor to the corn. "I'll bleed for you!" says the corn to the razor. Razors and corns love each other. Corns love to be cut, picked, gouged, salved, plastered and jerked out—they grow faster. Mr. and Mrs. Went-and-Cut-It realize it now—they use "Gets-It" instead—it's the wonderful, simple corn cure that never fails. Stops pain. You apply it in 2 seconds, it dries at once, the corn is doomed. Nothing to stick to the stocking or press on the corn. It means good-night to plasters, salves, diggers, razors and toe-bundling. You can wear smaller shoes. Your corns will come right off, "clean as a whistle." Never inflames healthy flesh. The world's biggest selling corn cure.

"Why, O Why, Did I Do It? 'Gets-It' for Me After This—If I Live!"

"Gets-It" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

BEER MADE AT HOME

New Discovery Benefits Thousands.

By a new method of concentration a well-known brewer of Cincinnati has discovered a process whereby real lager beer is now furnished in concentrated form in small packages.

The process of reducing milk and other liquids to a powder by evaporation has been known for years, but this is the first time that beer has ever been successfully offered to the public in this highly concentrated form. And now anyone may have, in his own home, anytime, anywhere, a lager beer. This new discovery contains all the ingredients necessary, having the same foam and sparkle as the Best Brewery Beer. Just add water and a little sugar and you have a beer that is really better tasting, more healthful, and superior in many ways to the usual brewery lager.

This new discovery is already being used and welcomed by thousands of families in wet as well as dry territory, because of the excellence of the brew, and because it can be shipped anywhere by Parcel Post right to your door-step. The cost of this lager beer has been reduced so low that it is now considerably less than a penny a glass. Write today, or send this coupon to Mr. A. S. Shuh, at 4125 Third Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, for an interesting account of his discovery and his free trial offer.

RINGLING BROS.' "BIG TOP" OPEN TO PUBLIC TODAY

First Performance of Circus Tuesday Afternoon at Vandeventer and Laclede.

The new, clean tents of Ringling Brothers' Circus, on the grounds at Laclede and Vandeventer avenues, will be open to the public today. The circus is still in Chicago, but as it is showing in the Coliseum Building there, the tents were sent here from the winter quarters at Baraboo, Wis., and have been put up in the last two days. The circus will give its first performance here Tuesday afternoon, and will remain through the week.

The main tent, 580 feet long, is said to be the largest ever put up. Other tents shelter the long lines of heavy drought horses belonging to the show, and part of the ponies. These are the only animals which have come in advance of the performers and the menagerie.

One Horse Weighs 2510 Pounds.

The biggest of the horses, California Frank, weighing 2510 pounds and standing 73 inches high, is likely to receive considerable notice from visitors today. In contrast, there will be baby Shetlands not much larger than Newfoundland dogs.

The commissary department will be under way, for, though the performers are absent, the working men must be fed. The Ringlindgs say they have the "biggest kitchen in the world." Beginning tomorrow evening, it will serve more than 1300 persons three meals a day. When the Ringling Brothers were touring Europe a number of years ago army officers of some nations inspected its commissary methods. Some of the warring nations are using range and steam boiler wagons similar to those which visitors will see at the circus grounds.

The last performance in Chicago will be given tonight, and the performers, menagerie, properties and effects are scheduled to arrive here tomorrow afternoon. Because of the work incident to getting settled under canvas there will be no parade.

Pageant of "Cinderella."

The main tent program will open with the "Cinderella" spectacle, in which more than 1000 performers take part in a pantomime rendition of the fairy tale. A ballet of 300 dancing girls is a feature. In the circus performance proper it is announced that about 400 persons will take part. Some are new to this country, having left European countries because of the war's effect on the show business.

Among the performers who particularly arouse the advance agent's enthusiasm are Antonio Zingaro and his gypsy riders; Lilly Leitzel, styled "the world's smallest and greatest aerialist;" Johannes and his company of Arctic athletes, and a troupe of 30 acrobats from Pekin, China. There will be many trained animal acts of bears, monkeys, dogs, cats and Shetland ponies; three herds of trained elephants, and clowns, of course—60 of them. The seat sale opens tomorrow morning at the Famous & Barr store.

MANY FRENCH GENERALS HAVE LOST SONS IN THE WAR

Three De Castelnaus Have Been Killed, and Gen. de Amada Has Been Bereaved.

PARIS, April 29.—Generals who have exercised commands during the war have had a total of 36 sons and sons-in-law killed in action.

Gen. de Castelnau, as is well known, has lost three sons; Gen. Fauche, a son and a son-in-law; Gen. Baillioud, a son and a son-in-law; Gen. de Maud'huy, a son; Gen. d'Amadee, a son; Gen. Louis, a son; Gen. Corvisart, a son; Gen. de Lestrac, a son; Gen. de Lestapis, a son; Gen. Bonfait, a son; Gen. Dieudonne, a son.

ARMY'S "GOULASH CANNON" ARE INTRODUCED IN BERLIN

Porlavio Field Kitchen Serves Warm, Cheap Meals in the Poorer Sections of City.

BERLIN, April 29.—The portable field kitchens which the soldiers call "goulash cannon" are being introduced into the streets of the poorer sections of Berlin, selling warm dinners to all comers for 35 pfennigs per portion. The Town Council of Lichtenberg, a big suburb to the north of Berlin, was the first to adopt the idea. Many of the working people have no time to cook for themselves, and they can be far more cheaply fed by cooking en masse at central points and distributing the food through the field kitchens.

The idea has become so popular that it is predicted that the "goulash cannon" will long survive the war which popularized it.

"HIGHLANDS" WILL OPEN MAY 7

Forest Park Highlands will open next Sunday, May 7, for its twenty-second amusement season. The vaudeville theater will give a matinee and two night performances on the opening day, and afternoon and evening band concerts will be given in the Pagoda. The dance floor and the swimming pool are expected to be popular features. A new attraction is a captive balloon, held in leash by a 500-foot cable, in which passengers will be carried for a consideration.

"LA MARECHALE" IN EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN HERE

Mrs. Catherine Booth-Clibborn to Hold Meetings Under Auspieces of Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Catherine Booth-Clibborn, noted evangelist, known in Europe and America as "La Marechale" (the Field Marshal), will begin a two-weeks' evangelistic campaign in St. Louis today under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association and the Southwestern Bible Conference Association. She will occupy the pulpit in the Washington and Compton Presbyterian Church, of which the Rev. Harris H. Gregg is pastor, both morning and evening, and tomorrow will address the St. Louis clergy.

Tuesday she will begin a series of morning meetings at the Buckingham Hotel, assisted by her daughter, Miss Victoria Booth-Clibborn, who also is an evangelist, and her son, Theodore, a violinist. Afternoon meetings on most of the days of the next fortnight will be held alternately at the Washington and Compton Church and the Y. W. C. A., and there will be evening meetings each day at the Washington and Compton Church.

Victoria Booth-Clibborn will conduct most of the afternoon meetings and will assist her mother in the work on other occasions. Three addresses to women only, and one to men only will be given May 5, 10, 12 and 14, respectively, at the Washington and Compton Church, at 3:30 p. m. Subjects for the first three are "Marriage," "Motherhood" and "The Training of Children."

"La Marechale" is the eldest daughter of the late Gen. William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army. She gained her military soubriquet while head of that organization in France. She and her husband, Arthur Sidney Clibborn, left the Salvation Army 12 years ago, and since that time she has devoted herself to general church evangelism.

She began evangelistic work when 15 years old, and has preached in churches of all denominations as well as in theaters and public halls in most of the cities of Europe and America.

Her daughter also began preaching when still in her teens. "La Marechale" and her daughter have been in the United States the greater part of two years. They arrived in St. Louis Friday from Chicago, where they have been for a short time resting.

"La Marechale" and her son are stopping with Dr. Mary McLean, 4339 Delmar boulevard, and the daughter is the house guest of Miss Carrie Ferguson, 5287 Westmnister place.

600 BOYS TO BE ADMITTED TO CULVER (IND.) TRAINING CAMP

Enrollment Which Was Limited to Indiana Last Year Will Include Other States This Year.

CULVER, Ind., April 29.—Plans for the second annual military training camp for high school boys at the Culver Military Academy, which will be held May 15 to 29, have been announced. Six hundred boys from the high schools of the Central West States will be admitted this year to the camp, which last year was limited to 200 boys from Indiana.

Applications for admittance to the camp must be signed by the principal of the high school. The applicants must be between the ages of 14 and 21 years, white, a citizen of the United States, not less than 5 feet 3 inches in height, free from physical defects, and of good moral character, whose record in school shows him to be amenable to discipline.

Two hundred of the 600 students will be given scholarships, which have been alloted to a number of towns in Ohio, Illinois and Michigan and to Indiana boys who were members of last year's camp. The charges for the others has been fixed at $17.75 each for the two weeks, $6.50 of this is to pay for the uniform worn in camp and the remainder for subsistence.

PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION ASKS FOR CAST-OFF CLOTHING

Apparel Will Be Called for If It Cannot Be Sent to the Branch Offices.

The St. Louis Provident Association has asked for contributions of cast-off clothing, shoes, overcoats, suits, dresses, underwear and other articles to be distributed to the poor. The appeal says that old iron, bottles and tin cans cannot be used.

Rags, old rubbers and rubber goods of all kind, copper and brass will be received and sold for the benefit of the relief fund. Bundles may be sent to the central office, 2221 Locust street, or to any of the following branches: Ashland branch, 3024 North Newstead avenue; Eremen branch, 811 Mallinckrodt street; Manchester branch, 4240 Gibson avenue; South Branch, 4003 South Broadway. Where it is inconvenient to send the bundles they will be called for if the Provident Association is notified by telephone.

KAISER'S "SALARY" $4,600,000

Emperor Franz-Joseph, His Ally, Gets Even More.

LONDON, April 29.—King George, who has made a gift of $500,000 to the treasury for war purposes, is by no means the richest of European monarchs, for, though he receives close to $2,500,000 a year, three-quarters of that sum has to be set aside for official expenses. The King of Italy receives $3,750,000, the Emperor of Germany $4,600,000 and the Emperor of Austria $5,250,000 from the state, and the two latter, like the Czar of Russia, have enormous private incomes.

Play at St. Leo's Hall.

"Schneiderhahn's Homecoming," a three-act comedy, will be presented by the young people of the Sacred Heart Parish this evening at St. Leo's Hall, Twenty-fifth and Mullanphy streets. Dancing will follow.

WHERE IS LOUIS H. HORCH?

He Is a Carpenter, and His Mother Wants to Hear From Him.

Mrs. Louisa Horch of 424 Park avenue, South Webster Groves, Mo., is trying to find her son, Louis H. Horch, who has been missing since Dec. 1. He had expressed an intention of going to Kentucky. He is 30 years old and is a carpenter. He has a design of the battleship Missouri tatooed on his arm.

Mrs. Horch requests anyone who has knowledge of her son's whereabouts to communicate with her.

War Raises Burial Cost.

RAMSGATE, England, April 29.—Because of the war's effect upon material and labor, burial fees have been raised here.

DRINK WATER TO AVOID SICKNESS SAYS AN AUTHORITY

Glass of hot water before breakfast daily keeps the doctor away.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—ADV.

CONSTIPATION REMEDY AND BLOOD PURIFIER IN SULPHERB TABLETS

(NOT SULPHUR)

Grandmother's Old Fashioned Spring Tonic

Cleans, purifies and strengthens the blood stream, and through the blood gives health to the whole system.

Do you remember long ago that your grandmother or your great-grandmother prepared a mixture of sulphur, molasses and cream of tartar and had you eat it with a spoon.

Ough! Tasted awful, didn't it. But if you ate enough it would surely do the work.

Well, HERE WE HAVE IT. The same old remedy, prepared in an up-to-date, scientific manner, in SULPHERB TABLETS. They overcome constipation, free the bowels and blood of poisonous wastes and put the blood and entire system in tip-top condition.

Men, women and children may take these tablets. They act in natural manner, without pain or unpleasantness, and results are sure. They give immediate benefit and permanent relief from constipation and blood disorders.

Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur) may be purchased at all drug stores. ADV.

Minerva Primm, was one of the best-loved girls and greatest belles St. Louis had for years.

Miss McNair made her bow two years ago and has been immensely popular. Her popularity is with the married set as well as with the beaux and belles. She is the niece of Alex T. Jr., L. J. Clawson and Samuel S. Primm, and the niece also of Mrs. Paul Bakewell who was Miss Eugenia McNair.

Mr. Lindsay belongs to the Mullanphy clan and is a brother of Mrs. James M. Franciscus. The wedding will be in October.

The engagement of Miss Patti M. Clayton, daughter of the Rev. John B. Clayton of Kirkwood, to E. R. Breaker, son of the Rev. Manley Breaker of San Antonio, Tex., was announced at an informal tea Friday afternoon by Mrs. Leland Chivvis and Mrs. William Stoecker at the home of Mrs. Chivvis in Kirkwood. The date for the wedding has not been set. Mr. Breaker and Miss Clayton formerly were students at Washington University.

Mr. and Mrs. Sleck of 3223 Magnolia avenue returned home from the South Wednesday, after spending the winter there.

La Croix Girls entertained their friends with a leap year dance at the dance sudio, 4517 Olive street, last night. The members are: Marjorie Taylor, Melva Westcott, Katherine Trotier, Meta Small, Peggy Sward, Edna Sward, Marion Witte, Orene Bussman, Inez Parreux, Georgia Ashford.

The regular meeting of the Chin Chin Club was held at the home of the president, Miss Marie Benson, on Tuesday evening. The members present were: Misses Jewel Benson, Marie Benson, Johanna Beidenstein, Florence Corcoran, Dorothy Hosch, Mary Murphy and Edna Roeder.

The Imperials have completed arrangements for a dance to be given at Clendenen's academy, Tuesday. The following girls will assist in receiving: Misses Josephine Sleevick, Adele Cox, Tess Daniel and Ferris Bicht. The members are: W. J. Mitchell, A. F. Gronemeyer, F. J. Mitchell and A. J. Ahrens.

A surprise party was given Miss Mildred McCormick at her home, 4372 Natural Bridge road. Monday. Those present were: Misses Alice Keenoy, Mabel Kehoe, Anna Keenoy, Genevieve Monahan, Janette Kehoe, Rose Mary Krallman, Tessie Gorman, Lilly Popp, Marie Doyle, Margaret Popp, Frances Kelly; Messrs. Carroll Dailey, Richard Powers, Robert Goff, George Rider, Edward Monahan, H. Williams, Gerald McMahon, Louis McMahon, Francis Powers, William Fogarty.

The Margaret A. E. McClure Chapter of the U. D. C. will give a large card party Wednesday evening at the Washington Hotel. Mrs. John Hurck is chairman of the affair. Assisting her will be Mmes. Lyman W. Ray, V. P. De Larme, Thomas F. Browne, Gilbert L. Beckley, Benjamin C. Lindsay, Eugene W. Lewis, Miller Patterson and Miss Genevieve Plummer.

Margaret A. E. McClure Chapter, U. D. C., will hold a meeting tomorrow at the home of Mrs. M. A. Breen, 5202 Cabanne avenue. Mrs. M. S. Bowman and Mrs. J. C. Brown will assist the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. August Gander of 2629 South Broadway celebrated their silver wedding anniversary at their home last Wednesday with another wedding ceremoney, which was performed by the Rev. William L. Simon, pastor of the Jesus Church, Twelfth and Victor streets. Twenty-five years ago they were married by the late Rev. Dr. Nolau of St. Mark's Church, at Third and Soulard avenues.

At their second wedding service, Mr. and Mrs. Gander were attended by Mrs. Louisa Bluemlein and Charles Gander and by Miss Thelma Gander and Elevore Woerman as flower girls. The service was attended by a large number of friends, who enjoyed the dancing after the ceremony.

Invitations have been issued for a dance to be given Tuesday evening by the Carnation Girls' Club, at Cinderella Hall. The members are: Misses Alma Kahn, Rose Senders, Lillie Senders, Rose Landau, Pearl Rothstine, Charlotte Tobias, Fannie Tobias, Nellie Marmor, Mildred Glucksman and Gertrude Glucksman. Dancing at 8:15 p. m.

Miss Mary Walsh of 4513 Gibson avenue and Joseph B. O'Neal of Chicago, Ill., were married Monday in the Sacred Heart Church of Joliet. The Rev. Father Vanpelt performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. O'Neal will make their home in Joliet.

The box holders for the New York Orchestra at its concert at the Odeon, May 11, are Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins, Mrs. Henry C. Scott, Mrs. L. R. Blackmer, Mrs. D. R. Francis, Mrs Sam Plant and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Catlin.

The concert is under the auspices of the St. Louis Symphony Society, of which Mr. John R. Fowler is the newly-elected president.

Amateur theatricals, which Prof. Otto Heller of Washington University says are running riot in St. Louis to the great detriment of the professional brand, have at last fallen to the children as well as the grown-ups, and nearly 150 small actors and actresses are busy with rehearsals for the premiere of "Undine," a new play by a St. Louis woman, Rosalind Mahler-Pufeles. Undine is a modernised adaptation of the old myth of Undine, and is said to be very pretty.

The members of its large cast, which includes about 25 principals as well as the chorus and ballet, are the small sons and daughters of the fashionable set. The two performances, May 19 and 20, at the Shubert Theater, will be among the really interesting events o: the May calendar. Jacob Mahler will direct both performances.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Black have returned from French Lick after a three weeks' absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Stinde of 5450 Delmar boulevard are spending two weeks at French Lick Hotel.

Miss Esther Reid Crawford of 5975 Garfield avenue will depart today for Jacksonville, Fla., where she will visit Miss Gertrude White, formerly of St. Louis. From there she will go to St. Petersburg and other cities, returning home about the middle of June. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Washington R. Crawford.

Confederate Dames Chapter U. D. C. will hold its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Phil Chew, 5280 Washington boulevard tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur K. Snowden, who were married here March 15, have returned from their honeymoon in the West and will be at home at the Chateau Apartments, 1231 Hamilton avenue.

TODAY'S BEAUTY TALK

You can make a delightful shampoo with very little effort and for a very trifling cost, if you get from your druggist a package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and rub briskly. This creates an abundance of thick, white lather that thoroughly dissolves and removes the dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly, with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.—ADV.

Saloniki Is Best Fortified City in the World Today

ing vegetable gardens, revelling in this virgin soil. It was probably the first time in the history of the Vardar that lettuce, spinach and radishes had been planted on that prairie.

From point to point we came upon stretches of well-made new road and soldiers laying more yet. These roads were built with two feet of big rock and finer screenings to top it off. There was a thoroughness about this which impressed me, the full significance of which was not borne in on me until we mounted the last roll in the prairie and slipped down toward the wandering Vardar.

There we came upon the defenses, and they are certainly built to stay. Concrete bases for artillery, concrete inclosures for rapid-firing guns, underground barracks cut in the rock and made proof against anything short of a 42-centimeter gun by coverings of railroad iron, concrete and dirt. Trenches completely wired, with telephones everywhere. Wire screening to keep them from crumbling; covered trenches first, second and third line trenches, all complete; trenches without end, and all perfect.

These fortresses contain every device, every idea worked out in the trench warfare in France, and have some improvements in addition. They are much more complete than anything I have seen elsewhere, and I should call them impregnable. For they have every artful underground defense worked out by the Germans in the Labyrinth, near Souchez in Artois, which the French took last spring at a frightful cost; and it is not one labyrinth, but a continuous series of labyrinths, 90 miles long.

The cost of these defenses strikes one forcibly. The actual amount of work and material involved is considerably greater than that used in the construction of a four-tracked railroad from New York to Philadelphia. The distance is the same, and the work even more expensive. We were taken afoot through half a dozen of these fortresses and shown a good many things that I am not going to write about, and in all covered perhaps a mile and a half of the front line. It took us several hours, and I was wearied with it, although we had seen but an infinitesmal part of the whole.

Defenses on the Vardar.

While no restrictions were placed upon me and the provisional officers took the trouble to show in detail how the whole system is worked out, I feel that I must exercise a certain discretion in describing them in print. But I can give the general plan without fear of betraying military secrets.

The defenses begin on the Vardar, which is a meadow stream which an enemy can be readily prevented from crossing. The prairie on its left bank rolls back 20 miles or more before it reaches the mountain, making Saloniki an easy city to take unless protected by special defenses. This prairie land is the most important part of the 90 miles of defenses, and this is what we were shown, but the whole of the 90 miles is just as complete.

As far as possible the highest points on the prairie were chosen in a long snaky line. All that is visible are the barbed wire and the parapets. First double entanglements of barbed wire are stretched in a continuous line for the whole 90 miles. It protects the British as well as the French front. Back of them are three rows of underground fortresses—they can be called nothing less—each complete in itself and each in a position to enfilade the attackers of the next. There is nothing like the continuous trenches in France. Every two or three acres is turned into a self-contained fort, each with its rapid firing guns in concrete underground forts, so carefully hidden as to be indistinguishable at 200 yards, each with rifle pits protected by parapets of steel plate. About the same amount of ground occupied by each fort is left open between them, but this is commanded by the second line of similar independent fortresses, so that the enemy would only get into a trap by trying to take the second line before finishing the first. Each fortress is crisscrossed with communication trenches and connected with the forts behind in a similar manner. A third row of trenched fortresses lie directly behind the first, near enough to help the first and second.

Weary of Barbed Wire.

I reached a point by and by where I hoped I might never see barbed wire or concrete again, but the enthusiastic officers led us on and on. Every time it looked as if there might be hopes of getting back to the automobile and looking at it without labor those tireless devils found new "curiosities" to show us. I must admit they were astonishingly clever, and Heaven help the soldiers who are ordered to break through, but it looked to me at times as an enormous amount of work to defend a city that was in no immediate danger of being attacked.

But just as we came back into the air after one of our underground excursions I heard a sudden cannonading breaking the spring-like stillness. Over in the mountains to the north we could see breaking shells, and the hush of battle descended over the landscape. All at once this concrete and barbed wire seemed touched by magic. It took on a grimmer significance. I ceased computing the expense and comparing it to railroad construction. It had become as tensely dramatic as if the shells falling on the far range of mountains were dropping in the trenches. Then I realized that if they did fall they would not do much harm to the soldiers deep underground cutting down the advancing enemy.

But the real fight was too much of an attraction to miss completely, so we skimmed off across the prairie again until we met Greek refugee peasants coming hurriedly over the mountains seeking the protection of the defenses. Farther on, resting in the mountain hollows, were dozens of Missouri mules from which the mountain batteries had been unloaded. They were blazing away at four small Greek villages just inside the frontier, upon which the Germans, who had recently replaced the Bulgarian troops on the frontier, had descended to get material with which to entrench themselves against the expected spring drive northward up the Vardar from Saloniki.

The marksmanship of the mountain batteries was deadly accurate and the Germans could be seen through field glasses carrying away their many wounded. Then, when they were pretty well shelled out, the French chasseurs could be seen crossing the plain on the run. There was a skirmish and a few minutes of rifle fire in each village, and it was all over.

As we passed the trenched fortresses on the way back they did not seem so far out of the war as they had that morning, but the poilus were still working industriously over their gardens.

New Canal Lake Called "Goethals."

PANAMA, April 29.—The widening of the canal at a point north of Gold Hill, incident to the dredging of the soil that slid from the hillsides into the channel in Gaillard Cut, has formed a lake that has been given the official designation of Lake Goethals. The water is about a fourth of a mile long and 600 feet wide.

ELECTROPHONES ARE POPULAR

Londoners Sit at Home and Hear Theater Performances.

LONDON, April 29.—There are at least 10,000 fewer telephones in London as a result of the war, business firms in hundreds of instances discontinuing the service in the interest of retrenchment. The Government, which operates the system, announces that although telephones have been discontinued by the wholesale, there has been an increase in the use of electrophones—the instrument which connects the subscriber with the theater and enables persons who prefer to remain indoors these gloomy nights of black streets to have amusement brought to their fireside.

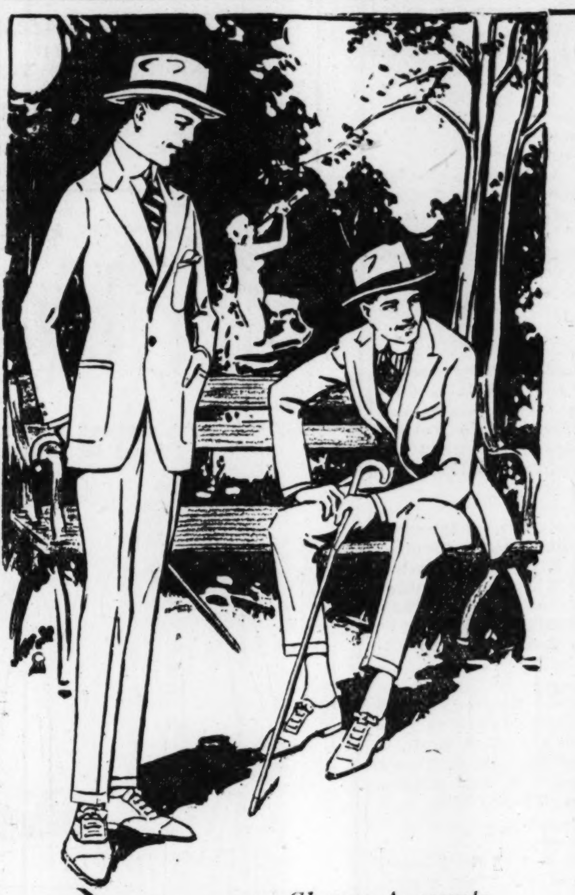
CHAPMAN BROS. CLOTHES CLEANSERS



Charge Accounts with responsible men solicited.

Springtime plus Pride equals New Clothestime

YOU do possess pride—self-esteem—that quality with which you would impress others—your friends—business associates—business prospects—men upon whom the first impression counts for much—and you want to feel yourself equal to the desired impression.

Greenfield clothes make a good first impression and a lastingly good, good impression; they are built for appearance sake and for service, and every garment is guaranteed to be 100% value-giving. Styles for every man of every age and proportion.

Pinch Back
Most Fashionable.

In blues, browns and blacks with the new red stripes, in Flannels and Cheviots; also in club checks, chalk stripes and solid colors. With regular or patch pockets and arrow lapels.

The young man who wants the most stylish clothes can find nothing newer.

Business Suits
Semi-Conservative.

Of every desired shade and material, in solid colors or mixtures. Suits that are worn by many staunch business men. There is just enough of present day style in these suits to give the figure a little "trim" appearance. A sort of 50-50 proposition as for "style"—Semi.

Conservative Suits
Style always good.

Some men buy about the same cut of clothes at all times. Clothes they can wear out, and yet always look well in them, because the style is always good.

We have them here at prices ranging from our lowest to the highest.

Petain Is New Type of General, a Machine, He Says

understand the real problem of defense of Verdun you must realize that there is lacking to the city any railroad. In September, 1914, the Germans took St. Mihiel and cut the railway coming north along the Meuse. On their retreat from the Marne the soldiers of the Crown Prince halted at Montaucon and Varennes, and their cannon have commanded the Paris-Verdun-Metz railroad ever since. Save for a crazy narrow guage line wandering along the hill slopes, climbing by impossible grades, Verdun is without rail communication.

Wonderful Motor Transport.

It was this that made the defense of the town next to impossible. Partially to remedy the defeat the French had reconstructed a local highway running from St. Dizier by Bar-le-Duc to Verdun beyond the reach of German artillery. Today an army of a quarter of a millon of men, the enormous parks of heavy artillery and field guns—everything is supplied by this one road and by motor transport.

Coming north from St. Dizier we entered this vast procession. Mile after mile the caravan stretched on, 50 miles with hardly a break of 100 feet between trucks. Paris busses, turned into vehicles to bear fresh meat; new motor trucks built to carry 35 men and traveling in companies, regiments, brigades; wagons from the hood of which soldiers, bound to replace the killed and wounded of yesterday, looked down upon you, calmly but unsmilingly. From St. Dizier to Verdun the impression was of that of the machinery by which logs are carried to the saw in a mill. You felt unconsciously, yet unmistakably, that you were looking, not upon automobiles, not upon separate trucks, but upon some vast and intricate system of belts and benches that were steadily, swiftly, surely carrying all this vast material, carrying men and munitions and supplies, everything human and inanimate, to that vast grinding mill which was beyond the hills, the crushing machine which worked with equal remorselessness upon men and upon things.

Now and again, too, over the hills came the Red Cross ambulances; they passed you returning from the front and bringing within their carefully closed walls the finished product, the fruits of the day's grinding, or a fraction thereof. And about the whole thing there was a sense of the mechanical rather than the human, something that suggested an automatic, a machine-driven, movement; it was as if an unseen system of belts and engines and levers guided, moved, propelled this long procession upward and ever toward the mysterious front where the knives or the axes or the grinding stones did their work.

Night came down upon us along the road and brought a new impression. Mile on mile over the hills and round the curves, disappearing in the woods, reappearing on the distant summits of the hills, each showing a rear light that wagged crazily on the horizon, this huge caravan plowed onward, while in the villages and on the hillsides campfires flashed up and the faces or the figures of the soldiers could be seen now clearly and now dimly. But all else was subordinated to the line of moving transports. Somewhere far off at one end of the procession there was battle; somewhere down below at the other end there was peace. There all the resources, the life blood, the treasure in men and in riches of France were concentrating and collecting, were being fed into this motor fleet, which like baskets on ropes was carrying it forward to the end of the line and then bringing back what remained, or for the most part coming back empty, for more—for more lives and more treasure.

Wierd Night Scene.

It was full night when our car came down the curved grades into Bar-le-Duc, halted at the corner, where soldiers performed the work of traffic policemen and steadily guided the caravan toward the road marked by a canvas sign lighted within by a single candle and bearing the one word, Verdun. All night, too, the rumble of the passing transport filled the air and the little hotel shook with the jar of the heavy trucks, for neither by day nor by night is there a halt in the motor transport, and the sound of this grinding is never low.

Fine Road Leads to Petain.

It was little more than daylight when we took the road again, with a 30-mile drive to Verdun before us. Almost immediately we turned into the Verdun route we met again the caravan of automobiles, of camions, as the French say. It still flowed on without break. Now, too, we entered the main road, the one road to Verdun, the road that had been built by the French army against just such an attack as was now in progress. The road was as wide as Fifth avenue, New York, as smooth as asphalt—a road that, when peace comes, if it ever does, will delight the motorist. Despite the traffic it had to bear, it was in perfect repair, and soldiers in uniform sat by the side breaking stone and preparing metal to keep it so.

This Is Petain's Day.

The character of the country had changed. We were entering the region of the hills, between the Aisne and the Meuse, a country reminiscent of New England. Those hills are the barrier which beyond the Meuse, under the names of the Cote de Meuse, have been the scene of so much desperate fighting. The roads that sidled off to the west bore battle names, St. Mihiel, Troyon, and the road that we followed was still marked at every turn with the magic word Verdun. Our immediate objective was Souilly, the obscure hill town 20 miles, perhaps, south of the front from which Sarrail had defended Verdun in the Marne days and from which Petain was now defending Verdun against a still more terrible attack.

And in France today one speaks only of Verdun and Petain. Soldiers have their day; Joffre, Castelnau, Foch, all retain much of the affection and admiration they have deserved, but at the moment it is the man who has held Verdun that France thinks of, and there was the promise for us that at Souilly we should see the man whose fame had filled the world in the recent great and terrible weeks. Upward and downward over the hills, through more ruined villages, more hospitals, more camps, our march took us until after a short hour we came to Souilly, general headquarters of the Army of Verdun, of Petain, the center of the world for the moment.

Few towns have done less to prepare for greatness than Souilly. It boasts a single street three inches deep in the clay mud of the spring—a single street through which the Verdun route marches almost contemptuously, the same nest of stone and plaster houses, one story high, houses from which the owners had departed to make room for Generals and staff officers. This and one thing more, the Mairie, the town hall, as usual the one pretentious edifice of the French hamlet, and before the stairway of this we stopped and got out.

We were at headquarters. From this little building, devoted for perhaps a century to the business of governing the commune of Souilly, with its scant thousand of peopel, Petain was defending Verdun and the fate of an army of 250,000 men at the least. In the upstairs room, where the town Councillors had once debated parochial questions, Joffre and Castelnau and Petain in the terrible days of the opening conflict had consulted, argued, decided the fate of France, so the Germans had said, for they had made the fall of Verdun the assurance of French collapse.

Unconsciously, too, you felt the change in the character of the popu-

The 1916 Spring Bride

Behold the up-to-date costume for the spring bride, made of gold embroidered white taffeta trimmed with narrow gold braid and deep lace. Custom no longer dictates a modest concealment of throat, arms and ankles. And that head gear!

This beautiful Rotogravure picture is up-to-the-half-second and is the last expression in modern newspaper art.

Another charming Rotogravure is that of Dorothy Gish the popular Triangle Movie Star.

Still another Roto deserves special mention. It is an acquisition to the collection of paintings in the St. Louis Art Museum. It is taken from Alfred Steven's beautiful work entitled "In Deep Thought."

It would take a full page to describe in detail the treat in store for you next Sunday in the lation of this village. There were still the soldiers, the eternal gray-blue uniforms, but there were also men of a different type, men of authority. In the street your guides pointed out to you Gen. Herr, the man who had designed and planned and accomplished the miracle of the motor transport that had saved Verdun—with the aid of the brave men fighting somewhere not far beyond the nearest hills. He had commanded at Verdun when the attack came, and without hesitation he had turned over his command to Petain, his junior in service and rank before the war, given up the glory and become the superintendent of transport. Men spoke to you of the fine loyalty of that action with unconcealed admiration.

And then out of the remoteness of Souilly there came a voice familiar to an American. Bunau-Varilla, the man of Panama, wearing the uniform of a commandant and the Croix de Guerre newly bestowed for some wonderful engineering achievement, stepped forward to ask for his friends and yours of the old "Sun paper." I had seen him last in "The Sun" office in the days when the war had just broken out and he was about to sail for home; in the days when the Marne was still unfought and he had breathed hope then as he spoke with confidence now.

Meeting the General.

Presently there arrived the two officers whose duty it was to take me to Verdun, Capt. Henri Bordeaux, a man of letters known to all Frenchmen; Capt. Madelin, an historian, already documented in the history of the war making under his own eyes. To these men and their colleagues who perform this task that can hardly be agreeable, who risk their lives and give over their time with unfailing courtesy and consideration that the American newspaper correspondent may see, may report, it is impossible to return sufficient thanks, and every American newspaper reader who finds on his breakfast table the journal that tells him of the progress of the war owes something to some officer.

"Were we to see Verdun?" This was the first problem. I had been warned two days before that the bombardment was raging and that it was quite possible that it would be unsafe to go further. But the news was reassuring; Verdun was tranquil. "And Petain?" One could not yet say.

Even as we spoke there was a stirring in the crowd, general saluting, and I caught a glimpse of the commander in chief as he went quickly up the staircase. For the rest we must wait. But not for very long; in a few minutes there came the welcome word that Gen. Petain would see us, would see the stray American correspondent.

Since I saw Petain in the little Mairie at Souilly I have seen many photographs of him, but none in any real measure give the true picture of the defender of Verdun. He saw us in his office, the bare upstairs room, two years ago the office of the Mayor of Souilly. Think of the Selectmen's office in any New England village and the picture will be accurate. A bare room, a desk, one chair, a telephone, nothing on the walls but two maps, one of the military zone, one of the actual front and positions of the Verdun fighting. A bleak room, barely heated by the most primitive of stoves. From the single window one looked down on the cheerless street along which lumbered the caravan of autos. On the pegs against the wall hung the General's hat and coat, weather stained, faded, the clothes of a man who worked in all weathers. Of staff officers, of uniforms, of color, there was just nothing; of war there was hardly a hint.

Smile of Welcome.

At the door the commander in chief met us, shook hands and murmured clearly and slowly, with incisive distinctness, the formal words of French greeting; he spoke no English. Instantly there was the suggestion of Kitchener, not of Kitchener as you see him in flesh, but in photographs, the same coldness, decision. The smile that accompanied the words of welcome vanished and the face was utterly motionless, expressionless. You saw a tall, broad-shouldered man, with every appearance of physical strength, a clear blue eye, looking straightforward and beyond.

My French companion, M. Le Roux, spoke with Petain. He had just come from Joffre and he told an interesting circumstance. Petain listened. He said now and then, "yes" or "no." Nothing more. Watching him narrowly you saw that occasionally his eyes twitched a little, the single sign of fatigue that the long strain of weeks of responsibility had brought.

It was hard to believe, looking at this quiet, calm, silent man, that you were in the presence of the soldier who had won the Battle of Champagne, the man whom the war had surprised in the last of his fifties, a Colonel, a teacher of war rather than a soldier, a professor like Foch.

No one of Napoleon's marshals had commanded as many men as obeyed this Frenchman, who was as lacking in the distinction of military circumstance as our own Grant. Napoleon had won all his famous victories with far fewer troops than were directed from the telephone on the table yonder.

Every impression of modern war that comes to one actually in touch with it is a destruction of illusion; this thing is a thing of mechanism rather than of brilliance; perhaps Petain has led a regiment, a brigade or a division to the charge. You knew instinctively, in seeing the man, that you would go or come, as he said; but there was neither dash nor fire, nothing of the suggestion of elan; rather there was the suggestion of the commander of a great ocean liner, the man responsible for the lives, this time of hundreds of thousands, not scores; for the safety of France, not of a ship; but the man of machinery and the master of the wisdom of the tides and the weather, not the Ney, or the Murat, not the Napoleon of Arcola. The impression was of a strong man whose life was a life beaten upon by storms; the man on the bridge, to keep to the rather ridiculously inadequate figure, but not by any chance the man on horseback.

My talk, our talk with Petain was the matter of perhaps five minutes. The time was consumed by the words of Le Roux, who spoke very earnestly, urging that more American correspondents be permitted to visit Verdun, and Petain heard him patiently, but said—just nothing. Once he had greeted us his face settled into that grim expression that never changed until he smiled his word of good wishes as we left. Yet I have since found that apart from one circumstance which I shall mention in a moment I have remembered those minutes most clearly of all of my Verdun experience. Just as the photograph does not reveal the face of the man, the word does not describe the sense of strength, of responsibility, that he gives.

Nothing of Dash.

In a childish sort of way, exactly as one thinks of war as a matter of dash and color and motion, one thinks of the French General as the leader of a cavalry charge or of a forlorn hope of infantry. And the French soldier of this war has not been the man of charge or of dash—not that he has not charged as well as ever in his history, a little more bravely, perhaps, for machine guns are new and something worse than other wars have had. What the French soldier has done has been to stand, to hold, to die not in the onrush, but on the spot.

And Petain, in some curious way, has fixed in my mind the impression of the new Frenchman, if there be a new one, or perhaps better of the French soldier of today, whether he wear the stars of the General or undecorated "horizon" blue of the Poilu. The look that I saw in his eyes, the calm, steady, utterly emotionless looking straightforward, I saw everywhere at the front and at the back of the front. It embodied for me an enduring impression of the spirit and the poise of the French soldier of the latest and most terrible of French struggles. And I confess that, more than all I saw and heard at the front and in Paris, the look of this man convinced me that Verdun would not fall, that France herself would not either weary or weaken.

In Paris, where one may hear anything, there are those that will tell you that Joffre's work is done and that France waits for the man who will complete the task; that the strain of the terrible months has wearied the general who won the battle of the Marne and saved France. They will tell you, perhaps, that Petain is the man; they will certainly tell you that they hope that the man has been found in Petain. As to the truth of all this I do not pretend to know. I did not see Joffre but all that I have read of Joffre suggests that Petain is of his sort, the same quiet, silent man, with a certain coldness of the North a grimness of manner that is lacking in his chief.

There was a Kitchener legend in Europe and I do not think it survives save a little perhaps in corners of England. There was a legend of a man of ice and of iron, a man who made victory out of human material as a man makes a wall of mortar and stone, a man to whom his material was only mortar and stone, even though it were human. This legend has perished so far as Kitchener is concerned, gone with so much that England trusted and believed two years ago, but I find myself thinking now of Petain as we all thought of Kitchener in his great day.

If I were an officer I should not like to come to the defender of Verdun with the confession of failure. I think I should rather meet the Bavarians in the first line trenches, but I should like to know that when I was obeying orders I was carrying out a minor detail of something Petain had planned; I should expect it to happen, the thing that he had arranged, and I should feel that those clear, steel-blue eyes had forseen all that could occur, forseen calmly and utterly, whether it entailed the death of one or a thousand men, of ten thousand men if necessary, and had willed that it should happen.

I do not believe Napoleon's Old Guard would have followed Petain as they followed Ney. I cannot fancy him in the Imperial uniform, and yet, now that war is a thing of machines, of telephones, of indirect fire and destruction from unseen weapons at remote ranges, now that the whole manner and circumstance of conflict have changed, it is but natural that the general should change, too. Patently Petain is of the new, not the old, but no less patently he was the master of it.

We left the little Mairie, entered our machines and slid out swiftly for the last miles, climbed and curved over the fine hill and suddenly looked down on a deep trenchlike valley marching from east to west carrying the Paris-Verdun-Metz railroad, no longer available for traffic. And as we coasted down the hill we heard the guns at last, not steadily, but only from time to time, a distant boom, a faint billowing up of musketry fire. Some three or four miles straight ahead there were the lines of fire, beyond the brown hills that flanked the valley.

At the bottom of the valley we turned east, moved on for a mile and stopped abruptly. The guns were sounding more clearly, and suddenly there was a sense not of soldiers, but of an army. On one side of the road a column was coming toward us, a column of men who were leaving the trenches for a rest. the men who for the recent days had held the first line. Wearily but steadily they streamed by; the mud of the trenches covered their tunics; here and there a man had lost his steel helmet and wore a handkerchief about his head, probably to conceal a slight wound that but for the helmet had killed him.

Smiles and Disorder.

These men were smiling as they marched; they carried their full equipment and it rattled and tinkled; they carried their guns at all angles, they wore their uniforms in the strangest of disorders; they seemed almost like miners coming from the depths of the earth rather than soldiers returning from a decisive battle, from the hell of modern shell fire.

But it was the line on the other side of the road that held the eye. Here were the troops that were going toward the fire; toward the trenches, that were marching to the sound of the guns, and as one saw them the artillery rumble took on a new distinctness.

Involuntarily I searched the faces of these men as they passed. They were hardly 10 feet from me. Platoon after platoon, company after company, whole regiments in columns of fours. And seeing the faces brought an instant shock; they all wore the same calm, steady, slightly weary expression, but there was in the whole line scarcely a young man. Here men of the thirties, not the twenties; men still in the prime of strength, of health, but the fathers of families, the men of full manhood.

Almost in a flash the fact came home. This was what all the graves along the road had meant. This was what the battlefields and the glories of the 20 months had spelled—France had sent her youth and it was spent; she was sending her manhood now.

In the line no man smiled and no man straggled; the ranks were closed up and there were neither commands nor any visible sign of authority. These men who were marching to the sound of the guns had been there before. They knew precisely what it meant. Yet you could not but feel that as they went a little wearily, sadly, they marched willingly. They would not have it otherwise. Their faces were the faces of men who had taken the full measure of their own fate.

You had a sense of the loathing, the horror, above all the sadness that was in their hearts that this thing, this war, this destruction had to be. They had come back here through all the waste of ruined villages and shell-torn hillsides; all the men that you saw would not measure the cost of a single hour of trench fighting if the real attack began. This these men knew, and the message of the artillery fire, which was only one of unknown terrors for you, was intelligible to the utmost to each of them.

And yet with the weariness there was a certain resignation, a certain patience, a certain sense of comprehending sacrifice that more than all else is France today, the true France. This, and not the empty forts, not even the busy guns, was the wall that defended France, this line of men. If it broke there would come thundering down again out of the north all the tornado of destruction that had turned Northeastern France into a waste place and wrecked so much of the world's store of the beautiful and the inspiring.

For France Must Live!

Somehow you felt that this was in the minds of all these men. They had willed to die that France might live. They were going to a death that sounded ever more clearly as they marched. This death had eaten up all that was young, most of what was young at the least, of France; it might yet consume France, and so these men marched to the sound of the guns, not to martial music, not with any suggestion of dash, of enthusiasm, but quietly, steadily, all with the same look upon their faces—the look of men who have seen death and are to see it again. Instinctively I thought of what Kipling had said to me in London:

"Somewhere over there," he had said, "the thing will suddenly grip your throat and your heart; it will take hold of you as nothing in your life has ever done or ever will." And I know that I never shall forget those lines of quiet, patient, middle-aged men marching to the sound of the guns, leaving at their backs the countless graves that hold the youth of France, the men who had known the Marne, the Yser, Champagne, who had known death for nearly two years, night and day, almost constantly. Yet during the 15 minutes I watched there was not one order, not one straggler; there was a sense of the regularity with which the blood flows through the human arteries in this tide, and it was the blood of France.

So many people have asked me, I had asked myself, the question before I went to France: "Are they not weary of it? Will the French not give up from sheer exhaustion of strength?" I do not think so, now that I have seen the faces of these hundreds of men as they marched to the trenches beyond Verdun. France may bleed to death, but I do not think that while there are men there will be an end of the sacrifice. No pen or voice can express the horror that these men, that all Frenchmen, have of this war, of all war, the weariness. They hate it; you cannot mistake this; but France marches to the frontier in the spirit that men manned the walls against barbarians in the other days; there is no other way; it must be.

Over and over again, there has come the invariable answer; it would have come from scores and hundreds of these men who passed so near me I could have touched their faded uniforms if I had asked—"It is for France, for civilization; it must be, for there is no other way; we shall die, but with us, with our sacrifice, perhaps this thing will end."

You cannot put it in words quite, I do not think even any Frenchman has quite said it, but you can see it, you can feel it, you can understand it, when you see a regiment, a brigade, a division of these men of 30, some perhaps of 40, going forward to the war they hate and will never quit until that which they love is safe or they and all of their race are swallowed up in the storm that now was audibly beating beyond the human walls on the nearby hillsides.

Presently we moved again, we slipped through the column, topped the last incline, shot under the crumbling gate of the Verdun fortress, and as we entered a shell burst just behind us and the roar drowned out all else in its sudden and paralyzing crash. It had fallen, so we learned a little later, just where we had been watching the passing troops; it had fallen among them and killed. But an hour or two later, when we repassed the point where it fell, men were still marching by. Other regiments of men were still marching to

Nemo Week Special

UNUSUAL CORSET EVENT of VITAL IMPORTANCE to ALL WOMEN

THIS Nemo Week demonstrates the benefit, to the public, of standardized prices for Nemo Corsets as a guarantee of high quality at established prices, which now, and for months, have been maintained under very trying conditions.

Rapidly advancing cost of all staples, including corset-materials, indicates a substantial advance in retail prices in the near future.

In the face of this condition, we shall emphasize our policy and make this Nemo Week a great event by featuring, in addition to our full regular line at regular prices, three beautiful Summer models at much less than their real value to-day:

No. 330—The new Body-Training Nemo Military-Belt Corset, made of Steeltex batiste. For slender and medium figures. A health corset with splendid up-to-date style. Sizes 20 to 30 $3.00

No. 323—A new Self-Reducing model, for medium to tall full figures. Also made of Steeltex batiste. Bust rather low. An excellent model for summer wear. Sizes 22 to 36 $3.00

No. 525—A Self-Reducing Corset de luxe, made of a lustrous brocaded sateen—soft and strong. For all average full figures. Same model as our very popular Self-Reducing Corset No. 322 $5.00

Nemo Steeltex batiste is the fine light but durable material we used last year in our better grades of corsets for summer wear. Its cost price is now too high for that purpose, and we have used the stock remaining from last year to make two of these specials, giving the public the benefit of last year's lower cost.

No such values can be offered again for some time to come.

"Self-Help" to Guard Your Health and Youthful Grace

Take this occasion to study and try out the Nemo Wonderlift Corsets. In many stores you will find corsetieres who are members or graduates of the Nemo Hygienic-Fashion Institute, whose skilled assistance will be invaluable to you. From a health standpoint, Wonderlift Corsets are immeasurably superior to all others, and they are also superb STYLE corsets.

It is only a matter of time when the Wonderlift will be worn by a large majority of all women who wear corsets, for the very good reason that no other corsets can give anything like the same service.

We have developed the Wonderlift line until now there is a model for every figure from the extremely lean to the very stout:

No. 554—For stout figures, short or of medium height. Of fine white coutil; sizes 22 to 36—$5.00.

No. 555—For taller full figures; higher bust and back. Fine white coutil; sizes 22 to 36—$5.00.

No. 556—For slender to medium figures, tall or of medium height. Fine white coutil; sizes 20 to 30—$5.00.

No. 557—For slim figures, prominent hip bones, concave abdomen; inside supporting pads—an entirely new service, much needed. Fine white batiste; sizes 19 to 26—$5.00.

No. 1000—A model de luxe, for all average full figures; of lustrous white brocade; sizes 22 to 36—$10.00.

No. 998—For extremely large women with heavy, pendulous abdomen and much excess flesh. The ONLY corset ready-made for women of this type. Strong white coutil; heavily boned; all sizes from 30 to 38, also extra sizes 40, 42 and 44—$10.00.

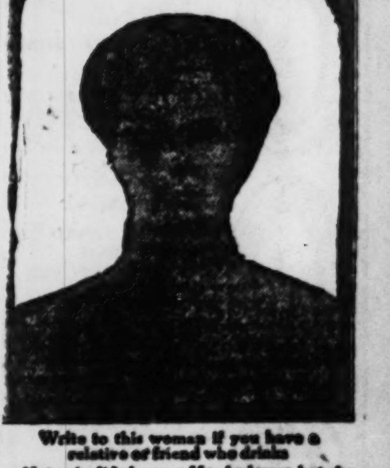
This Wife and Mother Wishes To Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of 10 Pearl Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over twelve years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.



Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished by simple home treatment which she now desires every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, to know all about, for she feels that others can do just as she did.

The treatment can be given secretly if desired and without cost. she will gladly and willingly tell what it is. Therefore every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks however, and that is that you do not send money for she has nothing to sell. Simply address your letter with all confidence, to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope.

the sound of the guns, and those who had passed were already over the hills and beyond the river, filing into the trenches in time, so it turned out, to meet the new attack that came with the later afternoon.

I went to Verdun to see the forts, the city, the hills and the topography of a great battle; I went in the hope of describing with a little of clarity what the operation meant as a military affair. I saw and I shall hereafter try to describe this. But I shall never be able to describe this thing which was the true Verdun for me—these men, their faces, seen as one heard the shell fire and the musketry rolling, not steadily but intermittently, the men who had marched over the roads that are lined with graves, through villages that are destroyed, that had come of their own will and in calm determination and marched unhurryingly and yet unshrinkingly, the men who were no longer young, who had left behind them all that men hold dear in life—home, wives, children, because they knew that there was no other way.

I can only say to all those who have asked me, "What of France?" this simple thing, that I do not believe the French will ever stop. I do not believe, as the Germans have said, that French courage is weakening, that French determination is abating. I do not believe the Kaiser himself would think this if he had seen these men's faces as they marched toward his guns. I think he would feel as I felt, as one must feel, that these men went willingly, hating war with their whole soul, destitute of passion or anger. I never heard a passionate word in France, because there had entered into their minds, into the mind and heart of a whole race, the belief that what was at stake was the thing that for 2000 years of history has been France.

Supplies Are Best Aid U. S. Can Give to Allies, Says Thomas inch) in artillery preparation against trenches or in open field fighting.

"The 305 (12-inch), about which so much has been written, is much too cumbersome for operations other than against forts like Douaumont and Vaux. We have no evidence of any German quick-firing heavy gun—if they have one, its effects haven't been noticed.

"But it is a fact they have largely discarded their 77 field gun, although we are using our 75's to an ever-increasing extent. I consider the 75 still the finest artillery arm in the war from the standpoint of scientific precision and perfection.

"In comparing French and German ordnance, one mustn't forget our shells contain a far higher proportion of explosive. For instance, our 75 shell has as much as their 150 (5.9-inch) and our 155 is equal to their 210.

American Ammunition Coming In.

"Another point—the Germans keep emphazing the undenied fact of their possession of our mineral reservoirs in Northern France, but they overlook, in prating about the handicap this imposes on us, the existence of a country called the United States, from which we have been getting all the surplus metal we need, and which is gradually supplying us with the finished product in ammunition as well."

Here M. Thomas launched into a somewhat technical description of the present mineral strength of France, which showed his grasp of metallurgy to be as comprehensive as was his knowledge of sociology before the war—for he was a Socialist scholar and thinker before he became the biggest business man in France.

Eventually I mentioned to him that Mr. von Wiegand had reported in the Post-Dispatch that the French at Verdun had begun returning the German fire shot for shot.

"I am glad the truth has been acknowledged from the other side," he exclaimed. "Apart from its other aspects, Verdun has been unprecedented as a gunnery combat, and the German effort has been and still is simply colossal.

Have Caught Up at Verdun.

"In no previous battle have the batteries on both sides suffered more from the direct shell-fire of their adversaries. The Germans had the superiority at the start, but we have caught up with them, and yet have been able to keep many heavy guns in reserve. As regards ammunition, we were obliged, in the early days of the offensive, to draw on our reserve stock, but we have since been able not only to make up the depletion, but even to add to the reserve.

"This means we are able to meet all the Verdun requirements in shells by our daily production, and at the same time our reserve is mounting daily."

"And the war as a whole?" I asked in conclusion.

"My confidence is undiminished. So long as they work together, the allies hold the whip hand, and will continue to wield the lash until the day of final victory."

WATCHMAN FREED OF KILLING

Circuit Attorney Fails to File Information Against J. J. Steffen.

Joseph J. Steffen of 2729 Shenandoah avenue, a watchman, who shot and killed Jose Harding April 19, was discharged on his common law bond yesterday by Judge Clark in the Court of Criminal Correction to answer any charge that later might be preferred against him. This action was taken after the Circuit Attorney had failed to file an information.

The shooting took place in an alley between Spruce street and Clark avenue and occurred while Harding was resisting arrest, it was alleged.

Famous Author Describes Efficiency of the Commissary and Reinforcement Departments—Also Writes of Conditions in the Huge Training Camps of Great Britain Which Pour Out Ceaseless Streams of Men for the Trenches.

By MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.

Author of "Robert Elsmere," "Lady Rose's Daughter," "The Case of Richard Meynell" and other widely read novels.

A MILLION AND A HALF of men—over a quarter of a million of women—working in some 4000 State-controlled workshops for the supply of munitions of war, not only to our own troops, but to those of our allies—the whole, in the main, a creation of six months effort—this is the astonishing spectacle, of some of the details of which I have tried, as an eyewitness, to give you in my previous letters a rapid and imperfect sketch. But what of the men, the armies, for which these munitions are being made and hurried to the fighting lines? It was at Aldershot, a few days ago, that I listened to some details of the first rush of the new armies, given me by a member of the Headquarters Staff who had been through it all. Aldershot in peace time held about 27,000 troops. Since the outbreak of war some million and a quarter of men have passed through the great camp, coming in ceaselessly for training and equipment, and going out again to the theaters of war.

In the first days and weeks of the war—during and after the marvellous precision and rapidity with which the Expeditionary Force was dispatched to France — men poured in from all parts, from all businesses and occupations; rich and poor, north and south countrymen, English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh, men from the Dominions, who had flung themselves into the first homecoming steamer; men from India, and men from the uttermost parts of Africa and Asia who had begged or worked their way home. They were magnificent material. They came with set faces, asking only for training, training, training!—and "what the peace soldier learns in six months," said my companion, "they learnt in six weeks. We had neither uniforms, nor rifles, neither guns, nor horses for them. We did not know how to feed them or to house them.

"In front of the headquarters at Aldershot, that Mecca of the soldier, where no one would dare to pass in ordinary times whose turnout is not immaculate, the most extraordinary figures, in bowler hats and bits of uniform, passed unrebuked. We had to raid the neighboring towns for food; to send frantic embassies to London for bread and meat; to turn out any sort of shed to house them. Luckily it was summer weather; otherwise I don't know what we should have done for blankets. But nobody 'groused.' Everybody worked, and there were many who felt it the time of their lives."

IN one shed, my guide called my attention to shelves on which were a number of small objects in china and metal. "They were found in kits on the field," he said gently. Wherever we can identify the owner, such things are carefully returned to his people. These could not be identified." I took up a little china dog, a bit of coarse French pottery which some dead father had bought, at Poperinghe perhaps, or Bailleul, for the children at home. Nearby were souvenirs, bits of shell or German equipment; then fragments of a prayer book, a neck medallion of a saint and so on. It was not easy to look at them calmly.—MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.

A Great War Camp Where Tennyson Dreamed

THE military camps of Great Britain tell the tale of our incredible venture. Great areas of land had to be cleared, levelled and drained; barracks had to be built; one camp alone used 42,000 railway truck loads of building material. There was no time to build new railways, and the existing roads were rapidly worn out. They were as steadily repaired; and on every side new camps sprang up around the parent camps of the country.

The Surrey commons and woods, the Wiltshire towns, the Midland and Yorkshire heaths, the Buckinghamshire hills have been everywhere invaded—their old rural sanctities are gone. I walked in bewilderment the other day up and down the slopes of a Surrey hill which when I knew it last was one kingdom of purple heather, beloved of the honey bees, and scarcely ever trodden by man or woman. Barracks now form long streets upon its crest and sides; practice-trenches, bombing schools, the stuffed and dangling sacks for bayonet training, musketry ranges, and the rest, are everywhere. Tennyson, whose wandering ground it once was, would know it no more. And this camp is only one of a series which spread far and wide round the Aldershot headquarters.

Near my own home, a park and a wooded hillside that two years ago were carefully guarded even from a neighbor's foot, are now occupied by a large town of military huts, which can be seen for miles round. And 15 miles away, in a historic "chase" where Catherine of Aragon lived while her trial was proceeding in a neighboring town, a Duke, bearing one of the great names of England, has himself built a camp housing 1200 men, for the recruits of his country regiments alone, and has equipped it with every necessary, whether for the soldier's life or training. But everywhere — East, North, South and West—the English and Scotch roads are thronged with soldiers and horses, with trains of artillery wagons and Army Service lorries, with men marching back from night attacks or going out to scout and skirmish on the neighboring commons and through the most sacred game preserves. There are no more trespass laws in England now—for the soldier.

Now let us follow some of these khaki-clad millions across the seas, through the reinforcement camps, and the great supply bases, towards that fierce reality of war to which everything tends.

A Journey to England's Great Army Bases in France

IT was after my return from the munition factories that I received a program from the War Office of a journey in France which I was to be allowed to make. It included the names of three or four places well known to be the centers of English organization in France. But it did not include any place in the actual fighting zone.

To me, in my ignorance, the places named mainly represented the great array of finely-equipped hospitals to be found everywhere in France in the rear of our armies; and I was inclined to say that I had no special knowledge of hospital work, and that one could see hospitals in England, with more leisure to feel and talk with the sufferers in them than a 10-days' tour could give. A friendly Cabinet Minister smiled when I presented this view. "You had better accept. You will find it very different from what you suppose. The 'back' of the army includes everything." He was more than right!

From the moment of landing on the French side, my daughter and I passed into the charge of the military authorities. An officer accompanied us; a War Office motor took us from place to place; and everything that could be shown us in the short 10 days of our tour was freely open to us. I have written in complete freedom, affected only by the absolutely necessary restrictions of the military censorship; and I hope I may be able to show inadequately something of the work of men who have done a magnificent piece of organization, far too little realized even in their own country.

For in truth we in England know

HOW CAN THE LEGITIMATE DRAMA BE RESTORED TO PROSPEROUS STATE?

Varied Answers Given by Experts in Conference Here

Most of Them Agree That the Movie Craze Is but a Fad and Hold It Will Soon Cease to Be a Troublesome Competitive Factor Provided Good Plays Are Offered.

Some Hold That Prices Are Too High While Others Think They Could Be Increased if the Play-Going Public Could Be Assured of Getting Its Money's Worth Invariably.

WHAT can be done to restore the drama in America to its former prosperous state?

This question has been seriously considered in St. Louis in the last few days by a gathering of about 150 men and women, composing the national convention of the Drama League of America. With a few exceptions, these persons have no interest in theatrical enterprises, and their interest in the advancement of the drama is a matter of artistic endeavor and public spirit.

The question is the natural sequel of the question often heard, "What is the matter with the theater?" Both questions lead to the same line of inquiry—whether the "movies" are to blame, or whether the fault is with high prices, the star system, ticket speculators or managers, or whether the public taste is hopelessly at fault.

Some of the persons prominent in the Drama League's meetings at the Buckingham Hotel were asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter to express their opinion as to measures needed to advance the dramatic standard in this country. Their replies are here given:

"The Spoken Drama Will Always Be a Necessity."

By MRS. BEN ALI HAGGIN.

WE must adopt the slow process of educating our children to appreciate the better things. We must cultivate their taste by supplying opportunity for self-expression in plays given in the schools. We must encourage them to witness only the performances of the best actors, and teach them to save their pennies, to be used in witnessing the best plays. They must be taught to demand the best, for we always get what we demand, don't we?

I think the problem of competition between the motion picture and legitimate drama theater will regulate itself in time. The spoken drama is an esthetic necessity. The cheapness and novelty of the motion picture show will wear on the people and they will lose some of the interest in them. Nothing can replace the spoken word of the stage, which, after all, is the expression of our own lives.

I cannot say that theaters charge too much for the play. I am inclined to believe "the laborer is worthy of his hire." The modern managers take tremendous risk in some of their productions, and good actors are worth all they can get. Better actors are worth more.

"Movies Not Competitor of Real Drama," Says Faversham.

By WILLIAM FAVERSHAM,
Star Actor and Advocate of an Endowed Theater and School of Acting.

IN order to revive the legitimate drama there is nothing better that can be done than just such a celebration as St. Louis is having in Tower Grove Park this afternoon. (He made this statement Friday afternoon during exercises in memory of Shakspeare.) There is only one way to revive interest and that is to get the public interested in real events.

The theaters are not charging enough for performances of the legitimate drama. Any man or any woman who wishes to see a finished production ought to be willing to pay enough for that to make good the expenses of the management.

The people who wish to go to see a legitimate play are not of the multitude who go to see picture shows. There should be absolutely no competition between legitimate drama and moving picture shows, because the audience attracted to each is of an entirely different mentality.

"Theater Better Educational Medium Than the Church."

By MRS. A. STARR BEST,
Founder of the Drama League.

TO revive the legitimate drama we must strive to make people realize that the worthy play is most interesting, and we must develop audiences to enjoy good acting. They must be familiarized with the best by more reading.

The more discussion we have of the beauty of good plays, the more interest will be stimulated in them.

People must be taught that playgoing is not merely amusement, but a part of our education.

There is greater opportunity for education in the theater than there is in the church, for most people go to church but twice a week, while opportunity for theater going is always at hand through nightly performances and matinees.

We must begin to regard the theater not as our recreation so much, but as the potent force in building up good citizens. We must get away from the idea that the theater is a place to stray to when we have nothing else to do but spend a few idle hours.

I consider a good way to reclaim the drama from its apparently lethargic state is to dignify it as much as possible. This will save it. I think another helpful thing would be a reduction in the price of seats for good plays. One thing that has operated against legitimate drama is the bad faith of managers. They have advertised inferior companies as their best. This proved a great disappointment to many.

Yes, I think the theaters are charging too much, a great deal too much. A reason for this, I think, is the actor's pride, not his greed. Many actors sign contracts requiring their managers to play them at $2 a seat. To get around this contract some managers only charge this price for a few rows. I think it would be far better for actors to play to bigger crowds at $1.50 a seat than to empty seats at $2.

Trivial Shows Did Best Business in St. Louis During Past Season

THE greatest success of the past season in St Louis was "The Follies" which played to $26,384 in one week at the Olympic theater. As a matter of fact, this was the largest amount of money ever taken in by any regular theatrical attraction for the same period of time anywhere in this country. The greatest financial successes at the Shubert theater according to manager Melville Stoltz, were the four Winter Garden productions, "Dancing Around," Made in America," "The Passing Show of 1915" and "Town Topics." These shows averaged about $15,000 each for their week here and "Within the Loop" took in a little less than that amount. Their appeal lay largely in the scanty attire of their choruses.

Next to "The Follies," the Olympic successes of the season were "Watch Your Step," a musical play, which took in about $17,000; Julian Eltinge, the female impersonator, who drew $18,000 for the week; and the film drama, "The Birth of a Nation."

Maude Adams, who did not present a new play but appeared in two of her old successes, played to about $10,000 for a week, a little more than half her business in former years, while Cyril Maude in his great success, "Grumpy," played to about the same amount. Elsie Ferguson played to about $5000 in "Outcast," due largely to the fact that her excellent and entertaining drama was based on a distasteful subject. David Warfield did a little better in his new play, which was not of the sort in which theater goers were accustomed to seeing that splendid actor appear. Otis Skinner also did poorly in "Cock o' The Walk" which, however, did not meet with great success in New York or elsewhere.

At the Shubert Harry Lauder did fairly well with his vaudeville entertainment and William Faversham, on his first appearance in "The Hawk," had a good week. The public did not respond well, in Holy Week, to "Bunker Bean," which had a long run in Chicago, or "A Pair of Silk Stockings." "The Only Girl," a charming comedy with music, but without the "leg show" features, did a remarkably poor business, as did Andreas Dippel's ambitious but more or less tiresome "The Lilac Domino" and the wholly charming "Girl From Utah."

"Young America," a charming little "kid" comedy, took in less than $5000 for its week at the Olympic, and Walker Whiteside in "The Ragged Messenger," a play which gave up the ghost soon after leaving here, set the low record for the year at the Olympic, playing to about $2000 for the week.

"Lower Prices, Earlier Closing Necessary," Says Percival Chubb.

By PERCIVAL CHUBB,
National President Drama League of America.

PRICES for the legitimate drama must come down, theaters must be more conveniently located for the residence districts and the hour of dismissal must be earlier. The latter could be remedied by arranging shorter periods between the scenes These things, together with the things the drama league is trying to do, organize a patronage that likes good plays, are the main things necessary to revive interest in the legitimate drama.

We must educate the young in dramatic taste, a job for the schools. It will be necessary, in combating the widespread interest in the "movies" to bring back the love of hearing the human voice. It will be a work of cultivating ear-mindedness rather than eye-mindedness. We must inculcate a love for the charm of speech and the beauty of sound.

Says "Managers of Good Plays Are Not Dissatisfied."

By THEODORE B. HINCKLEY,
President of Chicago Center and Editor of the Drama Quarterly.

THE truth is we have never had as large audiences for the legitimate play as we should have had. The good drama has not suffered nearly so much lately as burlesque and the melodrama. Burlesque is waning and the melodrama has almost disappeared, and the movies are getting most of this cheap theater going.

I am told by managers that audiences are becoming more intelligent and discriminating. The managers of good plays are not dissatisfied. They say it has been a good year for good plays. They say more people are willing to pay higher prices for good plays, but the trouble is the lack of plays.

I don't believe we are going to make the progress we ought to make against the competition of cheaper performances until the drama is brought as close to the people as the movies. When it does come it must come at somewhere nearly the same price. I think the solution is going to be in the drama league or some like organization which will encourage the giving of better drama at a reduced cost.

I think theaters are charging too much, but it is not their fault, so long as they operate under the present system of stars. Another great drawback is the long railroad jumps, with its attendant cost. I think cheaper and better drama must come from permanent acting groups paid annual salaries, instead of the fabulous sums spent to secure a particular star for certain parts. The solution will probably be found in a return to stock playing in some form.

System of Resident Companies Declared to Be Solution.

By STUART WALKER,
Manager of the Portmanteau Theater in New York.

A RETURN to the repertoire system will be the best means of stimulating more interest in the drama. The cities, I believe, will have to adopt a system of resident companies. These companies can have a repertoire of plays, say four, and when they have been given the company can take the road and play another community, while the company of another district can replace it and in turn play its plays. Moving in small circuits, much expense now borne by the larger companies of today will be eliminated and prices will be reduced. Such a system would be good for the players, too. It would give opportunity for versatility and they would not get rusty in a single part, as some of the actors of today have become.

I don't think the motion picture theater is a serious rival of the drama. Each supplies its own field. Good plays at reasonable prices will always be a paying investment for producers. If anything, the movies are going to prove a great stimulator of interest in the drama. They are teaching audiences to understand action of the play better than it has ever been understood before.

As to prices charged for the drama, I can say this: We are getting no better performances today at $2 than we got some years ago at $1.50.

"Movies Will Soon Tire of High-Priced Stars."

By J. HOWARD REBER,
President Philadelphia Center Drama League of America and Counsel for a Large Movie Corporation.

IF we are to revive interest in legitimate drama we must begin a propaganda in our universities and schools and among the intellectual and literary people in the organization of our own companies among the people for the production of the amateur play. This playing of the drama necessarily requires a deep study of it, which will cause interest among the younger people and cause them to see plays and create a desire for good plays rather than the revues and follies, for which there is so much interest today.

The competition to the drama traced to the moving picture theater will cure itself in time. The drama is suffering a bit because many of its stars have been claimed by the movies. There is a dearth of good actors for the play, because of high prices offered them by the movies. This drawing of stars from the legitimate spoken drama is a fad. It is costing the movies a great deal of money, and as a result you see many of the companies consolidating to cut down their expenses. They will tire of paying big prices for stars, for the more you give the public for a little money the more it wants. It is true that stars of the legitimate stage are not as efficient as movie actors as many trained exclusively for that work. Some of these latter can be employed for a great deal less money and the management of the film companies will return to the cheaper actors when the fad for stage stars subsides. When this commercial spirit prevails the legitimate actors will be forced back to their proper sphere at less money than when they left it.

I see no danger to legitimate drama from the movie. They are sure to bring down prices for the better drama and this will be a material benefit. I do not think the theater is charging too much for the really good productions. The person who pays $2 is not paying it for the play he is seeing. He is paying part of it to reimburse the

"A Man Can Have but One Country," Says U. S. Attorney-General

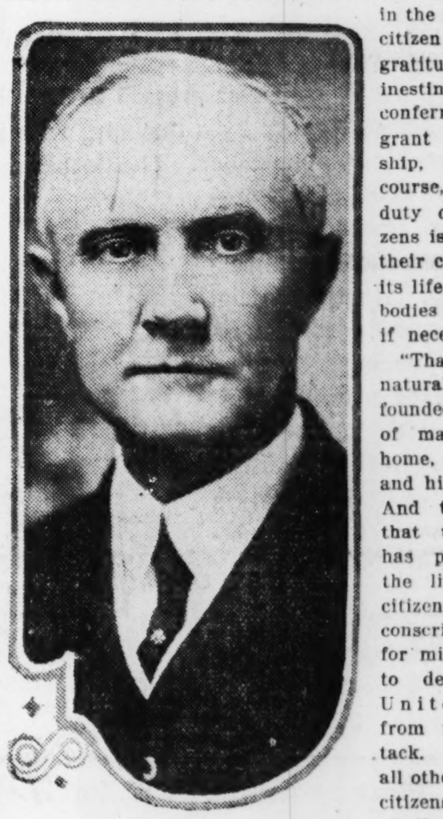
Chief Law Officer of the United States Defines Naturalization as Absolute Divorce From Previous Allegiance and Declares This Country Recognizes No Such Principle as Dual Nationality.

By Henry N. Hall.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 29.

WHEN Lord Reading, the Chief Justice of England, was leaving the United States after his visit to Washington he was asked what had impressed him most in the nation's capital. His answer was "The Attorney-General," and yet to the mass of his fellow countrymen Thomas Watt Gregory represents the unknown quantity in the Wilson Cabinet.



THOMAS W. GREGORY.
U. S. Attorney-General.

Few abler, more conscientious and above all, more retiring men have been at the head of the Department of Justice than this big hearted, clear-headed Southerner who lives in the present and the future—not in the past—a true Southerner who went West and—without noise or publicity—put the fear of the law into the trusts in Texas.

He became a special Assistant Attorney-General because of his work in the Lone Star State and was named to succeed Mr. Justice McReynolds as Attorney-General of the United States because of the consummate skill with which he prepared and handled the New Haven case. There again he was content with the consciousness of having performed a laborious work with care and thoroughness — too modest to seek that publicity which might have made him better known to the people at large.

In speech the Attorney-General is one of the most accurate men I have ever met. He speaks slowly, with a most painstaking regard for the value of every word he uses, and his legal habit of mind does not even veil, but only serves to accentuate, the almost religious earnestness and deep patriotism which animates him in all things.

Believes Naturalized Citizens Will Be Loyal in Peril

MR. GREGORY believes and believes firmly that if ever a crisis arises in the international affairs of this country the great majority of naturalized citizens would be for America first, and that their loyalty to American institutions as to the land of their adoption would be every whit as great as that of the native born. We were talking of foreign born citizens and their duties to the United States when he said:

"Our ancestors fought and died for this great country of ours. They bought and sealed it with their blood and handed it down to us as our priceless heritage. Citizenship in it is the most valuable possession a free man can have in this world. We gladly give it to all who thirst for freedom and love liberty. We throw wide open the portals of the great democracy our ancestors founded and reared on this continent, and we welcome into the citizenship of the United States all those who, casting off the shackles of subjection and renouncing all allegiance and fidelity to the country of their birth pledge themselves to support and defend our Government, our Constitution and our laws against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and to bear true allegiance to the United States.

"Naturalization of an alien gives him every right that is enjoyed by a person born, reared and educated under our own institutions. The only exception is that none but a native born American can be President of the United States. But if the rights of naturalized citizens are as great as those of native born Americans, their duties are equally clear. A naturalized citizen owes to the Government of the United States absolutely every single duty that the Government has a right to call for from its native born sons. It may almost be said that the duty of loyalty should if anything be greater in the naturalized citizen out of gratitude for the inestimable boon conferred by the grant of citizenship, and, of course, the first duty of all citizens is to protect their country and its life with their bodies and blood if necessary.

"That is the natural duty founded in love of man for his home, his mate and his offspring. And thus it is that the nation has power over the lives of its citizens and can conscript them for military duty to defend the United States from foreign attack. This and all other duties of citizenship with obedience to the Government and the laws of the land may be spelled out in the Constitution of the United States.

"A natural born American citizen has no choice or volition in the matter of his citizenship. He is an American citizen by birth and enjoys all the advantages, rights and liberties of citizenship secured by the bill of rights without any active intervention on his part. But with a naturalized citizen it is different. He is a citizen by choice and by contract. He becomes an American of his own free will. When you look into the matter closely you will see that there is not the shadow of excuse for any man to take out his citizenship papers unless he really and truly desires to renounce all allegiance to the land of his birth and to join himself with us and become an integral part of this great nation, and a stockholder, as it were, in the Government. For that is what it amounts to. The alien who is admitted to citizenship and given the priceless privilege of voting here is really admitted into partnership in the American republic.

"It would be impossible to conceive of anything more liberal than our laws in this respect. Compare the case of the naturalized alien with that of the American born citizen. We do not permit our own children to vote or take part in the Government until they have attained the age of 21 years, and they have been brought up with a knowledge of, and belief in our institutions. We take their minds as a clean page and write on them in our schools and universities the fundamental principles of our democracy, and only when the native born reaches the age of 21 is he at last admitted to the rights and prerogatives of citizenship.

Alien Can Take Out First Papers on Day of Arrival

"BUT an alien can come here with all sorts of preconceived ideas about government, ideas that may be and often are antagonistic to our American

Mrs. Ward Visits British Bases for Supplies in France

very little about our bases; about what it means to supply the veer-growing needs of the English armies in France. The military world takes what has been done for granted; the general English public supposes that the Tommies, when their days in the home camps are done, get "somehow" conveyed to the front, being "somehow" equipped, fed, clothed, nursed and mended, and sent on their way across France in interminable lines of trains. As to the details of the process, it rarely troubles its head. The fact is, however, that the work of the great supply bases abroad — of the various corps and services connected with them —army ordnance, army service, army medical railway and motor transport is a desperately interesting study; and during the past 18 months, under the "I. G. C."—Inspector-General of Communications—has developed some of the best brains in the army.

Two days spent under the guidance of the Base Commandant or of an officer of his staff among the docks and warehouses of a French port, among the huts of its reinforcement camp, which contains more men than Aldershot before August, 1914, or in its workshops of the Army Ordnance Corps gave me my first experience of the organizing power that has gone to these departments of the war. The General in command of the base was there in the first weeks of the struggle and during the great retreat. He retired with his staff to Nantes—leaving only a broken motor car behind him—just about the time that the French Government betook itself to Bordeaux. But in September he was back again, and the building up process began, which has since known neither stop nor stay. That the commercial needs of a great French port should have been able to accommodate themselves as they have to the military needs of the British army speaks loudly for the tact and good feeling on both sides. The task has not been at all times an easy one; and I could not help thinking as we walked together through the crowded scene that the tone and temper of the able man beside me—his admiration, simply expressed, yet evidently profound, for the French spirit in the war, and for the heroic unity of the country through all ranks and classes, accounted for a great deal. In the presence of a good-will so strong, difficulties disappear.

Look now at this immense hangar or storehouse—the largest in the world—through which we are walking. It was completed three years before the war, partly, it is said, by German money, to house the growing cotton trade of the port. It now houses a large proportion of the food of the British army. The hangar is half a mile long, and is bounded on one side by the docks where the ships are discharging, and on the other by the railway lines where the trains are loading up for the front.

You walk through avenues of bacon, through streets of biscuits and jam. On the quays just outside, ships from England, Canada, Norway, Argentina, Australia are pouring out their stores. Stand and watc hthe endless cranes at work, and think what English sea power means! And on the other side watch the packing of the trucks that are going to the front, the order and perfection with which the requisitions, large and small, of every regiment are supplied.

One thinks of the Crimean scandal. The ghost of Florence Nightingale seems to move beside us, watching contentedly what has come of all that long reforming labor, dealing with the health, the sanitation, the food and equipment of the soldier, in which she played her part; and one might fancy the great shade pausing specially beside the wired-in space labeled "Medical Comforts," and generally known as "The Cage." Medical NECESSARIES are housed elsewhere; but here are the dainties, the special foods, the easing appliances of all kinds which are to make life bearable to many a sorely wounded man.

As to the huge sheds of the Army Ordnance, which supply everything that the soldier doesn't eat, all metal stores —nails, horseshoes, oil cans, barbed wire—by the ton; trenching tools, wheelbarrows, pick-axes, razors, sandbags knives, screws, shovels, picketing pegs, and the like—they are, of course, endless; and the men who work in them are housed in one of the largest sheds, in tiers of bunks from floor to ceiling.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the army ordnance depot here to the outsider are the repairing sheds and workshops established in a suburb of the town to which we drive on. For this is work that has never been done before in connection with an army in the field. Day by day trains full of articles for repair come down from the front. I happened to see one, later on, leaving a station close to the fighting line. Guns, rifles, range-finders, gun-carriages, harness, all torn and useless uniforms, tents, boots by the thousand, come to this base to be repaired, or to be sent home for transformation into "shoddy" to the Yorkshire towns. Nothing seems too large or too small for Col. D.'s department. Field glasses, periscopes, water bottles, they come down from the trenches with the same certainty as a wounded howitzer or machine gun and are returned as promptly.

A Little China Dog.

In one shed my guide called my attention to shelves on which were a number of small objects in china and metal. "They were found in kits left on the field," he says, gently. "Wherever we can identify the owner, such things are carefully returned to his people. These could not be identified."

I took up a little china dog, a bit of coarse French pottery, which some dead father had bought, at Poperinghe, perhaps, or Bailleul, for the children at home. Near by were "souvenirs"—bits of shell, of German equipment; then fragments of a prayer book, a neck medallion of a saint, and so on. It was not easy to look at them calmly.

The boot and uniform sheds, where 500 French women and girls, under soldier foremen, are busy, the harness-mending room, and the engineering workshops might reassure those pessimists among us—especially of my own sex—who think that the male is naturally and incorrigibly a wasteful animal. Col. D. shows me the chart, which is the record of his work, and its steadily mounting efficiency. He began work with 140 men, he is now employing more than a thousand, and his repairing sheds are saving thousands of pounds sterling a week to the British Government. He makes all his own power and has four or five powerful dynamos at work.

We come out and tramp through the great camp which lines the slopes of the hills above the river and the town, visiting its huts, and recreation rooms, its cinema theater and its stores.

We mount to the plateau above the reinforcement camp. Here are bodies of men going through some of the last refinements of drill before they start for the front; here are trenches of all kinds and patterns, revetted in ways new and old, and planned according to the latest experience brought from the fighting line. The instructors here, as at other training camps in France, are all men returned from the front. The men to whom they have given the final touch of training—men so near themselves to the real thing—are impatient of any other sort.

As we stand beside the trenches under the bright sun and piercing wind, looking at the black lines of British soldiers, one's eyes wander, on the one side, over the great town and port over the French coast and the distant sea and, on the other side, inland, over the beautiful French landscape with its farms and country houses. BIG BOOSTERS SALE

BE A BOOSTER

SWINGS INTO ITS SECOND WEEK TOMORROW

It is a fact that even more remarkable offerings than were featured in the first week of this Big Booster Sale will be brought forward in the second week. New merchandise is being unpacked and placed on sale each day, at such money-saving prices that you will be convinced that this is one of the year's most important buying occasions. While the special items here listed are in themselves sufficient reasons for the store to be crowded, still there are hundreds of other equally good bargains not listed here, to be had, that will mean much money-saving to those who shop here tomorrow.

Nugents

one sees is steeped in history, a mingled history, in which England and France up to five centuries ago bore an almost equal share. Now again they are mingled here; all the old enmities buried in a comradeship that goes deeper far than they, a comradeship of the spirit that will surely mold the life of both nations for years to come.

How we grudged the low sweeping clouds and the closed motor, on our drive of the next day! I remember little more of it than occasional glimpses of the tall cliffs that stand sentinel along the river, a hasty look at a fine church above a steeply-built town, an army lorry stuck deep in the road, and finally the quays and ships of the base port. Our escort, Col. S., pilots us to a pleasant hotel full of officers, mostly English, belonging to the lines of communication, with a few poor wives and mothers among them who have come over to nurse their wounded in one or other of the innumerable hospitals of the base.

Before dinner the General commanding the base had found me out. I had told my story.

"Oh, we'll put some notes together for you. We were up most of last night. I dare say we shall be up most of this. But a little more or less doesn't matter." I protested most sincerely. But it is always the busiest men who shoulder the extra burdens; and the notes duly reached me. From them, from the talk of others spending their last ounce of brain and energy in the service of the base, and from the evidence of my own eyes, let me try and draw some general picture of what that service is. Suppose a British officer speaking:

"Remember first that every man, every horse, every round of ammunition, every article of clothing and equipment, all the guns and vehicles, and nearly all the food has to be brought across the British Channel to maintain and reinforce the ever-growing British army which holds now so important a share of the fighting line in France. The ports of entry are already overtaxed by the civil and military needs of France herself. Imagine how difficult it is—and how the difficulty grows daily with the steady increase of the British army—to receive, disembark, accommodate and forward the multitude of men and the masses of material!

England's Enormous Friendly Invasion.

You see the khaki in the French streets, the mingling everywhere of French and English, but the ordinary visitor can form no idea of the magnitude of this friendly invasion. There is no formal delimination of areas or spaces, in docks, or town, or railways. But gradually the observer will realize that the town is honeycombed with the temporary locations of the British army, which everywhere speckle the map hanging in the office of the garrison Quartermaster. And let him further visit the place where the long lines of reinforcement and hospital camps are installed on open ground, and old England's mighty effort will scarcely hide itself from the least intelligent. Work, efficiency, economy must be the watchwords of a base. Its functions may not be magnificent—but they are war—and war is impossible unless they are rightly carried out.

"When we came back from the Loire in September, after our temporary retreat, the British personnel of this place grew from 1100 to 11,000 in a week. Now there are thousands of troops always passing through, thousands of men in hospitals, thousands at work in the docks and storehouses. And let anyone who cares for horses go and look at the remount depot and the veterinary hospitals. The whole treatment of horses in this war has been revolutionized. Look at the cheap, ingenious stables, the comfort produced by the simplest means, the kind, quiet handling; look at the convalescent horse depots, the operating theaters and the pharmacy stores in the veterinary hospitals.

"As to the troops themselves, every regiment has its own lines, for its own reinforcements. Good food, clean cooking, civilized dining rooms, excellent sanitation—the base provides them all. It provides, too, whatever else Tommy Atkins wants, and close at hand; wet and dry canteens, libraries, recreation huts, tea and coffee huts, palatial cinemas, concerts. And what are the results? Excellent behavior, excellent relations between the British soldier and the French inhabitants; absence of all serious crime.

Depots Put Up While You Wait.

"Then look at the docks. You will see there armies of laborers and lines of ships discharging horses, timber, rations, fodder, coal, coke, petrol. Or at the stores and depots. It would take you days to get any idea of the huge quantities of stores, or of the new and ingenious means of space-economy and quick distribution. As to the works department—camps and depots are put up 'while you wait' by the R. E. officers and unskilled military labor. Add to all this the armies of clerks, dispatch riders and motor cyclists—and the immense hospital personnel—then, if you can make any intelligible picture of it in your mind, you will have some idea of what bases like these mean."

Pondering these notes, it seemed to me that the only way to get some kind of intelligible picture in two short days was to examine something in detail, and the rest in general. Accordingly we spent a long Sunday morning in the motor transport depot, which is the creation of Col. B., and perhaps as good an example as one could find anywhere in France of the organizing talent of the able British officer.

The depot opened in a theater on the thirteenth of August, 1914. "It began," says Col. B. "with a few balls of string and a bag of nails." Its staff then consisted of six officers and 91 noncommissioned officers and men—its permanent staff at present is about 500. All the drivers of some 20,000 motor vehicles are tested here, and, if necessary, instructed before going up to the fighting lines; and the depot deals with 350 different types of vehicles. In round figures 100,000 separate parts are now dealt with, stored, and arranged in the depot. The system of records and accounts is extraordinarily perfect, and so ingenious that it seems to work itself. And the whole system is very human.

Stickit Jerry's Brand of Wit.

We joined 500 of the motor drivers—about half the number in the depot in a simple Sunday service held in the Y. M. C. A. hut; and we looked afterwards into their quarters, and into the baths where the big engine of the factory (it was a German factory before the war, which gives a peculiar zest to the English occupation of it) provides a system of cheap Turkish baths for the men, as well as all the electric light used for the depot. On the wall of the engine house I see a document hanging and go to look at it. It is called "Hints to Consumers" and signed "Stickit Jerry, Manager, B. M. T. D. Electric Light Supply Co.," and contains directions for the working staff. But they are not quite of the ordinary kind.

Stickit Jerry handles his men with a pleasant wit. Electric lights, he tells them, are meant for conducting electric current, and "should not be used as clothes lines, or as means of physical culture for lightweights." Electric lamps were invented "for the giving of light, and are used in the depot only for that purpose. Consumers wishing footballs, targets, weather glasses" are advised to go elsewhere. As to switches, "any consumer wishing to study their mechanism may do so by applying to the power staff. This of course is preferable to, and less costly than the practice of breaking open switches with a view of inspecting their interiors." Consumers moreover "are not advised to burn lamps in broad daylight, as their candle-power is slightly less than that of the sun."

While I am reading the notice Stickit Jerry comes in, a fair-haired Scotchman, who looks at us in slightly abashed astonishment. The Colonel nods at him, but he is too shy to be introduced, and disappears instanter.

"I'm Getting on Fine Now."

The afternoon was spent in walking or driving round the endless camps on the plateau beyond the river, and in the wards of a Red Cross hospital. After much talk in the evening with various officers, I went up to my room to try and write, bewildered by a multitude of impressions—impressions of human energy, human intelligence, human suffer-

ITCH-ECZEMA FREE TRIAL

(Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk-Crust, Weeping Skin, etc.)

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Now, I do not care what all you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TODAY I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild, soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see I am telling you the truth.

You Must Have a Hoosier In Your Kitchen

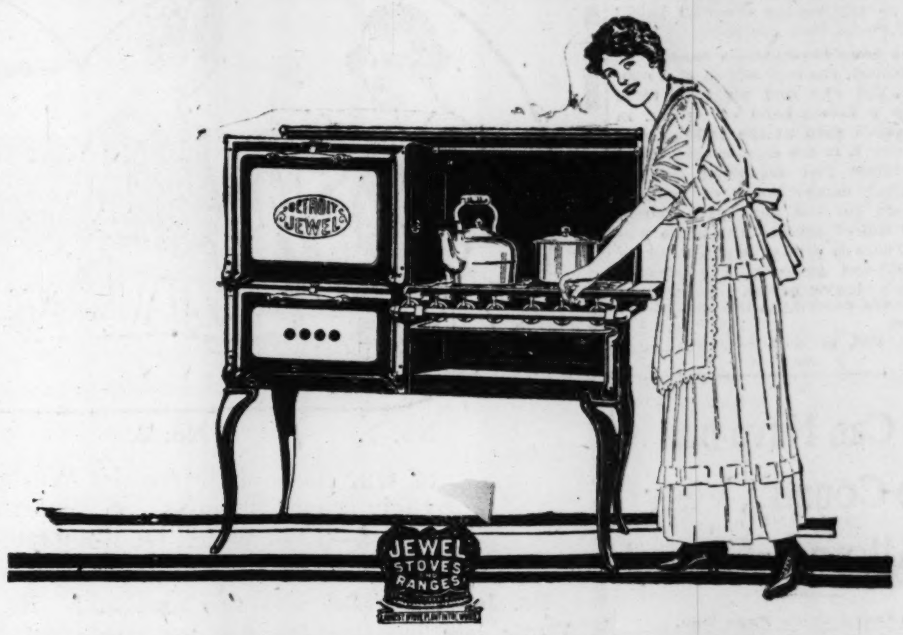
The expert judges at the San Francisco World's Fair awarded the Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet the Gold Medal, the higest award. This honor was bestowed for two reasons. First—because the Hoosier has the greatest number of labor-saving features. Second—because the Hoosier gives the greatest value for the price.

What better proof could you ask that you should have a Hoosier in your kitchen?

No more running back and forth. Just sit in front of your Hoosier and do your kitchen work in half the usual time.
The Hoosier is the sanitary cabinet. The housewife can easily take it entirely apart for cleaning and airing.

The Hoosier is constructed as solidly and finished as finely as a piece of high-grade parlor furniture. Science has arranged the interior so that everything you need in the kitchen is put right at your fingers' ends.

Come in and see why a million women are today using Hoosiers. The several models are priced from $13.50 to $43.00. A single dollar will put a Hoosier in your kitchen. The balance a dollar a week.



This Nationally Advertised Special Value Detroit Jewel Gas Range for $29.75

When you see this Detroit Jewel Special you'll agree with us that it is the most unusual Range value you ever looked at.
In every way this Range matches up with the most expensive Ranges. Yet the price—due to quantity production—is much lower than such a Gas Range has ever been sold for. You can have this Range with oven on either the right or left side.

Finish
Finished in baked Ebonite—a rich, velvety, durable finish baked on at a high temperature. Adds years to the life of the Range by forming an impervious coating against rust and corrosion. Makes the metal surface sanitary and easily cleaned. Has white porcelain oven and broiler door panels and porcelain broiler drip pan and tray.

Construction
Double walls of heavy gauge steel with intervening air spaces.

Cooking Top
Five top burners, including giant and simmering burner. Plenty of room to use all the burners without crowding.

Ovens
Patent construction with removable linings. Two two-line burners, each controlled by separate valve. Oven measure, 16x18x12 inches. Broiler, 16x18x9 inches.

Special Values Featured in Our Rug and Drapery Section

House-cleaning time always means some replenishing of floor coverings and draperies. We thought of that six months ago when prices were away down low. It's a good thing that we bought heavily at that time, for today prices are away up. So you see why we are offering values that, in the light of present scarcity of goods and high prices, are truly remarkable. Of course, these prices apply only on the goods now on hand.

ing. What England is doing in this war will leave, it seems to me, indelible marks upon the national character. I feel a natural pride and exultation, as I sit thinking about it, in this French spectacle, in all this English efficiency and intelligence, and in the consciousness of our fellowship with France, and hers with us. The first attacks on Verdun are going on and I read and reread every word of the telegrams in the newspaper I have brought upstairs.

But the two impressions which hold me most sharply and pass with me into sleep are—first, the vision of a young officer I had seen that afternoon, lying like wax upon his pillows, exhausted by severe hemorrhage after amputation. His young wife stands beside him, and I venture to speak to her. He himself looks up and smiles, "Oh, thank you, I'm getting on fine now." The wife says—so that he does not hear, "But he suffers so much—such dreadful pain." And her young face contracts.

The Song the Soldiers Sang.

And, second, the recollection of a canteen worked day and night in three shifts by a heroic band of women, in an old goods shed at the railway station. I saw it in the dark evening filled with soldiers just departing for the front, after many hours of waiting. They were for the most part young, gay and full of spirits. The piano was going. There is always a performer to be found, and generally a good one. Some were playing games, some writing letters, some enjoying a last cup of tea or coffee.

Man Can Have but One Country, View of Attorney-General

ideal. We do not seek to erase these false conceptions from his mind before we write in the things for which America stands. An alien can come to this country, can take out his first naturalization papers on the very day that he lands, and after five years' continuous residence he becomes an American citizen. No other country ever had such liberal naturalization laws.

"Do you recall how after Paul the Apostle had been mobbed in the temple at Jerusalem he continued to speak to the people from the steps outside, and was seized by the chief captain, who ordered him to be scourged? And when they had bound him he turned to the Centurion who stood near and told him not to dare to lay stripes upon a Roman citizen; and the Centurion hurried to the Chief Captain, who came to Paul and said, 'Tell me, art thou a Roman citizen?' and Paul answered, 'Yea.' Then the Chief Captain, loking upon the poorly clad Apostle, said, 'With a great sum obtained I this citizenship.' Yet when Paul answered, 'But I am a Roman born,' the Chief Captain was afraid, because he had been found."

The Attorney-General knows his Bible well. He is a deeply religious man, and yet there is one thing for which he will neglect even his spiritual duties. Every Saturday night he carries away from the Department of Justice an armful of papers and shuts himself up with them in his library at home. They are applications for pardon, on which he, as Attorney-General, has to pass. He cannot bear the thought of a man kept in prison who ought really to be free, and he personally passes on all pardon cases before he takes time for recreation, rest or even religious observances.

As he pictured to me the great value that attached to Roman citizenship he did it in the very language of the New Testament. He is not lacking in Biblical lore, and there appeared to be the makings of a preacher divine in this the first law officer of the republic as he drove home his point and said:

"Roman citizenship was never granted except in return for a great sum of money or as a reward for great service rendered to the State. In the United States nothing is required, roughly, except a knowledge of the English language and five years' continuous residence.

"A man has but one country, can have but one country. The oath of naturalization eliminates the consideration of any other country. The United States never has recognized and never will recognize legislation by foreign countries permitting their subjects to retain their original allegiance and at the same time obtain citizenship in the United States. So there can be no such thing as a dual allegiance or a dual citizenship. There can be no reservation, no retention of any former allegiance.

"The status in American law and in international law of the former subjects of a foreign prince or potentate who become citizens of the United States does not in any respect differ from that of a native born American citizen. Their rights and duties are governed by the Constitution and the laws of the United States. A foreign official may not advise them any more than any other American citizen as to the manner in which they are to exercise their rights or perform their duties as American citizens, and any attempt to interfere in the internal affairs of the country by representatives of a foreign Government would be contrary to the law and comity of nations.

"It is the natural and unalienable rights of every free person who owes no debts and is not guilty of any crime to leave the country of his birth, and for an honest purpose to throw off his natural allegiance and substitute in its place another allegiance of his own choice. That is one of the fundamental principles of international law which springs from natural reason and justice, from the practice of all civilized nations.

Significance of Naturalization.

"There is and can be no such thing as perpetual allegiance. What a people as a whole can do the individuals comprising that people can do severally and on their own initiative. In the United States, ever since our independence, we have upheld and maintained the rights of expatriation by every form of words and acts, and upon the fact of the pledge which we have given to its millions of men who have staked their lives for liberty and their happiness.

"Naturalization signifies the act of adopting a foreigner who has stripped himself of his natural allegiance and is clothed by us with all the privileges of a native citizen.

"The United States has never departed from the principles laid down by Attorney-General Black in the Ernst case, in which he stated that in the United States the thought of abandoning or in any way lessening the full protection of the United States to naturalized citizens over whom the country of their birth claimed rights would never be entertained for a moment, because it was on the very principle of naturalization that this country was populated. We owe to it our existence as a nation; we have constantly promised full and complete protection to all persons who should come here and seek our citizenship by renouncing their natural allegiance and transferring their fealty to us. The only distinction between the native born and the naturalized citizen is that none but a native born American can be President of the United States. But in regard to the protection of our citizens in their rights at home or abroad, under the Constitution of the United States, or in international law, there is no difference whatever between them. A native and a naturalized American may, therefore, go forth with equal security over every sea and through every land under heaven, including the country in which the naturalized citizen is born. They are both equally American citizens; their exclusive allegiance is due to the Government of the United States.

"One of them never did owe fealty elsewhere; the other at the time of his naturalization as an American citizen solemnly and rightfully, in accordance with international law and with the Constitution and laws of the United States, threw off, renounced and abjured forever all allegiance to the foreign prince or states under which he was born. This works a complete and final dissolution of every tie that bound him to his native country. It is an absolute divorce!

"Until a man gets to the point where he sincerely commits himself to the institutions of this country there is no justification in common honesty for his making the change. He comes here, and if, having lived in our midst, he loves our country and our institutions, he offers himself, I might almost say, as a bridegroom prepared to give that love which he asks of us.

"Our immigration laws give the privilege of entry and dwelling with large civil rights and full protection of our laws to all free white persons and persons of African blood and descent, healthy in body and mind, who are neither paupers, beggars, criminals, anarchists, polygamists, prostitutes, panderers, procurers or contract laborers.

"An alien who comes here enjoys the protection of our laws as fully and as absolutely as an American citizen. He is under no surveillance and no restraint is placed upon his movements or restriction on the place of his abode. He can come and go at his pleasure, subject only to our immigration laws. He can travel and conduct his business here, buy property and in many states own land, and he will be under no obligations other than that of obedience to our laws. If, however, he does declare his intention of becoming a citizen, or has take out his first papers, as it is called even before he perfects his right to full citizenship, he is freely given in many states the right to vote and take part in the government of our country, just as if he were really a citizen.

"In the State of Alabama an alien who has declared his intention to become a citizen and who has lived in the State for two years, is made a voter. In Arkansas the first papers and one year's residence is all that is necessary to entitle a man to vote. In Indiana an alien, on declaring his intention to become a naturalized citizen, if he lives in the State, is entitled to vote six months after making the declaration. In Kansas the declaration and six months' residence is all that is required, and in Missouri the time of residence is fixed at one year. In Nebraska first papers and six months' residence are required.

"An alien does not have to go to any specific court of naturalization in order to acquire American citizenship. He can go before any United States Court in any State or in Hawaii or Alaska or before the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, or he can go into any State or territory before any court of record having a seal, a clerk and jurisdiction of the law, or in equity in which the amount of controversy is not limited. There are perhaps a thousand places where an alien can take out his first papers and file his declaration of intention to become an American citizen.

"In order to obtain his first papers all the alien has to do is to make oath before the clerk of any court authorized to receive such declarations, or before the authorized deputy of the clerk in the district in which the alien resides, that in good faith and sincerity it is his intention to renounce forever, all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, State or sovereignty, and particularly to the sovereign of which he is a subject; that he is not an anarchist, polygamist or believer in the practice of polygamy, and that it is his intention in good faith to become a citizen of the United States of America, and to permanently reside therein.

"In case the alien applying to be admitted to citizenship has borne any hereditary title or has been of any of the orders of nobility in the kingdom or State from which he came, he shall, in addition, make an express renunciation of his title or order of nobility when taking out his first papers.

"When any alien who has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States dies before he is actually naturalized, the widow and minor children of such alien may be naturalized without making any declaration of intention.

"The provision that a knowledge of the English language is a prerequisite of citizenship does not apply for the taking out of first papers, and it is waived altogether in cases where aliens are physically unable to comply therewith or to those who shall make homestead entries upon the public lands of the United States and comply in all respects with the law providing for homestead entry on such lands."

GERMANS FIND WAY TO MAKE THREAD FROM LUPINE (ALFALFA)

Machinery Perfected and So Much Importance Placed Upon Discovery That It Gets Government Approval.

BERLIN, April 29.—Thread and filament of a practical, usable kind can be made from the stalks of the common, and in Germany very plentiful, lupine, a legume belonging to the alfalfa family. Two men who have made the discovery after careful investigations, and a captain who has perfected a machine for the process, have taken out patents, and the Prussian Ministry of Agriculture has issued an appeal to farmers to plant as much lupine as possible this coming spring.

The discovery is especially welcome at this time, when thread is scarce. It is more so since experiments have proven that the best thread from the lupine comes from the mature plant, which means that the lupine culture will not have to be checked, at the expense of the seed, in order to obtain thread. Nor does threshing injure the thread part of the stalk in the least.

Capt. von Bluecher's machine, just invented, can be moved from farm to farm, much as a threshing machine is moved, so that the lupine grown on each estate can be handled there without any transportation difficulties. After the thread material has been extracted from the stalk the remainder is available as straw for bedding, etc.

CAN'T BEAT "TIZ" WHEN FEET HURT

A Swell Affair

TODAY'S BEAUTY HINT

It is not necessary to shampoo quite so frequently if your hair is properly cleansed each time by use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers may be prepared very cheaply by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox, obtained from your druggist, in a cup of hot water. This rubbed into the scalp creats a thick lather, soothing and cooling in its action, as well as beneficial to scalp and hair. After rinsing the scalp is fresh and clean, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy—ADV.

STOP DANDRUFF FALLING HAIR AND ITCHING SCALP

The best hair tonic, scalp cleaner and invigorator is found in Plain Yellow Minyol. After one or two applications of this splendid pomade the scalp is rendered free of all irritations and the hair cells are put in healthy condition. A luxuriant hair growth is the result. Nothing is better than Plain Yellow Minyol to thoroughly cleanse the scalp. It contains no oils or alcohol and is perfectly harmless. —ADV.

DO IT NOW, IS ONE OF THE RULES FOR CLEAN-UP WEEK

And Keep It Up, Is Motto for Campaign Which Will Open Week From Tomorrow.

CITY TO COLLECT RUBBISH

One Object Is to Make St. Louis Spick and Span for Democratic National Convention.

Work of making St. Louis spick and span for the Democratic national convention, which will be held at the Coliseum beginning June 14, will start a week from tomorrow. It will continue all next week, and city wagons will collect rubbish throughout the city.

The motto for the clean-up and paint-up campaign is "Clean Up and Paint Up, and Keep It Up."

Director of Streets and Sewers Talbert, who has the work in charge, has asked that every person pass the word along to neighbors and that all clean up their own premises, removing all rubbish from the cellar, house, garret, yard, stable and any other place. The public is directed to observe the following rules, which will aid materially in the collection of rubbish:

Have all rubbish placed in receptacles that can be easily handled.

Compress the rubbish as much as possible.

Place the receptacles in the alley, in plain view, or if no alley, place at the curb.

Don't place rubbish in loose piles.

Don't wait to clean up; do it now.

Don't mix rubbish with ashes.

Don't expect the ashes or garbage to be hauled by the clean-up crews.

Don't expect the wagons to wait for you.

Collection Starts May 8.

The collection wagons will start on Monday, May 8, at the western boundary of the city and work eastwardly. Ashes or garbage will not be accepted by the city wagons. Inquiries regarding clean-up plans, or suggestions, may be made by phone to Lindell 310 or Delmar 61, which is the city stable at Vandeventer avenue and Forest Park boulevard.

G. F. A. Brueggeman, president of the Municipal Art Commission, has urged the removal of the unsightly and useless shed and high board fence, which he considers is now antiquated and a nuisance under the present conditions of civic development. "The high board fence and the unused shed," said Brueggeman, "is a menace to health and endangers property from fire loss. The shed is no longer used and is only a rubbish accumulator, while the high fence prevents the grass from growing on the lawn and has a tendency toward making people careless with the condition of their backyard, in that it hides the untidy and insanitary condition. An ordinance should be introduced prohibiting a fence, other than wire, and from building wooden sheds. The lawn should extend to the alley and be well sodded. If St. Louis would do this we would soon have an ideal city. The lawns would have the appearance of a large park."

A number of St. Louis business men spent three days in Cape Girardeau last week inaugurating a clean-up and paint-up campaign in connection with the fire prevention movement.

Health Department Helps.

The Health Department is co-operating in the clean-up campaign, under the direction of Dr. Max Starkloff and Dr. G. A. Jordan and the State Food and Drug Department, under the direction of Fred H. Fricke, Commissioner, is aiding.

Mrs. Eugene Sensenney is chairman of the Fly Extermination Committee, which is paying 10 cents per hundred for all flies killed and delivered to the Consumers' League headquarters. After May 6 the price will be 10 cents per pint.

The Woman's Council, an organization composed of 63 women's clubs, will have charge of the vacant lot improvements, with Mrs. Gus V. R. Mechin as chairman. This committee is actively engaged in getting the consent of owners to remove the rubbish and turn over lots to the St. Louis Continuous Clean-Up and Paint-Up Campaign for flower gardens, vegetable gardens, tennis courts, playgrounds, baseball diamonds, sand boxes, quoits, weed elimination, sodding, trees and shrubs, bird houses and removal of unsightly advertising.

SAFETY EXHIBIT HERE JUNE 2-3

Government Train of 12 Cars Will Make Two-Day Stop.

The special train of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, containing the National Safety Exhibit of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be parked in St. Louis June 2 and 3.

This train, consisting of 12 steel passenger cars, contains exhibits of all departments of the Government—army, navy, lighthouse, Interstate Commerce Commission, etc. Working models illustrate the manner in which the various safety devices are used and employes of the Government will be present to explain them.

The Ideal Wedding Gift.

A fine diamond. You will never miss the money if you purchase on credit. Loftis Bros. & Co., 2d floor, 308 N. 6th st. Open evenings.

FISH HOOK STORY EXPOSED

PARIS, April 29.—Pieces of metal resembling prongs of fish hooks, discovered in bags of oats imported from America for the French army, caused something of a sensation a few weeks ago. An enemy plot was suspected.

It has transpired that the bits of metal in the oats were waste bits from a French factory where horseshoe nails are made. They were picked up by the bags from an imperfectly cleaned car. The metal pieces found in the corned beef were pins used to attach labels to quarters of beef and found their way accidentally into the boxes.

FAMOUS-BARR R

"MAY is OUR month," says Mr. David May, president of Famous-Barr Co., who recently issued an edict to make the May sales this year of greater significance & greater import than ever before. "The name of MAY, during the month of May in particular," he says, "should stand for the utmost in value-giving," & with this thought in mind all of the May stores—in Cleveland, Denver, Akron, & Famous-Barr Co. in St. Louis, enlisted the full strength & influence of our combined & mighty buying power to bring the people of these various communities the most extraordinary values ever presented in a May sale.

Heretofore, the May sales have mostly been directed to merchandise of white, but this year our efforts extend to every one of our 125 departments. Despite the sharp price advances on practically all classes of goods, we will enthusiastically launch our 1916 May Sales on the most comprehensive scale in our history with values that will again forcefully & emphatically demonstrate the actual benefits that accrue to you & to every St. Louisan as a result of our surpassing purchasing ability.

Three big announcements today carry the details—the offerings in each paper being necessarily different. The following are listed:

"AS YOU LIKE IT" SEATS 10C—$2.50; SOME TO BE FREE

Eight Performances, Directed by Pageant Drama Association, On Forest Park Stage.

PRODUCTION JUNE 5—11

Distribution of a Half Million Leaflets Announcing the Production Is Begun.

The St. Louis Pageant Drama Association yesterday began the distribution of 500,000 copies of a four-page leaflet announcing that "St. Louis will celebrate the 300th anniversary of the death of William Shakspeare by producing in the open air, June 5 to 11, 1916, under the direction of the Pageant Drama Association, with a cast of 1000 persons, headed by Margaret Anglin, Shakspeare's great outdoor comedy, "As You Like It," and a 30-minute prologue showing May-day revels of Shakspeare's time."

This leaflet, designed under supervision of Miss Charlotte Rumbold, chairman of the Committee on Community Interest and Publicity, reveals that the matinee performance will take place Saturday, June 10, that the seats for the matinee will range in price from 10 cents to $2, while the evening prices will be 25 cents to $2.50, and that, although the box office sale will not be open until the middle or latter part of May, mail orders will be received immediately.

Two thousand of the 10,000 seats for each performance will be free. The scale of prices for the others follow:

Evening—Box seats, $2.50; other seats, $2, $1.50, $1, 50 cents and 25 cents. Boxes seating six, $15. Matinee—Box seats, $2; other seats, $1.50, $1, 50 cents, 25 cents and 10 cents. Boxes seating six, $12.

Mail Order Regulation.

The leaflet specifies that mail orders shall be sent to the association's headquarters, 329-35 Security Building, and promises that they will be "filed in the order of their receipt and filled prior to the box office sale." John H. Gundlach, president of the association, has secured for the box office sale the use of the storeroom at the northwest corner of Seventh and Olive streets.

One page of the leaflet has a mail order form on which may be indicated the number of seats wanted for one or more of the performances and at what price. The sale of seats will be under direction of Horace M. Swope, chairman of the Committee on Admissions.

"Many of the great cities of the world are commemorating the Shakspeare tercentenary, but St. Louis alone has undertaken the production, pageant-like in scope, of one of Shakspeare's own plays," the leaflet states. "As You Like It" never before has been presented, at least in America, by so large a company.

"The principal actors besides Miss Anglin will include such famous Shakspearean players as Robert B. Mantell, who has been engaged to play the part of Jaques, companion of the exiled Duke. Miss Anglin, of course, will play Rosalind. All the principals besides Miss Anglin will be prominent professionals of her selection.

Amateurs to Take Part.

"The members of the cast other than principals will be St. Louis amateurs—accomplished dancers, singers and actors from every section of the city. St. Louis has become famous for community co-operation in its community recreation. The same spirit that made the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis the greatest success of its kind in the world's history and has shown itself in the Christmas celebrations on Twelfth street, assures the most unique Shakspeare celebration this year in America.

"The 'As You Like It' performances, eight in number (one a matinee), will take place in Forest Park, but not at Art Hill, where, in 1914, the St. Louis Pageant Drama Association produced the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the city's founding.

"Another natural auditorium, because smaller, is considered preferable for the presentation of a play written by so great a master of words as Shakspeare and so has been selected for the Shakspearean celebration. Although the smaller auditorium seats 10,000 persons, Miss Anglin, when standing on the site of the stage and speaking scarcely above the tone that she uses for the theater, was easily heard in all parts of the auditorium. The auditorium chosen is almost in the center of the park. It is about 400 feet east of the old Pagoda Lake and almost midway between the Union and De Baliviere avenue entrances.

"The May-day revels preceding the play will be enacted by 250 St. Louisans, attired in Elizabethan costumes, and will include folk dancing and singing. This Elizabethan festival will take place on the dancing green, a second stage between the main stage and the seats of the spectators. At the conclusion of the prologue those taking part in it will be seated as a Shakspearean audience.

"Shakspearean songs will be sung by the St. Louis Pageant Choral Society, with orchestral accompaniment.

"Apparatus for illuminating the stage with flood light will be concealed in trees in the manner so successfully used in the 'Pageant and Masque' of St. Louis.

"Most of the scenery will be natural, since 'As You Like It' requires garden and forest backgrounds. Because of its outdoor settings this play is considered better adapted to presentation in the open air than any any other Shakspearean comedy.

Improvements Permanent.

"Unlike the improvements for the 'Pageant and Masque,' those for the 'As You Like It' performances are to be permanent. By virtue of a special ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen, the Pageant Drama Association is defraying all expenses in connection with the construction of the stage, auditorium and other improvements on account of the Shakspearean celebration. It is to be permitted to reimburse itself by charging admission, but 2000 seats for each performance will be free. After the Shakspeare celebration the auditorium is to become the property of the city. Thenceforth it is to be open to groups of St. Louisans for any form of wholesome entertainment to which no admission fee is charged.

"Depending entirely on the seat sale for reimbursal, the association will not ask donations."

Most of the half million copies of the leaflet will be used by St. Louis business concerns as inserts for letters and packages. Being for insurance alike to St. Louisans and others, the leaflet has been offered to wholesalers as well as retailers. Copies of it also will be distributed through St. Louis civic and commercial organizations to their members and through St. Louis schools to their pupils.

If Too Fat Get More Fresh Air

BE MODERATE IN YOUR DIET AND REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT. TAKE OIL OF KOREIN.

Lack of fresh air, it is said, weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, the liver becomes sluggish, fat accumulates and the action of many of the vital organs are hindered thereby. The heart action becomes weak, work is an effort and the beauty of the figure is destroyed.

Fat put on by indoor life is unhealthy, and if nature is not assisted in throwing it off, a serious case of obesity may result.

When you feel that you are getting too stout, take the matter in hand at once. Don't wait until your figure has become a joke and your health ruined through carrying around a burden of unsightly and unhealthy fat.

Spend as much time as you possibly can in the open air, breathe deeply, and get from Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. or any druggist a box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself every few days and keep up the treatment until you are down to normal. Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, helps the digestion, and even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight.—ADV.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S HEAD AND FACE

Started With Little Pimples. Spread All Over Her Face, Head and Neck and Got Real Sore.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My little daughter had a bad case of eczema on her head and face when she was five months old. She took it with just a few little red pimples, and it started from that and spread all over her face, head and neck. They got real sore and she would scratch as they would itch her so much. She was terribly cross and fretful.

"While it lasted, her face was disfigured. She could not sleep or rest until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I started with just a free sample and it relieved her so I purchased more and about two months after, she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Alice Wilbarger, R. F. D. 4, Alliance, Ohio, July 26, 1915.

AT STODDARD SCHOOL 34 YEARS

Will of Former Teacher, 87 Years Old, Filed for Probate.

Miss Frances Gruber, whose will was filed for probate yesterday, taught the highest class at the Stoddard School from 1870 to 1904. Her record of 34 years of service in one school was an unusual one, according to officials of the Board of Education.

Miss Gruber was 87 years old when she died, April 18, at Santa Ana, Cal., at the Santa Ana Hospital. At her prior direction her body was taken to Moosup, Conn., for burial beside that of her sister, Mrs. George Lovegrove, the funeral being held last Wednesday. Her will appoints the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. as executor, and divides her estate between her two nieces, Mrs. Mansur and Mrs. Emma Weston of Newark, N. J.

Substitution—an Evil Influence

WHEN buying grass rugs guard against fraudulent imitations. Prove to your own satisfaction that the rug offered is the genuine CREX. They are easy to identify. Unless the name C-R-E-X is woven in the edge of the side binding you are being offered a substitute. There are no "just as goods". Insist on the genuine CREX and thus avoid an inferior article offered because of larger profit.

CREX rugs are made of specially cured and selected strong, pliant wire-grass. They're sanitary, artistic, durable, economical, seamless and reversible—easy to keep clean. Ideal for every room in the home through all seasons, as well as the porch.

CREX is patented and fully protected under U. S. Govt. Copyright. We will prosecute relentlessly dealers guilty of fraudulent substitution or wilful misrepresentation.

BARTHOLDT FAILS TO GET HIMSELF ELECTED DELEGATE

Stifel-Koeln Slate Is Too Strong for the Former Congressman to Break.

The attempt of former Congressman Richard Bartholdt, with the help of the Kiel-Schmoll-Graves faction of the Republican City organization, to break the Stifel-Koeln slate in the Tenth District congressional convention at Clayton yesterday for the election of two delegates to the Republican national convention at Chicago, failed completely.

Bartholdt and his backers found upon their arrival at Clayton that three-fourths of the 178 delegates to the convention were pledged to support Otto F. Stifel and State Senator A. E. L. Gardner of St. Louis County for delegates to the Chicago convention, and that his cause was hopeless. He then pleaded with Stifel and Koeln to elect him temporary chairman of the convention, but they turned him down. His name went before the Congressional Committee, where Republican City Chairman, John Schmoll, made a strong plea for him, but he was defeated by a vote of 11 to 10. Former Judge Matt G. Reynolds was elected temporary chairman by the committee, and was made permanent chairman by the convention.

Bartholdt Anxious to Go.

Bartholdt sat in the convention as a delegate from the Thirteenth Ward, Chairman Schmoll's ward. He has been active in the promotion of German propaganda in the United States, and was eager to go to the national convention in the hope of getting on the Resolutions Committee. He previously had sought to be elected delegate-at-large, the German-American Alliance of Missouri and of St. Louis, making a plea for him. He was turned down by the party organization.

Bartholdt, formerly president of the Interparliamentary Union for the Promotion of International Pace, soon after the European war wanted the United States to declare war upon England because the British censors had opened some of his letters passing to or from Germany.

The convention yesterday, by the election of Stifel and Gardner, completed the roll of Missouri's 36 delegates to the national convention. All the delegates, including the four at large, are uninstructed.

Majority for Weeks.

A majority of the delegates are said to be for United States Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts for President. Some of the delegates likely will support Hughes, and some may vote for T. Coleman du Pont of Delaware. The delegates will hold a caucus some time before the national convention and probably try to reach an agreement upon a presidential candidate.

The delegates who will represent Missouri in the selection of the Republican candidate for President and Vice President and in the making of the next Republican platform, are:

At large—Former Gov. Herbert S. Hadley, Kansas City; John C. McKinley, Unionville, and John Schmoll and Thomas K. Niedringhaus, St. Louis.

First District—Berryman Henwood, Hannibal, and W. G. Robinson, La Plata.

Second District—E. L. Marshall, Chillicothe, and Lenny Baldridge, Milan.

Third District—E. L. Morse, Excelsior Springs, and Ezra H. Frisby, Bethany.

Fourth District—Ralph O. Stauber, St. Joseph, and D. W. Porter, Mound City.

Fifth District—Thomas R. Marks and C. C. Madison, Kansas City.

Sixth District—D. H. Kirk, Harrisonville, and Charles A. Hendricks, Stockton.

Seventh District—Holmes Hall, Sedalia, and W. S. Wade, Springfield.

Eighth District—David W. Peters, Jefferson City, and Dr. G. W. Duncan, Iberia.

Ninth District—T. W. Hukreide, Warrenton, and John C. Brown, Wentzville.

Tenth District—Otto F. Stifel, St. Louis, and A. E. L. Gardner, Clayton.

Eleventh District—Fred Beckmann and A. C. Kunze, St. Louis.

Twelfth District—L. C. Dyer and William Zachritz, St. Louis.

Thirteenth District—S. G. Nipper, Potosi and George S. Stanfill, Bonne Terre.

Fourteenth District—Sam Ulen, Dexter, and W. P. Sullivan, Billings.

Fifteenth District—Wallace Porter, Carthage, and J. M. McAnuty, Neosho.

Sixteenth district—L. J. Ellis, Mountain Grove, and Harry Clymer, Steelville.

Tenth District Resolutions.

The resolutions adopted by the Tenth District convention are:

"We, the Republicans of the Tenth Congressional District, in convention assembled, reaffirm our faith in the principals and policies of the Republican party as enunciated in the national platform of 1912 and of the State platform recently adopted at Excelsior Springs.

"We favor a speedy return to the policy of protection to American labor by the enactment of a tariff law which will equalize the difference between wages at home and abroad.

"We favor adequate preparedness of our military and naval forces for the defense of our own country, but we likewise favor honorable peace with all the nations of the world, with no entangling alliances, and, in the language of Abraham Lincoln, 'with charity to all and malice toward none.'

"We advocate the enactment of laws providing for the early establishment of an American merchant marine and international agreements vouchsafing freedom of the seas.

"We respectfully decline the invitation of the Wilson Club of St. Louis to join their organization, but herewith extend a cordial invitation to all Democrats to join hands with us for the purpose of electing a Republican President who will enforce policies vouchsafing the prosperity of the American people and the maintenance of peace and the good will and friendship of all the nations of the world.

"We have every confidence in the delegates to be selected by this convention and hereby announce it as our purpose that they go uninstructed."

ONE YEAR OLD

The Lindell's First Anniversary Sale

THE LINDELL STORE IS JUST ONE YEAR OLD

What a sturdy institution it has grown into in this short twelve months of value-giving and of service to the community.

To become established as "The Center of Economy" within as short a time is indeed an achievement. To be so favorably known for its DEPENDABLE MERCHANDISE and its unparalleled LOW PRICES is a measure of the approval which the generous public has given.

On the eve of its First Anniversary, it seems quite fitting that this institution is given new life blood augmented capital to more richly endow it for its future growth.

Many plans are about to be matured by the NEW MANAGEMENT, which assures this store a wonderful growth and greater usefulness during its second year.

In commemoration of having passed the first milestone in its career, we have planned a great BIRTHDAY PARTY—a carnival of value-giving that will make new selling history to St. Louis and serve to introduce LINDELL VALUES and LINDELL MERCHANDISE METHODS to thousands of people.

HEATHER IN GAS ATTACKS

PARIS, April 29.—The largely increased exportation of heather from Denmark to Germany was supposed to have been due to the need of the Germans for a substitute for forage. It was also said that tea was made from the heather blossoms.

A German soldier, native of Schleswig, explains that the heather is placed in front of particularly exposed trenches and set afire on the approach of gas clouds. The burning heather heats the air, which, in expanding, disperses the poisonous vapors, he says.

Recital by McHale Music Pupils.

Remove Hair Under Arms

This method for removing superfluous hair is totally different from pastes and rub-on preparations, which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. To rob hair of its vitality you must use De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory. It attacks hair under the skin, as well as on the skin. Imitations of De Miracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that De Miracle alone contains which give it the power to devitalize hair. Well groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from limbs and under arms, as well as from face, neck and arms. Insist on the genuine De Miracle and you will get the best hair remover ever offered the public. ELITE STYLES says: "It is worthy of the highest praise." Genuine magazines of the highest character indorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called indorsements of bogus magazines used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories. Buy De Miracle by name and you will avoid disappointment. Furthermore, you will get the only depilatory that contains a binding guarantee which entitles you to your money if it fails. In 50c, $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you buy a bottle at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. P-7, Park Av. and 129th St., New York.—ADV.

"More Melody" is exceptionally so.

London's Bereaved Miss Funerals.

LONDON, April 29.—What the people of East London miss so much when they have relatives lost in the war is the funeral, declared the Bishop of London the other day. He told of a woman who had lost her husband in a ship disaster who felt that she must do something, so she bought a wreath and placed it at the foot of Nelson's Monument in Trafalgar Square.

How to Make the Legitimate Drama Prosperous Again producer for the seven or eight failures tried before a "hit" was obtained.

"Movies Purging Theater of All That's Bad in It."

By BARRETT H. CLARK,
Editor and Author of "Contemporary French Dramatists."

DO not cheat the road of a first-class New York performance. Give the other cities of the land as good a company as plays New York, because many of these cities pay even more than they do in the East for witnessing the play.

I do not consider the "movie" a serious rival of the legitimate theater, in fact it is a benefit to the more serious work. The motion picture play producers are gradually finding what they can and cannot do, and it is found the best thing they are doing is purging the theater of all that is bad in them.

I do not think the theater is charging too much. Many want to pay $2 for a seat, and they ought to be allowed to do so. These same people would pay more, they don't care to go to a cheap show, so why not put the price up for them?

On the other hand, I believe the balcony and gallery seats ought to be much cheaper. I say raise some seat prices, but lower the others, so that students, school children and art lovers may have opportunity to become regular patrons, as they do in Europe.

WITH 600 ES WELCOMES RITISH VICTORS

Strange Dance Given for Soldiers in a Province of the Kameruns.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS, Fumban, Kamerun, Africa, April 10.—A reception and dance was given to the British force by the King of Fumban shortly after the capture of this province from the German forces. The function was featured by a speech from the throne and the taking of a photograph of the King and his 600 wives and 149 children.

Soon after the last of the fighting in the province the conquerors accepted an invitation from the King to visit the palace grounds, which open on the market place. Here they were met by the King dressed in new flowing robes of blue, with a blue muffler tied round his neck. After the soldiers were lined up at seats on either side of the market place the King made a short speech, first in his native tongue and then in pidgin English, admonishing his subjects to be kind and courteous to the conquerors.

n the dance began. The orchestra made up chiefly of various sized s made of hollow trees and ched skins. The only other instru was a species of rattle with which of the natives were armed and which they kept remarkable time. or seven men started the ball with a e shuffle varied by a few more en ic motions. Some were dressed in looked like blue overalls and oth ere in red, the garments reaching n the heels to the tip of the nose. ch man carried on his head carved k heads, all white and about two high. Round the neck of each k was a large collar or ruff made me wool fiber a foot thick. Round ankles they wore similar ruffs.

he men advanced to the King, bed their masks in the dust and n started the double shuffle. After ng this for some time the orchestra the native audience getting more more excited, six of the King's la s appeared on the scene. They were ered much like the men except that their heads they wore curious masses wood fiber topped by large bunches black feathers. They went through e same motions as the men for nearly hour before making way for the ing's photographer.

ut This Out

ld English Recipe for Catarrhal eafness nd Head Noises.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires a constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear, which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease is driven down the air passages towards the lungs, which is equally as dangerous. The following formula, which is used extensively in the damp English climate, is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climate conditions.

Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength). Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint is used in this way as it acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a slight tonic action that facilitates the recovery of the patient. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial.—ADV.

JOINT CONCERT OF CHORAL AND APOLLO CLUBS TOMORROW

Paul Althouse, Tenor, and About Half of Symphony Orchestra to Assist at Odeon.

One of the most important events of the musical year promises to be the joint concert of the Morning Choral and Apollo Clubs tomorrow night at the Odeon, assisted by Paul Althouse, tenor, of the Metropolitan Opera Co., and about half of the Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Charles Galloway.

The Morning Choral Club, an organization of women's voices, recently celebrated its 25th anniversary, and the Apollo Club, composed of male voices, has just completed its 23d season. Yet this is the first time the two choruses have joined forces in a concert, which is expected to provide a program of choral singing such as has not recently been heard in St. Louis.

Their most ambitious number will be the cantata, "The Swan and the Skylark," by Arthur Goring Thomas, the words of which are selected from Keats, Shelley and Mrs. Hemans. Thomas died before his work was completed, and it was orchestrated from the piano score by Villiers Stanford. It has four solo parts, which will be sung by members chosen from the clubs—Miss Anna Belle Clark, soprano; Miss Blanche Herrick, contralto; Russell Rizer, tenor and John Rohan, bass.

The program will begin with the rousing chorus, "Unfold, Ye Portals Everlasting," from Gounod's "The Redemption," which will be sung by both clubs. The Morning Choral Club alone will sing Arthur Foote's "The Gateway of Ispahan," and the Apollo Club alone will sing Koellner's "Daybreak in the Woods." As the final number, both clubs will unite in singing the "Bridal Chorus" from Cowan's "The Rose Maiden."

Althouse, who makes his first appearance in this city, will sing the ever popular aria, "Celeste Aida," from "Aida," and a group of songs in English dedicated to him by the composers—Foster's "Springtide of Love" and "If I Were King of Ireland," McDermid's "Sacrament," Jordan's "Here in the Brae," and Burleigh's "The Young Warrior." His piano accompaniments will be played by Mrs. Carl Luyties.

Program for New York Symphony's Concert at Odeon.

The program for the New York Symphony Orchestra's concert at the Odeon on May 11, with Josef Hofman, the distinguished pianist, as soloist, will begin with a symphony never before heard in this city—the Symphony in G Minor, by Kalinnikow. Its movements are allegro moderato, andante commodomente, scherzo, allegro non troppo and finale, allegro moderato. It is one of two symphonies written by Kalinnikow, and some of its chief themes are of folksong character.

The orchestra will also play DeBussy's "L'Apres Midi d'un Faune," which was last performed here by the Diaghileff Ballet Orchestra, and has also been played by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Hofman's chief number will be Schumann's concerto for piano and orchestra in A Minor. He will also play three British folksongs and dances by Percy Grainger, "Molly on the Shore," "Irish Tune" and "Shepherd's Hey." The two latter compositions were played by Grainger himself at his recital last Monday at the St. Louis Woman's Club.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Walter Damrosch, is making a transcontinental tour comprehending 90 concerts. The cost of the tour is estimated at $200,000, but the orchestra has met so popular a welcome that there will be little, if any, deficits. It appears in this city under the auspices of the St. Louis Symphony Society, which was also responsible for the visit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the beginning of the season. This will be the last symphony concert in St. Louis until next fall.

Leopold Godowsky Recital at Odeon Wednesday Night.

Leopold Godowsky, considered one of the very foremost of living pianists, will appear in recital at the Odeon Wednesday night. Famous as a virtuoso, he is equally known as a composer and as a profound scholar in the field of music.

His program will begin with Schumann's great suite, "Carnaval." Then will come five Chopin numbers—"Fantasie in F Minor," opus 49; "Berceuse," "Ballade in G Minor" the Sixth and Eleventh Etudes and two waltzes, in C sharp minor and A flat.

The third part of the program will consist of two of Mendelssohn's "Songs Without Words," Rubinstein's "Serenade," in D minor, and Liszt's "Concert Study," in F minor and his "Campanella." The last section of the concert will be composed of Henselt's "Berceuse," Moszkowski's "En Automme" and the Schubert-Taussig "Marche Militaire."

Godowsky is a Russian Pole by ancestry, but has lived in this country since his fourteenth year and is an American citizen.

Knights of Columbus Choral Club Concert.

The Knights of Columbus Choral Club will give a concert Thursday night at the Odeon, assisted by Miss May Catherine Farmer and Miss Evelyn McGuire, sopranos, and George Edward Muskens, tenor. The club's chief number will be "The Witch," which tells the story of a woman accused of witchcraft and condemned to die at the stake with her child. William Theodore Diebels is director of the chorus.

Ben A'Kiba Aid Society to Present Musical Program.

For the observance of Juvenile day, the Ben A'Kiba Aid Society will present a musical program Wednesday afternoon at Harberger Hall, King's highway and Von Versen avenue. Numbers for piano and violin, with recitations and dances, will be given by Sylvia and Alma Zepin, Jessie and Edna Shank, Melba Lotz, Michael Lillander, Celeste Evans, Ellsworth Hoffstadt, Earl Gottschalk and Sylvia Levy. The Emerson School Band, directed by M. Hartman, will assist.

Nicolo d'Amico, Baritone, to Give Recital May 8.

A recital will be given by Nicolo d'Amico, baritone, at the Odeon on the evening of May 8, with the assistance of Miss Melba Hoerner, dancer, and Charles Kunkel and Ross Hoerner, pianists. The soloist's program will include the prologue from "I Pagliacci" and arias from "Otello," "Rigoletto" and "Un Ballo in Maschera."

Pupils to Give Dance Recital at Wednesday Club.

Pupils of Miss Alice Martin will give a dance recital next Saturday afternoon at the Wednesday Club Auditorium, presenting a program of old English morris and country dances and an allegorical ballet in three scenes, entitled "A Spring Day."

Turners' Spring Festival May 20-21.

Committees consisting of members, women and girls of the Turnvereins of St. Louis are preparing for the Spring Festival, which will be given on May 20 and 21 in Belleview Park, near the end of the Market street line. Competition and exhibition drills for classes and individuals will be held on both afternoons. The purpose of this celebration is to raise funds to meet an obligation of the Turn-Bezirk St. Louis, caused at the time the turners presented the Jahn Monument in Forest Park to St. Louis.

SIX ST. LOUIS DELEGATES TO SECURITY LEAGUE MEETING

Will Have 1200 Votes at Annual Gathering in New York on Wednesday.

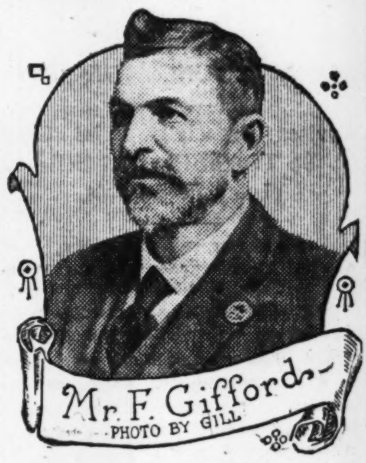
Six delegates from the St. Louis branch of the National Security League will attend the annual meeting of the league Wednesday at the Hotel Astor in New York. The St. Louis delegates are Dwight F. Davis, T. B. Boyd, Ira E. Wright, Dr. William Preston Hill, Benjamin Altheimer and E. S. Lewis. The secretary of the local branch, Horace D. Johns, will accompany them.

At its first annual meeting this year the National Security League was scarcely more than a local movement confined almost entirely to New York City. The meeting this year will include representatives from the branch organizations of 75 cities. The delegates will cast the votes of the entire membership of the league, amounting to more than 200,000. The St. Louis delegation will be entitled to 1200 votes, which is the membership of the St. Louis branch.

The primary purpose of the meeting will be to elect the officers and committees for the next year, and to work out the details of the task before the league in its nation-wide campaign for adequate national defense.

Had Suffered the Agony of a Dozen Deaths

Prominent Farmer in Canada Describes His Recovery and Escape from the Operating Table.



Mr. F. Gifford—

In a letter to friends at Saskatoon, Mr. F. Gifford, of the Ball Rock Farm, Maymont, Saskatchewan, Canada, says: "Thanks to Fruitola and Traxo I am alive. I lay on my back for sixteen days, suffering the agonies of a dozen deaths. I began taking Fruitola and was relieved of a great many gall-stones. My health is now fully restored."

Fruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs and one dose is usually sufficient to give ample evidence of its efficacy. It is a great system cleanser. Following a dose of Fruitola, Traxo should be taken three or four times a day in order to rebuild and restore the system that has been weakened and run down by constant suffering. It is a splendid tonic, acting on the liver and stomach most beneficially.

Fruitola and Traxo are prepared in the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists. In St. Louis they can be obtained at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 6th St. and Washington Av.

TURKISH CAMELS BLOWN TO PIECES TO AVOID CAPTURE

Retreating Moslems Fired Bullets Into Bombs Loaded on Backs of the Animals.

CAIRO, Egypt, April 29.—Camels laden with bombs and petrol were blown to pieces by the Turks so that these living carriers of ammunition would not fall into the possession of the attacking British, during the sensational dash of the Duke of Westminster's armored motor-car battery through the Libyan desert.

This Britishh expedition, consisting of 32 men, nine armored machines and one open car containing a mounted machine gun, began its pursuit at Sollum, in Northwestern Egypt. Dashing at racing speed along the Tabruk road over which the Turks had retreated, the British, after covering 23 miles came unexpectedly upon the enemy, whose troops were on the move.

The Turks scattered. Those who chose the alternative of flight paused long enough to fire upon their camels, which one by one disappeared as their packs exploded with terrifice force.

WANT TO GET RID OF FAT? HARVARD EXPERT TELLS HOW

Proper Exercise and Careful Diet the Means, Declares Dr. Sargent.

BEGIN YOUNG, HE SAYS

Advises Especially That Girls Be Taught Physical Efficiency in Schools.

By KARL K. KITCHEN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 29.—"More people are fighting fat in America today than are fighting each other in war-racked Europe. There has never been a time when so many people, men and women, have been actively interested in keeping physically fit. To be sure, the dictates of fashion are responsible for the efforts of most women to remove their adipose tissue, but the results are well worth while. Here and there a person is injured by this craze for reducing but, generally speaking, both men and women are being benefitted by their efforts to get thin. In fact, the results are already apparent."

The speaker was Dr. Durley A. Sargent, head of the Department of Physical Education of Harvard University, and one of the foremost authorities in physical education in America. For 44 years Dr. Sargent had been actively engaged in the work of improving the physical condition of young men.

"Fat is simply uninvested capital," said the Harvard authority, "and a little fat does no particular harm. It doesn't interfere with the functions of the vital organs. Still, it is of no particular value unless one is going to the North Pole. A layer of fat is of value there, for it keeps one warm. But here in America there is no real need for it.

"What is more to the point, a great many men and women have surplus of it, and it is very fortunate that the idea of being physically fit and fashionable obsess them. Otherwise the future of the race might not be as promising as it is.

One Way to Get Rid of Fat.

"Now, there's only one way to get rid of fat," Dr. Sargent went on. "You've got to burn it up. People who starve themselves to get rid of it sometimes injure themselves quite seriously. For, while an excess of fat does not impair one's health, the opposite extreme is often dangerous. So it is best to burn it up scientifically. In other words, by healthful exercise and proper diet.

"It's all a matter of physical education and physical education should be begun with the young. There's nothing new about it. We have simply to put into effect the ideas of the ancient Greeks. And the women need it much more than the men, for they have the greater responsibility when it comes to improving the race.

"It's only within the last thirty years that much thought has been given to the physical education of women. To be sure, there were light calisthenics for girls back in the thirties and forties, but the real work in developing physically perfect women is of very recent origin.

"The beneficial results are unmistakable. Of course, this physical education has been confined to a limited number of women. But its results show what could be accomplished if it were more widespread."

"To what do you credit the idea of keeping physhically fit for which so much reducing is responsible?" I asked.

"The efficiency idea," replied Dr. Sargent. "Men today realize that they cannot accomplish the greatest results unless they are perfectly prepared. They realize that they have to go in training to become efficient physically. That is why they went to Plattsburg last summer—efficiency and preparedness.

Fitness a Necessity.

"Keeping physically fit is an absolute necessity these days, for the city man particularly exhausts his nervous energy by the great and unnatural demands of modern life. Proper exercise is the only thing that will renew it.

"Now, as everyone knows, people learn most easily when they are young. Give the young boys and girls the proper physical education—the majority have never had it—and when the arrive at middle age they will not be in the poor physical condition that thousands of our grown-ups are today.

"The mental capacity of our rank and file is not what it should be, being limited by our overwroght nervous system. Our moral courage lacks the stimulus derived from the practice of manly sports—the only real and superior substitute for the stimulus of war.

"Do you recall reading how the business men at Plattsburg marched ten miles a day last summer?" Dr. Sargent asked suddenly, turning on the interviewer. "Their ten-mile march was hailed as a great achievement. Well, the girls at my summer camp last July walked 25 miles in a day and carried big packs over a mountain without thinking it was particularly wonderful. They were 'prepared.' Twenty-five years ago such a hike for girls was unheard of. Todap it isn't particularly unusual. Which shows that there has been a great improvement in the physical condition of American girls.

"Those who have the future of the race at heart will fight for 'preparedness' along the lines of physical education. It is not only necessary for the man and woman to keep physically fit; the younger generation must be properly educated—the girls particularly. For it is of them that we have to look for the Americans of tomorrow."

STATE SHOOTING TOURNAMENT BEGINS HERE ON TUESDAY

Missouri Fish and Game League Will Also Meet Here to Arrange for June Shoot.

The ninth annual shooting tournament of the Missouri State Sportsmen's Association will be held under the auspices of the St. Louis Trap-Shooters' Association in St. Louis for three days beginning Tuesday. The headquarters will be at the Marquette Hotel and the association's business meeting will be held there Wednesday. Immediately after this, the Missouri Fish and Game League will hold a meeting to arrange for the State shoot in June.

The Missouri Fish and Game League is also sending out letters urging its members to ask the United States Department of Agriculture to extend the open season on waterfowl to March 10. At present the season closes Jan. 31.

The sportsmen recently adopted a resolution asking that the season be extended to March 31, but they have been informed that the department will make no concession later than March 10.

ORCHESTRA OF WOMEN FOR THE WOMAN'S PAGEANT

Production at Odeon This Week to Be Almost Exclusively a Woman's Affair.

The Woman's Pageant, which is to be given under the auspices of the Woman's Council, at the Odeon, Friday and Saturday, will be almost exclusively a woman's affair, very few men taking part in the entertainment.

The women have even organized a woman's orchestra to play at the performances. While there are a few men in the orchestra, there are more than 30 women in it. The Woman's Orchestra was organized and is being directed by Miss Teresa Finn, Supervisor of Music, Soldan High School.

Those in the Woman's Orchestra are: First violin, Mmes. E. Fletcher, Milton Marks, Misses Martha Abbott, Eva Bell, Mary Chapman, Marguerite Grace, Ethel Knoboluch, Patrice McGrath and Eunice Woods and John Spargo; second violin, Misses Leah Dick, May Knepper, Frances Murch, Ruth Maguire, Sylvia Walden, Grace Wright and Laura J. Suda; cello, Mmes. Daniel Dougherty, F. J. Larson; flute, Miss Clarice Schuck and Henry Renard; clarionet, Junior Bihr; French horn, Dr. B. Wyllie; kettle drum, Mrs. M. Blumenthal; viola, Miss Lena Anton, Miss Lillian Blanchard, Robert Walsh; cornet, Mrs. Henry Hudson, Walter Vrudenbourgh; trombone, Pierce Robinson; saxophone, John Howard; bassoon, Albert Hebard; pianist, Miss Frances Lucas.

Mrs. Edward Everett Haverstick of 4214 Maryland avenue has the principal pageant role, that of "The Spirit of Intelligence." She will read the prologue, and before each scene predict for the benefit of her hearers the extent of the advancement of woman. The gown to be worn by Mrs. Haverstick as "Intelligence" is of white chiffon over a body of rich white satin, having a panel of iridescent net extending down the front to seven feet below the hem of the garment. "Intelligence" will be seen on a pedestal seven feet high, behind which will be black velvet curtains. A calcium light will bring out the figure.

One of the most difficult roles in the Pageant is that to be presented by Mrs. John Maxwell. In the Greek scene Mrs. Maxwell will pose for 25 minutes as the statue of the Goddess Athena. Miss Helen Aleysbury has the part of the "Pioneer Woman."

Dr. John Tierney will present the character of "Alexander," and Miss Minnie Potter that of "Penelope," his wife, in the Greek scene. The dances in this scene are especially beautiful. The dancers of the Pageant were drilled by Misses Olga and Fay Bates.

The Roman Period will show woman's advancement enough to resent having her property taxed in order that civil wars may be carried on. Miss Viola Goeke will portray the character of "Augusta," the leader of the women in this scene. Henry Clay Patterson and C. W. McKenzie will appear as first and second triumvirs.

The Aeolian Company
St. Louis' Greatest Piano House
1004 OLIVE STREET

STYLE G, $100

THE Aeolian-Vocalion is not the familiar phonograph that you have known for years—it is an instrument of vastly greater powers.

Tones of voice and instruments, this wonderful Vocalion re-voices with the vibrant quality, the richness and depth, the roundness and sonority of the original.

Phonographic tone—the thin, mechanical tone which you have always associated with instruments of the talking-machine type—is forgotten in the beauty and power of the natural tones brought from every record of this newest and greatest of phonographs.

And in tone-control, as well as in tone itself, the Vocalion is the pioneer in a revolutionary development.

The Graduola—an absolutely simple, yet well nigh perfectly effective expression device, enables you to play each record, measure by measure, exactly as you wish. The Graduola makes of the Vocalion a new musical instrument which you may play, guided and inspired by the art of the greatest musicians.

The AEOLIAN-VOCALION
"The new and greater Phonograph of natural tone"

AN INVITATION: Come in, we invite you, and play the Vocalion yourself. Hear your favorite records as this instrument re-voices them. Let the instrument itself convey to you, as no words of ours can, its musical supremacy, its right to your serious consideration.

Vocalion prices $35 to $2000 ($35 to $75 without Graduola)

UNREST OF LABOR GREATEST IN YEARS, SAYS UNION CHIEF

Large Number of Men Will Be Out May 1, Demanding Chiefly a Shorter Day.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor, in a May day review of the labor situation throughout the country, declared today that there was greater industrial unrest than has prevailed for several years and that it would be impossible to estimate the number of workers who would be on strike May 1—most of them for a shorter workday.

"There is a greater unrest from this May 1 than has been manifest in many previous years," he said. "To some this condition is alarming. To me it is encouraging, for I believe discontent is a sign of life—of progress. Workers are demanding an eight-hour day and I venture the opinion that most of the large strikes today, either now or prospective, are because of this shorter workday demand.

"Thinking men are agreed that long hours are economical for no one and destroy man's vitality. Workers will continue agitating, organizing and striking until the eight-hour day is assured.

"It is worth noting that large numbers of strikes are now being waged by unorganized workers, who later join the trade-union movement when they realize the necessity for organization, discipline and intelligent action.

Berlin Economizes on Paper.

BERLIN, April 29.—The various departments of the Prussian Government have issued detailed instructions for the utmost economy of the use of paper in all public offices. Officials are ordered in all possible cases to use small sheets of paper, and also to amend the style of official communications by omitting all unnecessary phraseology.

A Cough May Lead to Tuberculosis

Distressing and dangerous complications may follow if you neglect it. Even when so serious a stage is reached, Eckman's Alterative may bring relief. For more than 20 years it has been widely used in such cases with beneficial results.

As with any medication employed in this trouble, the best results are obtained when the patient pays strict attention to diet and gets plenty of rest and fresh air.

Because of its easily assimilable content of calcium chlorid this preparation is effective where a tonic upbuilder is indicated. As a corrective of night sweats it has proved most useful. It may be tried with absolute safety, since it contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs of any sort.

TENTS ARE PITCHED FOR WOMEN'S FIRST TRAINING CAMP

Will Open Near Washington Tomorrow Under Woman's Section of Navy League Auspices.

TO RUN FOUR WEEKS

Social Leaders in Khaki to Be Drilled in Red Cross Work, First Aid, Diafetics, Etc.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The tents of the National Service School are pitched. On Monday the camp, which was organized under the auspices of the Woman's Section of the Navy League, with a view to training girls and young women to be of use to this country in time of war or national calamity, will be opened. For four weeks thereafter women and girls in khaki from all over the country, will be put through a course of drilling and training in Red Cross work, first aid, diatetics and such branches of military service as fall to woman's share in war time.

Enrollment for the first resident course of a fortnight was completed weeks ago; less than 25 places as resident students for the second course, May 16 to May 31, remain to be filled, and the register of day pupils includes several hundred prominent women and girls of Washington.

The site for the camp, which was loaned by Senator Francis Newlands of Nevada, is a 10-acre tract near Chevy Chase, Md., within easy reach of Washington by street car or motor. The tents have been set up in a cleared space which slopes away to a charming bit if woodland. Just at the edge of the wood stands the great assembly tent, flanked by a mess tent and a "cook" tent, while atop the hill cluster the 40 sleeping tents—the "rokies" are to be housed five in a tent. The six administration tents are to serve as "company headquarters." They are regulation army tents of khaki.

Red Cross Unit in Readiness.

A full Red Cross unit is to be in charge to render first aid in case of accident or should the hard work and stern discipline of camp routine prove too much for some of the girls. Instruction in first aid, diatetics, home nursing and kindred subjects, which will be so large a part of the curriculum, will also be in the hands of the doctors and nurses forming the unit.

The President and Mrs. Wilson, members of the Cabinet, officials and members of the diplomatic corps, will be present at the opening ceremonies, and Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, heads the reception committee.

The National Service School, the first of its kind in the country, is planned to serve as a model and to give impetus to the movement for national service among American women. Already this institution has inspired the founding of similar schools in San Francisco and Philadelphia, and schools are to be started in Baltimore and Boston.

In addition to the classes in hygiene, first aid and care of the sick, the Red Cross nurses will give instruction in the making of surgical dressings, and a trained seamstress will teach the making of Red Cross relief garments, according to standard patterns. Other classes on the program are signal work, which includes wireless and plain telegraphy, heliographing and wig-wagging, and military calisthenics. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Sidney Ballou, the Committee on Lecture has arranged a striking program for the afternoon lecture course, open to the general public.

Students Are Company Officers.

Officers for the various companies, which are to be subdivided into squads of 10, are being selected from among the students. Only sufficient drilling to enable the students to get about easily in company and squad formation will be given, as the discipline is to be more on the order of a school than a camp in the military sense of the word. All resident students are required to wear uniform. Visitors are to be allowed in camp on week days from 3 to 6 p. m. and on Sundays from 2 to 6 p. m.

A number of army officers have been detailed to serve as instructors of discipline and drill.

Among the Washington girls who are enrolled for the first session of the camp are Miss Francise Williams, sister of Mrs. Joseph Leiter; Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith; Miss Georgia Schofield, whose father was Lieutenant-General Schofield; Miss Camilla Lippincott, Miss Frances Moore, daughter of the late Clarence Moore; Miss Francis Lippitt, daughter of Senator Lippitt; Miss Caroline Ogden-Jones and Miss Leila Montgomery, a young kinswoman of Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court.

Mrs. James M. Thompson, daughter of Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark, has come from New Orleans to enlist.

CHINA BACK TO FLINT ROCK

SHANGHAI, April 29.—On account of the steady increase in the price of matches, flint rocks and steel are being sold in large quantities at Soochow. A large number of shops are selling these substitutes for matches, and many peddlers are also making a living disposing of these articles in and about the district.

This business has become so successful that some of the Chinese retail dealers believe that in due course flint and steel may ultimately supercede matches.

During 1915 the number of Farm Ads printed in the Post-Dispatch was 11,652 or 1063 more than appeared in the nearest competitor.

HOW A GERMAN GUN 'DESERTED' AND WENT OVER TO RUSSIANS

Italian Crawls 100 Yards, Attaches Rope, and Enemy Sees Machine "Walk Away"—So.

PETROGRAD, April 29.—How a machine gun was forced to "desert" the German army is recounted in the story of the heroism of a 16-year-old Italian volunteer in the Russian army. Constantine Zepolli, whose part as the leading figure in the episode earned one of the two St. George's crosses he has won.

Overhearing his commander expressing a wish that someone "would silence or capture" a gun which was stationed at troublesome proximity to the Russian trenches, Zapolli, on his own initiative, crawled on his stomach 100 yards, located the position of the gun, returned from the danger zone and conferred with his trench-fellows, and crept forth once more, this time dragging a coil of stout rope. Reaching the gun, he tied one end around it without being discovered, and again reached his own lines, with the free end of the rope in his clutch.

Presently the Germans were astonished to observe the gun disappearing toward the Russian trenches. It was successfully dragged from their possesion, a number of Germans being killed in an effort to prevent its departure.

DUBLIN POSTOFFICE BURNED; MANY OF REBELS CAPTURED

Field Marshal French Reports Revolt Is on Verge of Collapse and That One of Leaders Is Said to Have Been Killed.

Lord Lieutenant Says Most of People Are Loyal, and That Comparatively Little Damage Was Done.

Fighting Has Occurred in Centers Outside of Dublin, Men Being Landed From Fleet at One Place.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, April 30.—Field Marshal Viscount French, commander of the home forces, reports that the general postoffice at Dublin, which has been the principal stronghold of the Sinn Feiners, has been burned down. Connolly, one of the leaders of the rebels, is reported to have been killed.

Many of the rebels have been taken prisoners and the revolt in Dublin is on the verge of collapse. In the rest of Ireland the situation is generally satisfactory.

One dispatch received this afternoon says that Sackville and Grafton streets are in flames and that artillery is being used on the houses, the inhabitants having been removed.

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Dublin said that the rebel forces on Thursday numbered about 12,000, of which 2000 were followers of James Larkin, head of the Transport Workers' Union, and 10,000 were Sinn Feiners. Another report, dated Thursday, put the number of the rebels holding out at only 1500.

MAJORITY OF IRISH ARE LOYAL, SAYS BARON WIMBORNE

Lord Lieutenant Tells of Happenings in Dublin Since Monday Morning.

DUBLIN, April 29.—Baron Wimborne, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, expressed to the Associated Press correspondent at the Viceregal lodge today the assurance that the seditious movement would be suppressed in the course of a few days.

The Viceroy was full of praise for the loyalty displayed by the great majority of the Irish people, and considered the momentary success gained and the damage done by the rebels as small when viewed in connection with the surprise of the outbreak and the evident preparations made for it.

The country outside of Dublin, except for a few isolated places, has, ne declared, remained peaceful.

Baron Wimborne, when requested to give an account of what had happened since the Irish rebels proclaimed an Irish republic last Monday afternoon, said:

"The outbreak began Monday morning about 11:30 o'clock. About that time information was received that Dublin Castle had been attacked, St. Stephen's Green occupied and the postoffice seized by the rebels. Telephonic communication with the Curragh camp immediately was obtained by the authorities and the reserve troops there were brought to Dublin that night and the following morning.

Castle Never in Danger.

"Meanwhile the castle, which never had been captured by the rebels, was strengthened. The only casualty there was the shooting of a policeman. A very few hours after the outbreak large forces had been assembled in the castle, which, however, never was in real danger.

"The rebels had cut telegraphic communications with the country districts and England but had not succeeded in discovering a telephone wire which connected the Curragh camp with headquarters. This was one of their mistakes. They did not cut communication with North Ireland, with which we have at all times been able to converse.

"At one time the rebels had possession of the Broadstone Railway station, which was not protected.

"On Tuesday morning all the reinforcements we had called from Curragh had reached Dublin and since that moment the rebels have not attempted anything except sniping from certain localities and houses. It is easy for them to abandon houses by back doors and to get away to other advantageous positions. The military cannot distinguish the rebels from the citizens.

"Some times they leave their houses after hiding their rifles and cartridges and mingle with the ordinary inhabitants. After taking observations of the soldiers' positions, they return to commence sniping again. Most of the houses they occupy they have entered by force and not because the householders sympathized with their movement.

"As a matter of fact, the general run of people do not sympathize with them.

"While the number of troops has increased, the position of the rebels has remained the same. When their activi-

Unseasonably cool weather was predicted yesterday, for this week, in the Mississippi and Ohio Valley region, by the Weather Burea at Washington. The prediction mentioned frosts, but this seemed to apply chiefly to the Great Lakes region, which was mentioned in the same connection.

The weather will be generally fair for the week, according to this prediction, except for local showers in the Mississippi Valley and the district east of it.

Along the northern border, winterlike weather has returned, with freezing temperatures from Northwest Minnesota westward almost to the Pacific coast.

MAN FINED $5 SPRINGS $100 BILL ON JUDGE; GETS CHANGE

"Always Glad to Oblige," Hogan Says—But Listen: He Had Just Drawn Pay.

When Joseph L. McClosky of 4223 Washington boulevard was notified by Judge Hogan in Police Court yesterday that a $5 fine, just assessed against him for failing to show proper lights on his auto the night before, would be stayed on payment of costs, he expressed himself as deeply pleased.

After fumbling in his pockets and failing to find any money except a $100 bill, McClosky remarked something to the effect that as he had no change he supposed the costs also might be remitted.

"Don't let that bother you," said the judge. His Honor then reached round to his hip pocket, pulled out a wallet, counted out $100 in small currency, shoved it across to McClosky and gathered in the $100 bill.

"Always glad to oblige," the judge remarked. Judge Hogan had received $125, his half-month's pay, just before court.

BIG LEAGUE BALL SCORES POSTED DAILY ABOUT PERSHING'S CAMP

Easter Day Monotony at Headquarters Broken by Arrival of a Truck Division of Sweets.

GEN. PERSHING'S HEADQUARTERS, April 24, by motor truck to Columbus, N. M., April 28.—Easter day at this camp was hot, dusty and extremely windy. We were camped on a bleak plain, 7000 feet high, which grew absolutely nothing, not even cactus.

Three long truck trains came in from Columbus loaded down with supplies, mail and newspapers. One truck division was dubbed 'The Candy Train," for it brought a supply of sweets for which the troops have been anxiously waiting.

Results of the baseball games in the big leagues are being received daily now and are posted at different points around the camp, and conversation among the men varies between whether the American troops will withdraw, the crisis with Germany and baseball.

GERMANS TUNNEL TO LIBERTY

Use Kitchen Utensils to Dig 110-Foot Passage From Canadian Camp.

LETHBRIDGE, Alberta, April 29.—Six German prisoners, it was learned today, made a sensational escape from the detention camp here, tunneling a passage four feet underground and 110 feet long, leading from the bunk house, under the compound fence, to the center of the city nurseries adjoining the camp. Mounted police have found no trace of the fugitives. The men used implements stolen from the kitchen for tunneling.

Further details regarding the escape and the charges against the prisoners were not permitted by the censors.

USES PIPE LINE TO WARM UP

Farmer Unable to Blow Out Blazing Gas, Big Fire Results.

William Adler, a farmer at Staunton, Ill., became so cold while planting corn Friday morning that he decided to make a fire and warm up. He had observed a slight leak around a valve on the pipe line of the Ohio Gas Co. and it gave him an idea. He touched a match to the leak, warmed his hands and then tried to blow out the fire.

But the fire refused to be blown out. Instead it kept getting bigger and bigger and as the gaskets melted around the valve. Adler sent word to officials of the company. It was 10 o'clock yesterday morning before they subdued the blaze which, for hours, had been roaring high in the air.

GERARD CONFERS WITH KAISER AND GERMAN LEADERS

Cologne Gazette Intimates That Consultations Over Crisis Are Near an End.

NO TIME SET FOR NOTE

Ambassador Likely to Hear of Berlin's Decision Before Leaving Headquarters.

BERLIN, via London, April 29.—United States Ambassador Gerard was received in audience by Emperor William last night and conferred with other leaders of the Empire. No intimation has been given as to when the German reply to the American note will be ready except a hint contained in a Berlin dispatch to the Cologne Gazette, which said:

"The consultations at great headquarters probably are near a conclusion. * * * The visit of the American Ambassador was designed to permit him to consult with persons in authority there over the situation. It is assumed their final decision also will be communicated to him there."

The Tageblatt explains this morning that its statement that the basic features of the answer already have been settled was misunderstood. The paper asserts it meant only to say that a draft of the answer had been made but that a decision had not yet been reached. The wording of this morning's statement indicates clearly, however, that there was no misunderstanding on the part of the readers but that the Tageblatt made an error yesterday.

There is virtually no comment in the press upon the situation except from the pen of Count von Reventlow, who still appears to believe a breach with the United States is inevtiable.

The official organ of the Hansabund, the organization of the commercial interests refers to the gravity of the decision to be reached. It says the representatives of commerce, industry and trade belonging to the Hansabund are certain the question will be decided with the dispassionate care which the situation demands, but are equally certain that Germany's dignity as a nation and its freedom to use all weapons of defense will be fully regarded.

The Hansabund hopes, however, it is declared, that an honorable and peaceful understanding will be reached, but that if such a solution proves impossible, all Germans will stand united behind the Emperor.

Lansing Awaits Word of Girard's Visit to Kaiser.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—No definite word forecasting Germany's decision in the submarine controversy had reached Washington tonight, and officials apparently were almost as much in the dark regarding the outcome as they were when the American demands were dispatched to Berlin 11 days ago.

It was apparent, however, that something decisive was expected without much more delay. Ambassador Gerard's visit to Emperor William at army headquarters was believed to presage an early decision, since it was expected the Ambassador would clear up any possible obscurities of the position of the United States.

GEORGIA LIQUOR LAW IN EFFECT; IMPORTATION MADE DIFFICULT

Statute Designed to Drive Breweries, "Near Beer" Saloons and Locker Clubs From the State.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 29.—Georgia's new prohibition law, designed to drive breweries, locker clubs and "near beer" saloons from the State, became effective at midnight tonight. Under it, no beverage containing more than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol may be manufactured or sold, and no person may bring in from outside the State more than two quarts of liquor or 48 pints of beer a month.

Many difficulties are placed in the way of the person who wishes to have shipped the small amount allowed by the law. Transportation companies are held responsible for the consignee signing a receipt attested by a notary public and the delivery of the receipt to county ordinaries.

A section of the law prohibiting advertising of liquor is designed to make it necessary for such advertisements in newspapers and periodicals to be eliminated before they can be sold in Georgia.

GEN. OBREGON'S BRIDE WANTS TO BE LIKE AMERICAN WOMEN

Says Her Husband Will Some Day be the Biggest Man in Mexico.

EL PASO, Tex., April 29.—With Gen. Obregon is his bride and they are living at Juarez in a private car.

"I want to be like your women," said the bride today. "I want to tell the women of the world that I am just the same as they are.

"The General loves Mexico, he loves Gen. Carranza. All of us want to see our country be a country.

"Gen. Obregon some day will be the biggest man in Mexico. I want to help him.

"We want to see Mexico the same as is the United States. I was educated at one of your finishing colleges in America and I know that you are the best people on earth."

OBREGON DEMANDS WITHDRAWAL OF AMERICAN TROOPS

Juarez Conference May Deadlock; U. S. Generals Cannot Discuss Evacuation.

FIRST MEETING IS HELD

Washington Representatives Sent Only to Discuss Plans of Co-Operation With Carranzistas.

By CLAIR KENAMORE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

EL PASO, Tex., April 29.—At the first meeting of the conference between the military chiefs of the United States and Mexico in Juarez this evening, Gen. Alvaro Obregon announced to the American Generals that he would demand the withdrawal of the American troops from Mexico.

Another meeting will be held tomorrow morning, at which the Americans will be armed with further advices and instructions from Washington. It is probable that the Sunday conference will be the last of the session.

From conversations with the majority of Obregon's staff there is no reason to suppose that any Mexican forces will assist or co-operate with the Americans in any manner after this time. Obregon instructed Calles when the troops entered to help them in every possible way. All Mexican officials now believe the time for co-operation has passed and that the task must be left entirely to the Mexicans.

After the meeting today was over at 7 p. m., Gen. Scott said:

Satisfactory, Says Scott.

"You may say for me that the conference was very satisfactory. I will present my statement to Washington and will later notify Gen. Obregon of the next meeting."

The Generals also announced that all present at the meeting had agreed that no word would be given out for publication until the conference was over. It was learned, however, that the Mexican Secretary of War announced unequivocally that he would demand the withdrawal of the troops.

The conference was held in the custom house in Juarez. Those in the council chambers were, for the Americans, Major-Generals Scott and Funston, Maj. Mickey and Capt. Fitzhugh Lee; for the Mexicans, Major-General Obregon. Gen. Serrano, his chief of staff, Gen. Gavira and Consul Garcia.

As soon as the conference opened, and before the American Generals had an opportunity to present their demands or complaints, Obregon took the floor and made a statement, which so far as could be judged by observers through a convenient window but who were out of earshot, was the topic of conversation throughout the entire conference.

When the conference was over Obregon went at once to his private car. His chief of staff indicated those among the crowd present who could enter, and only the officers commanding troops in Northern Mexico were permitted to join the Secretary of War.

The first person to emerge was Col. Calderon, chief of staff to Gen. Calles, Governor of Sonora. He joined Consul Lelivier of Douglas, which is just across the line from Calles' headquarters, and they hurried away. Lelivier said that they were returning to Agua Prieta at once. Obregon had called them here for the conference.

Trevino Returns South.

An hour after the conference Gen. Trevino's special train was being made up for his immediate return to the South.

The American conferees proceeded to the home of J. F. Williams to attend a dinner. Among the guests was George C. Carrothers, special agent of the State Department, who is barred from Mexico by Obregon because of Carrothers' long association with Villa.

It is undrstood that Gen. Scott declared in the conference that he was representative of the War Department only and that the question of withdrawing the troops was in the province of the State Department, unless military expediency should direct that they be withdrawn. In his view, therefore, Obregon's demand for their withdrawal has no place in the present discussion.

In Obregon's view the American War Department can handle the matter, since he contends the situation is such that a military force of the size now in Mexico is useless for its avowed purpose, since Villa has disappeared and his bands are broken up.

Promise of Aid Not Likely.

An oficer in Obregon's train said tonight: "Since Gen. Obregon came here only for the purpose of demanding the withdrawal of the troops it cannot be supposed that he will long discuss the question of aiding a foreign force whose legitimate purpose in our country is at an end."

It is believed that the fight at Parral in which Carranza soldiers fired on Americans and the Americans fired on the Mexicans was discussed at the brief meeting.

Among the members of Gen. Obregon's staff there was no endeavor to make the situation appear other than grave. They appear to be surprised that the American Generals have no powers other than to talk of the military aspects of the situation. They say that when Gen. Scott conferred with Villa he suffered from no such limitations. Some of Obregon's aides consider the conference virtually ended, as the opposing sides have no

ROOSEVELT WILL PREACH UNIVERSAL SERVICE IN U. S.

Demonstration at a Chicago Banquet When He Advocates General Training.

CHICAGO, April 29.—The declaration by Theodore Roosevelt in his address tonight at the banquet of the Illinois Bar Association that the ultimate answer to the question of preparedness in this country must be universal training, was greeted with a storm of cheers and applause. A cloud of napkins and menus were thrown into the air while the banqueters shouted their approval.

Col. Roosevelt visibly was affected by the demonstration and declared that it put heart into him and that he would "go out to preach that doctrine with his head up and with increased confidence."

The former President delivered a stirring speech on the necessity of preparedness along the lines of his recent utterances.

"T. R. at No Price," Says Chicago Staats Zeitung.

CHICAGO, April 29.—The Illinois Publishing Co., of which Horace Brand is president, publisher of the Staats Zeitung and the Chicagoer Presse, today issued a statement by Dr. H. Gerhard, chairman of the Political Committee of the Chicago branch of the German-American Alliance, on "The Attitude of the German-American toward Roosevelt." It follows:

"Roosevelt is coming to Chicago to make inquiries as to just what the attitude of the German-American is toward him, should he canvass for the coming nomination for President of the United States. Here is the answer, according to the facts:

"On Feb. 14 the directors of the Chicago branch of the German-American Alliance accepted unanimously the report given by Dr. H. Gerhard that the slogan for the approaching national nomination should be: 'Against Wilson and against Roosevelt!'

"The same slogan was adopted March 4 and at a big meeting of the Chicago branch April 24. When one of the delegates asked: 'If both should be nominated, what then?' a spontaneous outburst was made: 'Then we will vote Socialistic.'

"Not one individual German-American who has a spark of honor and self-respect in his makeup will vote for a man who has defamed and insulted not only the German-Americans, but also the good old mother country, Germany.

"The State organization of Iowa has also issued the same slogan, 'Against Wilson and against Roosevelt.' In Nebraska, Minnesota, even as far as California, the German-Americans have adopted the same view. In Wisconsin the late election of a Socialist Mayor plainly indicates which way the 'wind lists.'

"The Republican party has at present a positive victory in view if it will not allow itself to be humbugged by either Roosevelt or Root.

"Roosevelt at no price."

CONFEREES LIKELY TO REPORT DIVISION ON THE ARMY BILL

"Hopelessly Apart" on Size of Standing Force, Way One Member Expresses It.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Conferees of the House and Senate, after three days' deliberation on the army reorganization bill, the first of the big preparedness measures, have come to a complete deadlock over several important features. It was strongly intimated tonight that they would report a disagreement and ask their respective branches of Congress for further instructions.

"Hopelessly apart" on the size of the regular army and the proposals for a volunteer reserve army and a Government nitrate plant was the report of one member of the conference tonight and he declared Congress would be asked in the near future to pass again on these features of the measure.

The Senate conferees are insisting determinedly upon the provisions in the Senate bill for a regular army of 250,000 men and Representative Kahn, the Republican House conferee, is standing with them. Representatives Hay and Dent, however, are insistent upon the House provision for 140,000 men.

Representative Kahn pointed out to the conferees today that his amendment for an army of 200,000 had been defeated by only a small majority when the House had the bill under consideration. Since that time big army men contend, international developments have caused a change of feeling on the part of many Representatives. Some administration leaders think the House might now be brought to accept the 250,000 Senate proposal, should the conferees fail to agree.

It was said tonight, that should a disagreement be reported, the Senate might agree to give up its volunteer army plan and accept instead the national guard reserve provision of the House bill and might also abandon the Government nitrate plant provision which, it is conceded generally, never will be accepted by the House.

13,300 MEN CAPTURED AT SURRENDER OF KUT, BESIEGED 5 MONTHS

2970 British and 6000 Indians and Their Followers Fall Into Hands of Turks—Munitions Destroyed

FLOODS AND STRONG TIGRIS DEFENSES HALTED RELIEF

Teutons Launch Drive in the Riga Region and Take 5600 Russians—Germans Said to Have Abandoned Verdun Attack, Removing Their Heavy Artillery.

LONDON, April 29.—After a resistance of 143 days, Gen, Charles Townshend and about 13,000 British and Indian troops have surrendered to the Turks at Kut-El-Amara in Mesopotamia, where they have been besieged since December. The official announcement of the surrender made today is as follows:

"After a resistance protracted for 143 days and conducted with a gallantry and fortitude that will be forever memorable. Gen. Townshend has been compelled by the final exhaustion of his supplies, to surrender.

"Before doing so, he destroyed his guns and munitions.

"The force under him consists of 2970 British troops of all ranks and services and some 6000 Indian troops and their followers."

A Constantinople dispatch received by way of Berlin says that the Vice Chief Commander of the Turkish army announces that the British garrison at Kut-El-Amara numbered 13,300 men.

Was Near Starvation.

Gen. Townshend was driven to surrender to avoid starvation of his force. A recent official Turkish communication said that the position of the British at Kut-El-Amara was critical and that they were expecting to receive small supplies of food by aeroplane. An official statement here yesterday showed that a last effort to send supplies to the garrison had failed. It was announced that a ship laden with supplies had been sent up the Tigris, that it had been grounded about four miles east of the city.

Less than a score of miles away, on the banks of the Tigris below the city, is a relief army which for months had been attempting to reach the besieged forces of Gen. Townshend. A few weeks ago several victories were announced and hope ran high in England that the mission would succeed. Of late, however, the Turks' resistance has increased and aided by floods, they have been able to hold the British in check.

It was early in December of last year that Gen. Townshend's army, beaten in battle at Ctesiphon, 18 miles below Bagdad, retreated to Kut-El-Amara. Since that time it has been besieged by a large army of Turks, cut off from all communication with outside world, except by wireless. During the long siege the British beat off many attacks by the Turks.

Turks Gave Up Attacks.

They defended themselves so successfully in encounters about the city that the Turks at length desisted from their efforts to take the place by storm and decided to starve out the British. From time to time Gen. Townshend sent reports that all was well, but it had been known of late that the situation was becoming a desperate one for the British.

For some time after the Townshend expedition started out from the Persian Gulf it was steadily successful. It pushed up the Tigris and Euphrates until in September of 1915 it defeated the Turks decisively at Kut-El-Amara and pushed on to within a few miles of Bagdad, their goal. They defeated the Turks at Ctesiphon, but later the Turks, reinforced, compelled them to retire hastily to Kut-El-Amara.

The battle at Ctesiphon was one of the fiercest of the many hard struggles in which the expeditionary force was engaged. The British were said to have been outnumbered six times by the Ottoman troops. Four times Gen. Townshend rallied his men and led them in their charges. Hardly less desperate a venture was the retreat to Kut-El-Amara. Not only did Gen. Townshend ward off pursuing Turks with comparatively small losses, but succeeded in taking with him all his wounded. A few weeks after it became evident that the army at Kut-El-Amara would be unable to fight its way out, a relief expedition was dispatched.

Throughout the Mesopotamian campaign the fighting has been heavy and the losses severe. On April 14 it was admitted the Tigris army up to that time had lost 8100 men. Since then there have been several important battles. In an engagement at Beitsea, the British lost 4000, according to an announcement from the Turkish war office last week.

The surrender of General Townshend is one of the few instances of the war in which an entire fighting unit of important numbers has laid down its arms. It is one of the largest bodies of troops of the entente allies which have surrendered.

Townshend Hoped to Last.

Up to the last Gen. Townshend kept alive the hope that he would be relieved. King George sent a message of encouragement to him a month ago and in a message, dated April 7, the General said he expected to be relieved shortly. He declared he would hold out to the limit of endurance.

The Mesopotamian campaign has been one of the most difficult the British army has undertaken during the war. The torrid climate and lack of fresh water, together with the difficulties of transport, made great calls on the endurance of the troops. Moreover, the positions held by the Turks below Kut-El-Amara, entrenched and strongly fortified, were very formidable. The original expedition was composed in part of Indian troops, but the relief force for the most part was made up of men from England and the colonies.

A vast amount of criticism has been heaped on the heads of the Government for undertaking the Mesopotamia campaign ever since its inception. In the opinion of the critics the invasion never should have been ordered or it should have been organized on a scale that would have made its success certain beyond question. Students of Britain's policy, however, readily understand the necessity of the operations, however much they may agree with the argument that the force assigned to the occupation of the Tigris Valley was far too small.

The need for an attack against Mesopotamia the moment Turkey entered the war was both political and military.

Mesopotamia is the most direct and feasible route for an attack on the Indian Empire from the continent of Europe. It abuts on the southern half of Persia which, in agreement with Russia, Britain had constituted as one of her "spheres of influence." A political conflagration might easily have been communicated from Asia Minor through Persia to India which would have been difficult if not impossible to extinguish.

Quick Action Necessary.

Quick action to dominate the situation seemed, especially to the Indian Office, of vital necessity to the empire and, since the Indian army was closest to the scene the work of reducing the Tigris Valley naturally fell to it. While the operations in the meantime have developed until they involve not only the Indian army but the entire British Empire, they continue under the direction of the Indian authorities, announcements concerning them being issued in London by the Secretary of State for India.

From a strictly military standpoint the domination of the Tigris country was necessary to safeguard the immense interests of the British navy which are centered in the Mesopotamia oil fields, from which in recent years have come a large part of the fuel oil used by the naval establishment, and, further, to guard the sea routes used for the transport of troops from India, Australia, New Zealand and the other Eastern dependencies to the European battle fields.

A number of years ago British interests began buying control of oil property around the head of the Persian Gulf and gradually expanded their holdings as far north as Bagdad. Millions of dollars were spent in development work and the field came to be one of the main reliances of the navy in its oil demands. Under hostile control, too, the Persian Gulf offered an exceptional lurking place for enemy submarines or commerce raiders, which might imperil all sea traffic eastof Suez.

Facing this situation, the first move after the Ottoman alignment with the central Powers was the dispatch of a small naval force and a landing party to Basra, at the head of the Persian Gulf. Basra was occupied and prepared as a base for larger operations against Mesopotamia.

5600 Russians Are Captured in German Drive.

BERLIN, April 29, (by wireless to Sayville).—The official statement issued today by army headquarters said:

"In the Meuse sector new French counter attacks at Dead Man Hill and to the eastward failed.

"Eastern front: German troops south of Narocz Lake made a thrust in order to improve their observation posts which had been reconquered by us March 26. After and previous to March 20 German troops conquered the Russian positions between Stanarooze and the farm of Stachowie. Fifty-six officers, including four staff officers, and 5600 men were taken prisoner and, one cannon, 28 machine guns and 10 mine throwers were captured.

"The Russians also suffered heavy losses and were considerably increased during the night as the result of a Russian counter-attack which was effected in thick masses.

"The enemy was unable to reconquer one foot of lost territory."

British Merchantman, Unarmed, Sunk by a Submarine.

LONDON (Sunday), April 30.—The unarmed British steamer Teal of London has been sunk by a submarine. The crew was rescued. The Teal was of 766 gross tons.

Many German Batteries Quit Verdun, French Think Battle Is Over.

PARIS, April 29.—The battle of Verdun may now be considered as ended, according to the opinion prevailing in French military circles. Not only the recent French official reports, but yesterday's German announcement stated that nothing important had developed in the Verdun region.

Heavy German batteries in considerable number have been withdrawn from before Verdun and sent to a distant point, which, judging from the increasing activity there, probably is the portion of the line held by the British.

The announcement of the decoration of Gen. Petain and other high officers who have taken part in the battle is regarded as an indication that the French authorities believe that the task of defending Verdun has ended.

The official communication issued by the War Office tonight said:

"In the region of Verdun the enemy bombarded our positions in the Avocourt Wood, on Hill 304, in the region to the south of Hauduomont and in the sectors at the foot of the Meuse hills. Our artillery everywhere shelled the enemy batteries."

LADY PEEK HEARS FROM HUSBAND, WHO IS NEAR KUT

Former St. Louis Girl, Who Is Visiting Here, Gets Cablegram Saying Sir Wilfrid Is Well.

Lady Wilfrid Peek, formerly Miss Edwine Thornburgh, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. William C. Stribling of the St Regis Apartments, said yesterday that she got a cablegram a few days ago from her husband, who is a member of the British relief expedition which attempted to relieve the besieged forces at Kut-el-Amara.

In this cablegram Sir Wilfrid said he was well. The relief expedition, according to dispatches, reached a point within a few miles of Kut, but was unable to break through to the rescue of the British garrison there.

American Generals and Mexicans Hold First Conference common ground, they declare, if the Americans cannot discuss the withdrawal of the troops.

Ready to Persue Villa.

Officers of the Sonora army called here by Obregon said tonight that their forces would be mobilized for the pursuit of Villa as soon as the Americans were out of Mexico.' These 6000 troops are now stationed in Eastern Sonora, along the western slope of the Sierra Madres. From these positions they are naturally near the passes which lead to the American line of communications.

Following usual precautions, the American commander has posted strong forces in the western end of all the passes and, according to the Mexican officer, an American army aeroplane constantly patrols the country above these danger points.

It is known here that Gen. Funston considers the only serious danger which his men would be in in case of a break in the Mexican Government would be from Calles' troops, which could cut his line of communication and force the column to fight its way through.

What U. S. Will Insist Upon.

While the instructions sent by Secretary of War Baker to Gens. Scott and Funston have been zealously kept secret, it is known that the following general conditions will be insisted on by the American representatives:

Open and effective co-operation of the Carranzistas with the Americans.

Extension of the American lines into Mexico at least as far south as Casas Grandes and probably farther.

Relegation to the American military the duty of policing "a northern zone" consisting of the territory directly south of the international boundary.

Policing of the remainder of the territory "a southern zone"—by the Carranzistas.

Co-operation in the handling of supplies for the American troops.

Granting of the use of the Mexican railways to the expeditionary force.

On the acceptance of these conditions, it was believed Americans would agree not to penetrate farther south than a line to be agreed on, and that they would consent to withdrawal just as soon as they should receive adequate assurance that the Villa and other bands had been eradicated.

Social Duties Extended.

For a time today it appeared that the announced intention of both sides to the conference "to get right down to business" was not going to be carried out. The "courtesy call" made to El Paso by Gen. Obregon and his fellow officials this morning occupied so much time that rumors spread that the conference itself had been begun. It was after 12 o'clock when the visit ended and by the time every one had finished their luncheon the middle of the afternoon had been reached. It was not until after 3 o'clock when the time of the first session was set.

The first conference came to an end exactly two hours after it was begun. Another conference will be held tomorrow, this time in El Paso.

The reception to the visiting Mexicans developed into more of a military demonstration than a mere social affair. When Gen. Obregon's big touring car rolled off the international bridge, his eye was greeted by double lines of American soldiers, planted along Santa Fe street, standing at attention.

On South El Paso street and along Stanton street, leading to the railway station, where the private car occupied by Gens. Scott and Funston was standing, the same dispositions were made.

Troops of cavalry were succeeded by companies of infantry and interspersed here and there were machine-gun detachments in marching equipment. Each soldier wore two belts of cartridges.

The massed bands of the Sixth, Sixteenth and Twentieth Infantry regiments were stationed at the Stanton street depot. As the visitors drew near these struck up "Columbia."

A guard of honor around the American Generals' car presented arms as the Mexicans alighted and went inside.

Escorted by Gen. Bell.

The visiting party consisted of Gen. Obregon, Gen. Jacinto Trevino, commander of the division of the northeast; Gen. P. Elias Calles, Military Governor of Sonora; Gen. Luis Gutierrez, Carranza Commander at Chihuahua; Gov. Ignacio Enriquez, Civil Governor of Chihuahua, and Andres Garcia, Mexican Consul in El Paso. They were escorted by Brigadier-General George Bell Jr., commander of the El Paso base.

Col. Robert E. Lee Michie, Gen. Scott's aid, and Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, aid to Gen. Funston, greeted the Mexicans as they boarded the car. Inside they were met by Gens. Scott and Funston.

Shortly after the arrival of the visitors, Gen. Bell, Col. Michie, Capt. Lee and several of the others came outside the private car, leaving only the principals inside. This, coupled with the fact that the visit seemed to drag out long past the time usually allotted for "courtesy calls," gave rise to a report that the formal conference was on.

Not long afterward, however, Gen. Obregon stepped out of the car. His associates followed. The party returned to its automobiles and moved away through the lanes of khaki-clad troops, who again stood at attention.

Gens. Scott, Funston and Bell, with their aids, drove to the Union Station and had lunch in a railway restaurant. Shortly after returning to their car they were visited by Gen. Trevino and Consul Garcia, and the details of the first conference were arranged.

Went to Customs House.

In the meantime, the Mexican officials, after dining, proceeded to the customs house in Juarez. They established themselves in the council chamber, where the conference was to be held, in close discussion of the case they were to present to the American representatives. They had not finished when a bugle salute announced the arrival of the American conferees.

As there had been no public announcement of the conference, only a few spectators and a small guard of Mexican soldiers were on hand. The American party consisted of Gens. Scott and Funston and their aids, Col. Michie and Capt. Lee. They were escorted by Consul Garcia and were met by Gens. Obregon and Trevino and Gen. Obregon's chief of staff, Gen. Francisco Sorrano, who led them through a bare, uncarpeted hall into the council chamber.

No attempt had been made to decorate the council chamber, whose furniture consisted solely of a long row of chairs, ranged against the walls; an ordinary flat-top desk, set at one end of the room, and three portraits of distinguished Mexican patriots, Hidalgo, Juarez and Francisco Madero.

It was at the table, directly beneath the portrait of Hidalgo, that the conference began. Only Gens. Scott, Funston, Obregon and Trevino took part.

Gen. Scott Represents Only the War Department at Conference.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—In the conference with Gen. Obregon, Major-General Scott is acting only for the War Department, it was said today, and is in no sense a State Department representative.

Since the whole question of Carranza's formal suggestion that the American forces be withdrawn is a State Department matter and never has been officially transmitted to the War Department, it is clear that only the military aspect of the situation at the border and beyond can be formally considered by the conferees.

Whatever Gen. Scott may indicate as to the determination to retain the troops in Mexico until all danger of border raids has passed, it is believed here that his chief purpose throughout the conferences, will be to secure co-operation in the way of use of Mexican railroads to supply the troops. A definite understanding as to what course shall be pursued where the Americans approach a town, and to what extent they may be enabled to purchase supplies; and, also, possibly some arrangement for interchange of information that would aid in running down the bandits, either by American or Mexican forces.

Gen. Obregon's views will be fully reported to both the War and State Departments. If he makes a suggestion of definite date for withdrawal of the Americans or for a method of determining when the danger of border raids has passed, it will be considered by the State Department, it is understood, when the question of drafting a reply to the Carranza note is again taken up.

DEPEW, AT BIRTHDAY DINNER, SAYS ONE WAS HISTORY MAKING

Tells How Guests Regarded His Speech as Insult, but Reform Followed in Many Cities.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The Montauk Club of Brooklyn tonight gave to Chauncey M. Depew its twenty-fifth annual dinner in honor of his birthday. The anniversary fell last Sunday, when the former Senator was 82 years old, but the feast could not be held then. There were 500 guests tonight.

When President James R. English had introduced him, Depew harked back to the first of the celebrations of the club.

"The commencement of these dinners," he said, "was history-making. There had been corrupt practices carried on openly and condoned by legislative acts in this and other cities. In referring to this I said that it touched my funny bone, while in classic and patriotic times civic virtue was rewarded by statutes, in our day the city fathers presented to local bosses franchises of incalculable value. Curiously enough, the city fathers present took my saying this as an insult and left the table. The dinner adjourned in confusion and downstairs the night was spent in discussing whether it was a breach of hospitality for the guest of the evening to have made, even humorously, statements which could be interpreted into grave charges against the honesty of the city government.

"It was not long before a committee was appointed. The ring in King's County, which had dominated its affairs for many years, was overthrown, the wave spread over to New York, with similar results and from there went all over the country."

MAN MUMBLES NAME OF CRONE

Wife Has Him Taken to City Hospital for Observation.

Police were called last night to the home of Fred Winter, 40 years old, of 5716 North Broadway. Mrs. Winter requested that her husband be taken to the city hospital for observation because he had been acting strangely.

On the way to the hospital, a policemen said, Winter kept talking of losses recently sustained and frequently mumbled the name of Charles Christian Crone, real estate dealer, who is serving a term in the penitentiarty for forgeries in connection with real estate transactions.

WOMAN SHOOTS TWO MEN IN A ROOMING HOUSE

Says They Created a Disturbance and Struck Her After Forcing an Entrance.

Julius Puschner, 25 years old, a bartender of 3815 Louisiana avenue, and Edward Eddy, a machinist, 2825 Chippewa street, were shot and slightly wounded at a rooming house at 3330 Lucas avenue at 11:45 last night. Miss Emma Jenkinson, proprietor of the house, was arrested. She admitted the shooting.

Miss Jenkinsond told the police that the two men, with Carl Puschner, a brother of Julius, and Stephen Murray came to the house and boisterously demanded admittance. When she answered their knocks at the door, she said, they pushed by her and one of them struck her.

She called to her mother, Mrs. Harriet Jenkinson, to bring a revolver from upstairs. When she got the weapon she began shooting. One bullet grazed the left side of Puschner's head and another hit Eddy in the left leg.

Policemen who heard the shots and saw the men running away arrested all of them, except Murray, at Channing and Lucas avenues. The wounded men refused to tell how they came by their hurts. They were taken to the city hospital.

WOMAN IS SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN THROWN FROM AUTOMOBILE

Steering Apparatus Breaks and Machine Collides With Curbing, Hurling Her Over Wind Shield.

Miss Emily Weber, 23 years old, of 4569 Washington boulevard, was seriously injured shortly after last midnight when she was thrown from the automobile of F. A. Morris, a sales manager, of 3807 McDonald avenue, in an accident at Grand avenue and Itaska street.

Morris was driving. The steering apparatus broke and the machine turned toward the sidewalk, colliding with the curbing and throwing Miss Weber over the windshield. She fell on her face and suffered internal injuries.

The machine overturned, pinioning Morris beneath it. His injuries consisted of cuts and bruises about the face, hands and arms. The couple were taken to the city hospital.

SISTER OF SIR ROGER CASEMENT ASKS PRESIDENT TO SEE HER

Request Made Through Lawyer Is Referred to State Department.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—An appeal today to President Wilson from a lawyer representing Mrs. Agnew Newman, a sister of Sir Roger Casement, asking Mr. Wilson to receive her in order that she might ask assistance for Sir Roger, was referred to the State Department.

Mrs. Newman is in New York.

JEAN ST. CYR TO BE AVIATOR

Exquisite Joins the Curtiss School at Newport News.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—"I am tired of yachting and the frivolity of social life and expect to find solace in soaring high above the clouds, far from the madding throng," said Jean Harold St. Cyr, of New York, Washington and Palm Beach, when he entered the Curtiss Aviation School at Newport News today to learn the art of flying.

St. Cyr has rented a large suite of rooms at a fashionable hotel at Old Point.

100 ARMORED AUTOS FOR U. S.

Each Is to Have Two Guns and Go 60 Miles an Hour.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 29.—The Locomobile Company of America, of which Andrew L. Riker, member of the Naval Consulting Board, is president, has received an order for 100 double-mounted armored automobiles for the United States army, according to a statement made here today. The cars will carry two machine guns, one aft and one forward.

The guns will be mounted on six-cylinder models, equipped with pneumatic tires and will have a speed of 60 miles an hour. The cars will carry four men besides the operator.

REVISION OF WAR RULES NECESSARY, LANSING SAYS

Aeroplane, Dirigible, Submarine and Automobile Factors Calling for Change.

PEACE MUST COME FIRST

Secretary of State Is Speaker Before American Society of International Law.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—"The present titanic struggle of the great empires of Europe has shaken international law to its foundations," Secretary Lansing declared here tonight at the dinner of the American Society of International Law.

"There is coming a time, which will begin with the restoration of peace to this suffering and war-sick world, when we will have to readjust our ideas as to the rules of international law. I do not mean the principles of that law, for they are immutable, founded as they are on justice, righteouness and humanity.

"I mean that the application of these principles to new conditions will give us new rules which have never before been recognized or even conceived by the nations of the world, and which cannot, therefore, be now invoked by belligerent or neutral.

Factors Changing Rules.

"If I was asked what was the chief cause of the new conditions and changed methods of land and naval warfare, I would unhesitatingly answer the invention of the internal combustion engine. It has made practicable the automobile, the submarine, the aeroplane and the dirigible. It has made surprise almost impossible on land and it has vastly increased the possibility of surprise at sea.

"The change of conditions which this invention, aided by the telephone, the wireless and the camera, has brought about is comparable only with that which was wrought by the invention and use of gunpowder. These new conditions offer to the student of international law a field of speculation which is at once attractive and difficult.

"I mean by 'difficult' that however ardent the student may be, he must go very slowly or he will lose his bearings. He must be a philosopher, rather than a legalist. He must scrap-heap a lot of the old ideas embalmed in layers of precedent and return for light and inspiration to those eternal principles which must guide nations in their relations with one another if liberty and justice are to be exalted in the earth.

"It is the unchangeable standard of these fundamental principles which is the rock of salvation to international law, and whatever code of rules as to the conduct of war may in the future be formulated by the nations of the world must find a sure foundation on that rock which imbedded deep in the consciousness of modern civilization."

In conclusion, Secretary Lansing paid this tribute to former Secretary Root, president of the society:

"In the new field, to which we will turn our attention and which I pray God may soon be open to us, I hope that the society may continue to have as its president the wise statesman and profound thinker who for the past ten years has given so much of himself to the society and to whom in very large measure our present prosperity is due. With his commanding intellect and lofty ideals to guide us, we can advance with the full assurance that we are treading the path which will lead us to the heights."

Isolation a Peace Force, Says Gray.

Declaring that international law is international morality, Judge Gray of Delaware expressed belief that moral rather than armed force will evolve a concert of international authority after the war for preservation of peace. Regarding the proposed formation of a world court with international police power, Judge Gray said: "I do not think there will ever be such a concert of nations that, by armed force, they can coerce a nation to obey mandates of morality through international law. But when world-wide opinion is formed there will be a force found ample against a recalcitrant nation for violation of international law.

"Broad humanities underlie the notes which have come from our State Department in the past year. Let us hope that this country will proclaim international morality, that no nation can violate it with impunity, without isolation in the family of nations."

"Preposterous dogma," was how David Jayne Hill, former Ambassador to Germany, described the European theory that, by might of right, a nation may do as it pleases. "That theory," said Hill, "is a rudimentary vestige of departed imperialism. Commerce imperialism continues to the present time, and now constitutes a menace to all mankind. No one aware of the origin of the war can doubt that it is fundamentally a war for trade. This demands new lagel adjustments."

Senator Gore of Oklahoma, at the night session, said the United States should continue to rely upon moral, rather than military force, and to dedicate itself to the principles of humanity, the idea and ideals of peace, arbitration and international justice. The cause of international peace, he emphasized, never stood in such sore need of friends as at the present time.

Senator Stone, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, impressed the gathering with the nation's need of a great navy for defensive purposes and offensive purposes if need be, and impregnable coast fortifications.

Industrial Union to Meet.

The Workers International Industrial Union, Local 101, will hold a mass meeting to which all wage workers are invited at 8 p. m. tomorrow in Neumeyer's Hall, Eighth street and Lafayette avenue. International Labor day will be discussed.

EYE-WITNESS ACCOUNTS OF RIOTING IN DUBLIN

Rebels Barricaded Themselves in St. Stephen's Green Behind Barrier of Automobiles—Post-office Stocked With Provisions.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, April 29.—The following description of the revolt in Dublin, adding something to the Associated Press account mailed from near that city, was given by an eyewitness, who reached England from Dublin last night:

"Throughout the greater part of Monday afternoon most of the city was in the hands of the rebels. In considerable portions of the city, however, there was no fighting. Perfect calm prevailed. Theaters and moving picture shows were open as usual and the people were allowed to pass through the streets as in ordinary times.

Troops Open Fire on Rebels.

"Early Tuesday troops began to arrive and a concerted movement was begun to eject the rebels from the positions they had taken. The plans of the authorities was obviously to surround them and with this aim, troops were hurried to strategic points. Fire was opened upon the Sinn Feiners who were in strong force in Sackville and Dame streets. Military snipers upon the roof of the college and sheltered by chimneys fired continuously at the rebels approaching the college. One rebel was shot dead immediately in front of the building and his body was taken inside.

"On Tuesday the rebels in the trenches on Stephen's Green were barricaded with a great collection of automobiles, other vehicles and paraphernalia of all sorts. A little boy who was peering through the railing here was shot by a rebel sniper. During the day automobile ambulances made many visits to the hospitals carrying injured.

"Just before lunch Tuesday a big body of rebels rallied from the postoffice and marched to the Gresham Hotel to commandeer the provisions. They returned safely to the postoffice with supplies of meat, flour, bread and vegetables.

"In the evening the authorities, determined to drive the rebels from a shop at Kelly corner, where there has been much sniping, trained a machine gun on the building and its front was quickly smashed in. A number of prisoners were taken here.

Gun Fire Riddles Building.

"The situation was taken more strongly in hand by the military early on Wednesday. Nobody was allowed to stand in the streets, and concerted measures were taken against Liberty Hall, the headquarters of the Sinn Feiners. A plain green flag floated over this building. Two small guns were brought up and fire was opened upon the hostile headquarters. Forty shells were fired in five minutes.

"The first shot carried off the flag and little was left of the building when the firing stopped. Most of the rebels managed to escape by back exits.

"At noon the Military Committee closed Camden street, which leads to the Portobello Barracks. There was a good deal of firing here and the soldiers took possession of a saloon which the rebels were occupying and made prisoners of the rebel garrison.

"Soon afterwards all the saloons in the city were closed by order of Col. Kenard. As soldiers began to appear in greater numbers the excitement died down somewhat.

"Although there were still some parts of the city in possession of the rebels when in Dublin at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, there was no fear of any further outbreak."

A Northern Whig newspaper of Monday says the Sinn Feiners' arrangements for Easter maneuvers throughout Ireland were suddenly canceled Sunday but no reason was officially given for the cancellation. The newspaper adds it was believed the authorities were about to put a stop to the activities of the volunteers.

Although this issue of the Belfast newspaper was printed before the Dublin revolution became known, it seemed to shed much light on matters which led to disturbances. The article shows that the Sinn Feiners for several days previously had been suspicious of Government plans against them and that the climax appears to have been reached Saturday when the Government police raided the residence of a man named O'Neil following a hearing of a charge against him in a police court on allegation that he threatened to shoot three soldiers. A number of policemen visited O'Neil's home, according to the newspaper, and secured a big amount of rifles, ammunition and supplies.

The Times publishes an account by an eyewitness of the Dublin uprising which emphasizes the excellent organization of the rebels and the fairly successful efforts of the leaders to restrain rioting. This account says:

Text of the Times' Account.

"Civilians were not molested in the streets and much of the firing was of blank cartridges. There was an effort to show that the movement was strictly military and directed only against the police. There was a little looting, and only 10 or 20 shops were entered. There was no violence against private persons, and as long as you did not wear a uniform you were as safe walking in Dublin streets as in the streets of London.

"This shows a remarkable difference from the Dublin riots two years ago, when it was not safe for anybody to walk in the streets for fear of violence. There was barbed wire around the postoffice, but the sentinels made no effort to prevent people who wished to do so from crawling under the barriers.

"On the other hand, it was made clear that anybody in His Majesty's uniform would be shot at sight.

"Another illustration of the rebels' excellent organization was the fact that, although food was commandeered from a big hotel, it was paid for. According to reports, the money came from the postoffice vaults, where it is alleged a quantity of new paper money was seized."

"We planned to ride simultaneously with the Dublin comrades, but something went wrong with the arrangements," said a laeder of the Sinn Feiners in Cork. "We might have been in possession of the postoffice but for the fact that the military was there first," said the leader.

"Now I do not think we will ride here, but if they come to demand our arms we shall shoot them. When the news of the Dublin rising trickled through here Monday, we all retired to our armored barracks, lowered our rifles, polished bayonets, set in stores of provisions and prepared for—anything.

"The Bishop of Cork and the Lord Mayor came to the barracks at midnight and demanded admission, which was granted after considerable parley. They implored us to lay down our arms and not to resort to physical force. We refused absolutely. Sorrowfully and with bowed head, the Bishop said: 'Then I leave you to your fate.' We told him we did not fear our fate, whereupon he departed."

A. L. Cole, who arrived from Dublin today, told this story: "I went over to Dublin to the Dublin spring cattle show a week ago. On Monday about 2 o'clock a man came to the show and said, 'I would go into town today if I were you. The Sinn Feiners are having a bit of a riot. They began a couple of hours ago, and it looks serious. They have shot three or four policemen.' We returned to our hotel by a circuitous route. The rebels by that time had seized the postoffice and were entrenched in St. Stephen's Green.

"On Tuesday we went to the show again, but it was a fiasco, for there were no trains or tramway cars. By Tuesday morning they had not only occupied Westland Row Station, but had torn up a long stretch of railway on the Kingstown line. The Harcourt street station was also in their hands for a time, but they were routed out of there.

Irish Girl's Heroism.

W. A. Reid, gave an account which included a thrilling story of a young Irish girl's inspiring heroism:

"I arrived in Dublin on Monday night," he said, "and was passing Kingsbridge, close to the park, in a cab, when people came running. They shouted to us to turn back, as it was dangerous to proceed. We then tried to get through on foot, but a volley made us halt, and we spent the night in a billiard saloon. On Tuesday morning we reached Upper Mount street without mishap, although we heard firing during the day.

"On Wednesday evening the military began to come in and proceeded to creep up to the houses occupied by the rebels, taking what cover they could. The snipers were ready for them, however, and I saw soldiers badly wounded.

"A young Irish girl, not more than 16, dashed out of a house and ran like a deer right in the face of a hail of snipers' bullets. She grasped a wounded soldier under the arms—a stranger to her, for he had just arrived from England—and dragged him to where others were ready to carry him to the hospital. Then back that Irish girl ran for another stricken man.

"When I left the rebels were still holding Sackville street, the Westland Road Station, the postoffice and a number of big houses that afford opportunities for effective sniping."

GERMAN GAS WAVE SWEEPS BACK FOR 3000 YARDS

British Report Apparently Great Casualties Among Enemy Because of Trick of the Wind.

LONDON, April 29.—The British War Office report issued tonight says:

"Eary this morning after a heavy bombardment and under cover of gas the enemy made two small attacks opposite Hulluch, but were driven back. The gas broke back over the enemy trenches and the Germans were seen leaving their trenches and running to the rear on a front of about 700 yards. Judging by the number of ambulances seen coming up to Hulluch the enemy must have suffered considerable casualties from our artillery and his gas. The ground behind the enemy lines was colored by gas on a front of about 1000 yards to adepth of 3000 yards."

CHILE TO USE INTERNED SHIPS

Germans Agree to Allow Use of Three for Coast Trade.

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 29.—Germany has acceded to the petition of the Government of Chile to allow three German steamers interned in Chilean ports to be used for travel along the coast of Chile.

Disturbances in Dublin Gradually Being Put Down

ties at any point become too lively, the troops throw a few shells into the houses they occupy and such explosions have caused fires, while other fires have been started by the rebels themselves.

"They have barricaded Sackville street and are in possession of all the houses there, but they were shelled out of Liberty Hall by a gunboat on Tuesday and we occupied their headquarters immediately. They burned Linen Hall barracks and other small fires have occurred.

"In the early stages of the revolt, the Sinn Feiners fired on the members of the fire brigade, but later we cleared the area around the fires and the firemen were able to extinguish the flames.

"On Wednesday, the military arrangements were completed by the arrival of further reinforcements and the rebels were hemmed in in Sackville street. The work of disposing the troops to deal with the snipers occupied much time and care, but eventually this district and other rebel quarters were surrounded. Everything done has been carried out according to plans.

"A big cordon has been drawn all around Dublin and shorter cordons around the inner districts.

Men Landed From Fleet.

"Regarding the situation in the provinces on the whole, it is very good. We were naturally apprehensive lest there might be some response there to the Dublin movement. Fighting occurred in Galway near Athenry, where the police now are in possession of the town, but the rebels are encamped in a ruined castle. There also has been fighting in a Galway town which the rebels attacked and compelled us to land men from the fleet to support the military.

"Encounters took place at Enniscorthy, County Wexford, and there were certain rebellious assemblages in Meath and Louth, but on the whole reports are that quiet prevails. This applies also to Cork, Limerick, Kerry, Clare, Kilkenny, Mays, Sligo, Tipperary, Leitrim, Kildare, Roscommon and all of Ulster."

When asked concerning the origin and connections of the rebel movement with the Germans, the Viceroy said there was an absolute certainty the rebellion was timed to take place with the knowledge of Germany and was intended to bring about the withdrawal of troops from England to Ireland.

"As to the landing of Sir Roger Casement," said Baron Wimborne, "that all was arranged in Germany with the connivance of the Sinn Feiners. On the night of his arrest a motor car upset into a river and the occupants who were drowned both wore Sinn Fein badges.

"The Germans do not seem to have supplied the rebels with arms, which are of all descriptions, even including fowling pieces. A proclamation issued by the rebels announcing the foundation of the Irish republic was signed by seven persons, including J. T. Clark, Connoly, Pearce and McDermott."

Augustine Birrell, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, who was present during the interview with the Viceroy, supplemented his remarks by saying the situation would be dealt with according to martial law, which now is in full operation in Ireland and deprives the citizens of the the right of a civil trial. Mr. Birrell was not overwilling to give information as to occurences, but he said he was satisfied the situation was well in hand and that the suppression of the movement was a matter of a short time.

The visit of the Associated Press correspondent to the vice regal lodge followed a long drive in an open motor lorry through the disturbed sections of the city and past barricades where soldiers knelt or lay down in replying to the rebel snipers. Occasionally bullets whistled overhead and the rattle of a machine gun was heard.

Boys Waiting for Bread Shot.

No soldier is permitted to walk about without a rifle, as such a proceeding would bring almost certain death. Citizens stood behind curtains and windows as the automobile of the correspondent dashed by. Only a few ventured on the porches and they fear to go to the stores to obtain provisions. This fear was fully justified, as the Associated Press correspondent saw two boys shot down while waiting at a bakery for bread. In other parts of the city also many civilian casualties were caused, but the number of either soldiers or civilians killed or wounded could not be obtained.

The rebels today have been confining their activities to sniping in various parts of the city. The scenes of their operations have been circumscribed to the districts about Sackville street, the cattle market and St. Stephen's Green, where they are surrounded by vigilant troops in complete cordons, while the city itself is cut off from approach by another cordon whose limits are around the circular road which surrounds the city.

Outside the three areas already mentioned as being in possession of the rebels numbers of isolated snipers occasionally fire pot shots at passing soldiers. These snipers are difficult to locate. At a hotel on the north wall, dozens of shots went through windows and struck walls, while spent bullets dropped everywhere in the streets.

Sinn Fein Was Founded 10 Years Ago; Has Branches in U. S.

The society, Sinn Fein (pronounced "sin fane") was founded more than 10 years ago by Arthur Griffith, an Irish newspaper man. The Gaelic words composing its name mean "Ourselves Alone."

It is a patriotic, non-secret society whose aim is to further what has been called the Irish renaissance, to teach the Irish people that out of themselves and through themselves they must build the future of their country. It has had branches in the United States, their principal purpose being to foster the study of Gaelic.

Before the home rule crisis in 1913 the society numbered about 10,000. In the exciting days that followed when the Ulstermen were threatening armed resistance to the establishment of home rule, its numbers were vastly augmented.

Two Irish Prisoners Taken From Jail to Unnamed Destination.

TRALEE, Ireland, April 29.—Austin Stack, commander of the Tralee Corps of Sinn Feiners, and Cornelius Collins, who are charged with abetting in the importation of arms from the enemy, were taken from the Tralee Jail this afternoon, under a strong military escort and removed on a train for an unknown destination. There was no demonstration.

Collins and Stack were taken into custody early in the week, after the outbreak in Dublin. Another man of unknown nationality was arrested at the same time, but his identity has not been disclosed.

PRESIDENT MOTORS 75 MILES

Takes Dinner at Harper's Ferry, W. Va., With Mrs. Wilson.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—President Wilson motored to Harper's Ferry, W. Va., 75 miles, late today and took dinner at an inn overlooking the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, his cousin, and five secret service men. They returned late tonight.

MILLIKEN'S TALK OF PROFITS READS LIKE WAR BUDGET

Boards Suburban Train With $9,500,000 Check, but Uses Commutation Ticket.

TELLS OF OIL DEAL

Gets So Wrapped Up in Figures He Forgets All About $250,000 He Made.

John T. Milliken of 1150 Belt avenue stepped aboard a Frisco suburban train at Union Station at 1:35 yesterday afternoon, with two precious possessions in his coat pocket.

One was a certified check for $9,500,000 and the other was a commutation ticket which saved him 15 cents on his 40-mile ride to his country home at Crescent, Mo. The regular fare to Crescent is 50 cents, but the commutation ride is 35 cents.

There was a broad smile on Milliken's face when he handed his commutation ticket to the conductor. He is a serious-minded man, but one of his standing jokes is that he saves 15 cents every time he rides to his St. Louis County "bungalow."

24 Guest Rooms in Bungalow.

This is one of the neatest little bungalows in these parts. For its foundation it has the profits of a messenger boy's salary, the savings of a thrifty gold mine owner and the dividends of a gasoline magnate, fortified from time to time with the acquisitions of a grain speculator. It covers more than an acre of ground and, in the event that "company" should drop in unexpectedly, it has guest-room accommodations for 24 visitors, with a bath connected with each room.

Milliken's latest acquisition of spending money came from the sale of his Oklahoma oil wells, refineries and pipe lines to the Sinclair Oil and Gas Corporation, controlled by Harry Sinclair, who stepped into the financial limelight last year as the angel of the Federal Baseball League.

In telling a Post-Dispatch reporter about the sale of his Oklahoma oil interests yesterday Milliken came near forgetting a comparatively unimportant detail. In addition to $9,500,000 in cash he received $250,000 in stock of the Sinclair Oil and Gas Corporation. This stock has been paying a dividend of more than 6 per cent on a capitalization of $10,000,000 for the last five years.

The new company, resulting from the merger of the Milliken and Sinclair interests, has a capitalization of $50,000,000.

Sounds Like Fairy Tale.

Milliken's estimates of his profits from his Oklahoma oil properties is like a fairy tale.

"I went into the oil business with an investment of $5000," said Milliken to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "When I pulled out Friday I was practically the sole owner of a wonderfully rich field and for more than five years my profits, from this source alone, had been $300,000 a month. I didn't want to get mixed up in oil, because I was the principal owner of the Golden Cycle gold mine in Colorado which had paid me more than $3,000,000 in dividends in about six years.

"My attention was called to the Oklahoma oil field by a man who had been secretary of the Golden Cycle company. I never would have gone into it but for the fact that my old friend, Frank Logan, a Chicago grain broker, decided to take a flyer in oil. He agreed to invest $5000 and asked me to invest an equal amount.

"Logan quit after he had put in $60,000 in addition to his original investment. I stuck, and I didn't see any profit in sight until after I had put in $107,000. Even then there was a constant call for additional investment.

"After taking more than $3,000,000 in dividends from the Golden Cycle gold mine I sold it for $4,000,000 cash and put most of the money in the Oklahoma oil property.

$3,000,000 Out of Mine.

"It has been said that I made nearly $20,000,000 on my gold mine and oil deals. That is wrong. Counting my dividends as clear profit I only made $3,000,000 out of the Golden Cycle mine and taking into account that I re-invested most of this money in the Oklahoma oil field, my net profit on yesterday's sale of the oil property is comparatively small. It didn't amount to more than $5,000,000, or, at the outside, $6,000,000."

Milliken says he intends to invest most of his oil profits in railroad stocks, which, he says, are so low in price that the market quotations show all the water has been squeezed out of them.

"But I've got something bigger than railroad stocks in sight," said Milliken. "I'm sinking a new gold mine in the vicinity of Deadwood, S. D. I have put a couple of hundred thousand dollars into it already, and I may spend two or three millions on it, but when I hit it I will have something bigger than any gold mine ever developed in South Africa. I am confident that I will uncover 200,000,000 tons of ore which will assay $3.50 to the ton, and which can be mined at a cost of $1.50 a ton. Multiply 200,000,000 tons by $2 and you will see that the net market value of this gold will be $400,000,000. It looks like a lot of money but I believe it's there."

Milliken is owner and president of the John T. Milliken Chemical Co., and the John T. Milliken Commission Co., which deals on the Merchants' Exchange.

Another Raise for Thread Makers.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 29.—Notices were posted today in the mills of J. and P. Coats, Ltd., thread manufacturers, announcing an increase in the wages of 2500 employes, effective May 1. While the amount was not stated, officers of the company said that, with the increase granted four months ago, it would approximate 15 per cent.

MGR. BONZANO TO SPEAK AT ODEON MEETING TODAY

Will Be First Public Address Since the Apostolic Delegate Visited St. Louis.

Mgr. John Bonzano, apostolic delegate to the United States and Mexico, will make the first public address of his St. Louis visit at the fifth annual conference of the Catholic Charities of St. Louis at the Odeon at 2:30 this afternoon. At 10 a. m. he will celebrate high pontifical mass at the New Cathedral.

An exhibition of the work of the Catholic charitable institutions will be shown at the Odeon by the children of the following charities: St. Ann's Foundling Asylum, St. Patrick's Day Nursery, St. Joseph's Male Orphan Asylum, St. Frances' Colored Orphan Asylum, St. Mary's Female Orphan Asylum, Deaf Mute Institute, Guardian Angel Settlement and German St. Vincent Orphan Association.

Will Be Opening Prayer.

The opening prayer will be made by the Rt. Hon. Rev. J. A. Connolly. The introductory address will be by Amedee V. Reyburn. Steropticon views of the charitable institutions will be shown, and an address will be made by Archbishop Glennon. The program will close with singing "the Star Spangled Banner."

The boxes at the Odeon have been engaged by R. S. Colnon, W. J. Kinsella, Festus J. Wade, Frank Ruf, Philip Scanlon, Thomas D. Cannon, D. C. Nugent, John S. Leahy, Leo Moser, Amedee V. Reyburn, priests of the Rock Church parish, priests of St. Louis University, the Rev. J. H. Tettemer, Archbishop Glennon, Mrs. D. G. Evans, Thomas Dooley, A. J. Kehoe, Charles P. Stanley, Mrs. Joseph P. Hartnett, Mrs. C. Marquard Forster, Fred P. Meyer, Edward Devoy, O'Neill Ryan, Mrs. S. W. Cobb, Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. Nancy M. Bates, Howard Benoist, George W. Wilson and Mrs. Charles A. Faris.

At 5 p. m. Mgr. Bonzano will give an address at St. Charles Borromeo Church, 2913 Locust street. Following this a reception for him will be held in the parochial residence of the pastor, the Rev. Caesar Spigardi.

Two Priests Promoted.

An event of the visit of Mgr. Bonzano to St. Louis was the promotion of two St Louis priests to the rank of monsignor. These were the Rev. J. J. Tannrath, chancellor of the archdiocese of St. Louis and pastor of the Old Cathedral, and the Rev. P. W. Tallon, pastor of the Visitation Church. Announcement of this was made Friday night at a banquet given by Father Tannrath in honor of the Apostolic Delegate.

This gives St. Louis four church dignitaries with the rank of monsignor. The other two are Mgr. Joseph A. Connolly, vicar general, and the Most Rev. O. J. S. Hoog.

Mgr. Bonzano, accompanied by Archbishop Glennon, spent yesterday visiting the various Catholic schools, convents and charitable institutions. At 9:30 a. m. he visited St. Louis University and at 4 p. m. he went to Christian Brothers' College, where an elaborate reception was given him by the students, who have recently taken up military drill. The college band met the visitors at the entrance to the campus and the students, in military formation, escorted them into the building. There addresses of welcome were made by Brother Lawrence, president of the college, and by John Moran, president of the senior class. A general reception followed.

PROSPECTIVE BUYER OF AUTO, TWO SONS KILLED BY TRAIN

Wabash Engine Hits Car a St. Louis Agent Was Demonstrating Near Stonington, Ill.

DECATUR, Ill., April 29.—Two boys, Merle Meeker, 12 years old, and Wayne Meeker, 10, were killed outright; their father, William Meeker, suffered injuries from which he died soon afterward, and Harry Jacobs, an automobile agent, said to live in St. Louis, was seriously injured at 1:20 this afternoon, when a southbound Wabash passenger train struck an automobile in which the four were riding, at a grade crossing near Stonington.

Jacobs was demonstrating the car to Meeker, a prospective customer, and he drove across the track at the crossing where an elevator cut off his view on one side. He saw the train too late, and tried to cross ahead of it, but the locomotive struck the rear of the car, hurling it against a coal car on a sidetrack. Meeker was placed on a train to be taken to Taylorville, but died before the train reached that place. Jacobs was placed on a northbound train soon afterward and is in a hospital here.

The only Harry Jacobs whose name appears in the St. Louis city directory is a Deputy Inspector of Boilers and Elevators and lives at 3124A Chippewa street. A relative of this Jacobs said last night that the man injured near Decatur was not known to him.

SPATS AND "LOUD" CLOTHES CAUSE YOUNG MAN'S ARREST

Taken by Detectives Who Had Description of Attire That Was Easy to Recall at Sight.

A flashily-dressed young man was arrested yesterday by detectives, who had an accurate description of his clothes, as he was trying to sell a watch at Eighth and Market streets. He said he was Burt B. Wellington, 26 years old, and that his home was "all over California."

The watch he was trying to sell was found to be the property of Joseph J. McGlynn, City Attorney of East St. Louis, stolen March 17.

The youth was wearing a pearl-gray hat, a shirt with orange and white stripes, a blue-green suit and gray spats, all of which had been described to the detectives by a merchant who, four days ago, bought a $45 watch for $4 from a young man thusly dressed. This watch was identified as one stolen April 8 from Richard Mussmann of the Plaza Hotel. Mussmann also lost $80 in cash.

In the young man's possession the police found jewelry stolen April 4 from August Frank in the Washington Hotel. He also had a collection of old coins and gold medals. The youth said he bought the watches from men on the street and that he got the coins in California. He said he came to St. Louis a month ago and had been staying at the Maryland Hotel.

EAST ST. LOUIS MAN IS PAROLED

Reilly M. Smith Was Convicted in Omaha of Murder.

OMAHA, Neb., April 29.—Reilly M. Smith, former Deputy United States Marshal at East St. Louis, who was convicted of murder in the second degree in the Omaha courts last December, was today released from custody by the District Court under parole to his wife. Smith left Omaha tonight for East St. Louis, where his wife and daughter reside.

Smith was convicted of murdering Mrs. Frances Campbell in Omaha last October. Mrs. Campbell was from St Louis. Smith was infatuated with her. He claimed the shooting was the result of an accident. Smith, who is 69 years of age, has become feeble-minded and, according to three physicians, is not responsible for his actions.

PERSONAL ESTATE OF J. H. ALLEN MORE THAN $500,000

Cotton Man Also Had Land in Eight States and Mexico, 100,000 Acres.

The St. Louis Union Trust Co., as executor, yesterday filed an inventory of the estate of James H. Allen of 5061 Lindell boulevard, a wealthy cotton broker, who died Aug. 20, at the age of 72 years. The unusual delay, it was said, was due to the long time required to examine the titles of land aggregating more than 100,000 acres and scattered through eight states and in Mexico.

The inventory lists personalty appraised at $510,898.73, including notes amounting to $44,382.50; stocks, $365,474 (par value); bonds, $39,750; insurance, $60,000; chattels, $1091.25, and a club membership valued at $200. Stock of a face value of $200,000, but listed as worthless, also is mentioned.

The notes, if collectible, bonds and chattels, are assessable for city taxes, their aggregate face value being $85,223.75. The Assessor's books show that Allen made no return in 1914, but also that no notification to do so was sent to him, he being relieved of responsibility through the omission.

Assessed at $20,000.

In 1915, however, his personal property assessment appears at $20,000. The figures are in red ink, indicating that they were estimated by the Assessor.

Allen's largest single realty holding was 64,078 acres in the State of Chiapas, Mexico. He had 738 acres in Mississippi, 3096 acres in Tennessee, 500 acres in Alabama, 600 acres in Louisiana and 40,000 or more acres in Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas and other places, besides property at 5237-39 Delmar boulevard.

Allen's will divided his property almost equally among his wife and five children, but contained the extraordinary statement that each heir had promised to give half his inheritance to charitable and Christian work and to use the other half to try to earn other property to be used for "good Christian purposes."

"All Belongs to the Lord."

"All we have belongs to the Lord," the will read, "and He will hold us to a strict account for the way we use it." Other statements unusual in a document of the sort were: "The Devil is smarter than all mankind put together, and will always lead us astray if left to our weak selves."

"I hope my children will try to live true, humble Christian lives, working to upbuild Christ's kingdom in their own hearts and in the hearts of others."

"Try to live every day as if it was your last day on earth, for some day may soon be your last day."

The children are Mrs Sallie Rubey Sickel, Henry W. Allen, Mrs. Hettie Ethel Grover, Presley R. Allen and Terry W. Allen.

RAIDER STORY STIFFENS RISKS

German Commerce Destroyer Said to Have Slipped by British Patrol.

NEW YORK, April 29.—War risk insurance both in this city and in London stiffened today as the result of a report in financial circles that another German commerce raider had slipped through the British sea patrol.

The raider was reported to have escaped during the recent bombardment of British east coast towns by a German battle cruiser squadron.

Suggested Form for a Letter to Speaker Clark

To those who do not care to go to the trouble of composing a letter expressing the sentiments against the propaganda that has as its purpose the repudiation of the President's policy of insisting that Germany respect American rights on the sea, the Post-Dispatch suggests this form which can be cut from the paper and signed and mailed.

HON. CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

As a citizen of St. Louis, I condemn the sentiment expressed in 14,000 pro-German telegrams sent to Senators and Representatives in Congress from Missouri, demanding, in effect, that they repudiate the President's policy and support peace at any price.

I favor peace, if consistent with the sovereignty, honor and interest of the United States, but I urge Missouri Senators and Representatives to support the President unqualifiedly in his efforts to maintain American rights, international law and the interests of humanity against aggression by any foreign nation.

Please communicate the contents of this letter to other Missouri members of Congress.

Yours truly,

POST-DISPATCH'S STAND IS WIDELY ENDORSED HERE

"Vindicate St. Louis" Editorial Commended in Letters and Messages to the Paper.

ADVICE IS FOLLOWED

Communications to Counteract "Peace" Plotters Are Sent to Washington.

Many letters and telephone messages were received by the Post-Dispatch yesterday, commending the editorial "Vindicate St. Louis," which was printed on the first page of Friday's Post-Dispatch. In this editorial readers were urged to send to Speaker Clark and the Missouri delegation in Congress letters condemning the sentiment of the pro-German telegrams sent to Congressmen, by the thousand, from St. Louis in the past few days. A form letter to Speaker Clark was given, for the use of those who might choose to sign and forward it.

According to Hans Wulff of 1360 Union boulevard, a lawyer, who is in charge of the sending of the pro-German messages, more than 14,000 telegrams, most of them in forms provided by him, have been sent to Congressmen from this city. These messages are demands for peace at any price, and, by implication, ask that Congress shall repudiate President Wilson's demands on Germany. Most of the telegrams were so worded as to assert that many others, besides the signer, shared the views expressed. A part of the messages were prepaid by the signers; the rest were paid for, according to Wulff, from the funds of the American Embargo League, which carries on a pro-German propaganda in Chicago.

Telegrams Injured St. Louis.

The Post-Dispatch, in its "Vindicate St Louis" editorial, pointed out the fact that this mass of pro-German telegrams is injuring St. Louis in the eyes of the nation, by creating the impression that it is a center of anti-American sentiment. To overcome this impression, the editorial said, it is necessary that many St. Louisans shall write or wire their Congressmen, condemning the sentiment of the telegrams, and demanding that they stand by the President.

The first day's response to the editorial suggestion showed that many St. Louisans have followed the advice of the Post-Dispatch, and have written or wired, urging their Congressmen to uphold the President.

The Post-Dispatch will be glad to print letters from its readers, expressing their sentiments on this important issue.

Along with letters commending the Post-Dispatch for its editorial, have come letters of an abusive sort, nearly all of them anonymous. The German-American Alliance, Friday night, passed a resolution condemning the Post-Dispatch for having "abused and libeled Americans of German descent." This resolution did not undertake to reply to the "Vindicate St. Louis" editorial, but cited an editorial printed Thursday, which urged the duty of supporting President Wilson. Because of this editorial the alliance's resolution declared the Post-Dispatch to be an "anti-American paper."

Post-Dispatch Position Upheld.

Sixty members of the Princeton Club, at their annual dinner Friday night, indorsed the position taken by the Post-Dispatch, and each of the 60 wired to Speaker Clark the text of the form letter printed with the Post-Dispatch's editorial.

Five lawyers occupying a suite on the thirteenth floor of the Third National Bank Building, immediately on reading the Post-Dispatch editorial, sent letters or telegrams to the St. Louis Congressmen, the Missouri Senators and Speaker Clark, urging them to stand by the President. The lawyers were Anthony A. O'Hallaron, William C. Connett, F. L. Swarts, Abram Lowenhaupt and Dwight D. Currie. Letters from Currie and O'Hallaron are printed elsewhere in this issue of the Post-Dispatch.

The Rev. Dr. John L. Brandt, pastor of the First Christian Church, telephoned to the Post-Dispatch last night, saying:

"I approve of the stand the Post-Dispatch has taken. I was wondering what paper would have the courage to do that very thing. The telegrams which have been sent, as the result of coaching by an organization, do not express the real sentiment of a majority of the people of St. Louis, I feel sure."

Hans Wulff, in charge of the pro-German telegrams, said yesterday that 5000 of the telegrams had been sent "through the Anheuser-Busch brewery, under the direction of August A. Busch." Busch, when asked about this, said he had permitted the circulation of form telegrams in the brewery, and that he did not think more than 200 employes signed them. "That is all I know about it," he added.

It was learned that the forms were circulated, and signatures obtained, in the other breweries, including Lemp's, and the breweries of the St. Louis Brewing Association and the Independent Brewing Co. Money to prepay the dispatches was collected from those who would give it, and the messages signed by the rest were forwarded at the expense of the pro-German fund.

Forms Circulated in Factories.

Wulff said the forms were circulated in other large industrial plants, and he said one large corporation had refused to permit the circulation of the petitions, on the ground that most of its employes were Italians who could not read or write English. At the same time, he said, the heads of the corporation had signed the telegrams and prepaid them. Some such telegrams were signed in the names of corporations.

A letter from Wulff to the Post-Dispatch, replying to the "Vindicate St. Louis" editorial, is printed elsewhere. In this letter, Wulff says 250,000 telegrams "for peace" have been sent to Congressmen. He does not state his authority for these figures.

Letters received by the Post-Dispatch yesterday, on this subject, are the following:

"Support the President."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your editorial on the front page of Friday's paper headed "Vindicate St. Louis," provoked by the recent flooding of Congress with stereotyped telegrams, has my commendation. If the people who signed those telegrams were moved by love of peace, they must realize that such procedure is wholly unnecessary, for it certainly has been demonstrated beyond the possibility of doubt that President Wilson has been a consistent advocate of peace and has demonstrated his sincere determination to prevent war. No such sense of security could exist, were any other man now before the public in President Wilson's place. Therefore, lovers of peace, who, at the same time are upholders of the law and defenders of right and humanity, can best serve their purpose by supporting the President in his championship of their ideals.

But it is apparent that those who are responsible for this campaign to intimidate Congress are furthering a scheme to discredit and embarrass the President, either for the purpose of aiding and abetting one of the warring nations or of defeating the President for reelection. You are to be congratulated upon your effort to make known to the President and to members of Congress that the sentiment of St. Louis is in accord with all the President has done and is doing to uphold the dignity of our country, and to do so, if possible, without resort to the savagery of war.

E. M. GROSSMAN.

"St. Louis an American City."

(Copy of letter sent to Speaker Clark, Senators Stone and Reed, and Congressmen Dyer, Meeker and Igoe.)

Dear Sir: In the opening of this letter I want to state most positively that it is not a letter dictated by any organization, propaganda or association, but that I am writing it individually, and expressing my individual feelings as a citizen, and paying my own postage.

Many hyphenated Americans have been deluging Congressmen with letters and telegrams, paid for by we know not whom, and it struck me that it was about time that the ordinary American citizen, who was for America first, last and all the time, regardless of all costs, should express his sentiments to his Congressman, lest some Congressmen might forget that there were such citizens in countless thousands still alive and kicking in this land.

No sane man wants war merely for the purpose of having war, and no self-respecting citizen desires to have peace at any price. This nation has not yet sunk to that level, although all of us realize, that when it comes to the question of equipment and preparedness, we have sunk pretty low, and that Congress, past and present, Democratic and Republican, is most to blame for this.

A crisis has come in the affairs of this nation, when every patriotic citizen who is an American solely, should demand that Senators and Representatives stand up for the rights of this country, and protect the lives of the American citizens and their property, regardless of costs, and who will see that the murder of American citizens, who are going about their peaceful avocations on the high seas, is avenged.

A great many American citizens, just plain every-day citizens, have become thoroughly disgusted with the large number of Congressmen who are forever and eternally putting their ears to the ground, and keeping their eyes on their political fences, and who devote very little time and thought to the general welfare of the nation, but principally attend to their own political welfare.

I have always been a consistent Democrat, but in the present year I am going to vote consistently for men who have backbone enough to stand up for their country, first, last and all the time, and who will put party expediency in the background, and incidentally I might say, that it would be well, in my opinion, for many of the men in Congress, to give more loyal support to the President in his efforts to uphold the dignity of the country.

Many of us plain citizens out here in St. Louis seriously object to this city being branded as a German-American community. We prefer it to be known just as a plain American city, whose residents believe in the rights of the American citizen, and believe in protecting them, regardless of what country it may offend, or what it may cost us.

No doubt, you are deluged with many letters, but I hope that you will find the time to read this one. It expresses my very strong feeling and sentiments on the question that is paramount in the affairs of the natoin today, at a time when we are in the midst of a crisis such as we have not faced since the outbreak of the Civil War. Very truly yours,

DWIGHT D. CURRIE.

"Submission Worse Than War."

(Copy of letter to Speaker Clark, Missouri Senators and St. Louis Congressmen.)

Dear Sir:

In this time of subsidized propagandist telegrams to members of the National Legislature it might be well for the members to hear from citizens who are only pro-American. I am such an individual and in as far as the Senators and Congressmen from Missouri represent me, I want them to stand by the President, who has shown the greatest patience, the finest intelligence and the deepest patriotism in trying to keep this country out of war and at the same time insist that our rights as a neutral be recognized. Indeed, his desire for an honorable peace has been so strong that the only criticism I hear from real Americans is that he has been too patient and that the country has suffered in the morale of its citizens by not being more strenuous in enforcing rights which have been so clearly and capably outlined. We do not want war just to be in war, but we cannot sacrifice the vital principles of our nationality to avoid it. War is a terrible thing, but it is not as bad as a cowardly submission to wrongs inflicted knowingly, arrogantly and continuously by an alleged friendly Power simply because it is expedient on its part to commit such wrongs.

The Congressman who puts aside his patriotism and the traditions of his country and considers his next election in times like these is a traitor not only to his country, but to his God and all mankind. Yours sincerely,

ANTHONY A. O'HALLARON.

"Have No Funds, but a Vote."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have read with interest the article appearing on your front page today, headed "Vindicate St. Louis." While I deplore the existence of conditions which are the subject of remark in your article. I cannot but feel that you are warranted in expressing the sentiment you do.

Any effort which is not spontaneous, any organized propaganda, the object of which would be to intimidate our representatives in Congress, is wrongful and contrary to the fundamental principles upon which our Government is built.

However, if organized efforts are made in that direction by any class of individuals, it is the right and duty of the balance of our citizens to so express themselves as to inform their representatives in Congress that the expressions formerly sent are not indicative of the true sense of the people. It is, further, our privilege to so advise the President. I propose to do both.

The recent widespread movement has a greater significance. That movement had not as its object simply the sending of telegrams, but was a manifestation of the existence of an organization, the ranks of which are recruited partly from political and partly from racial classes, and which has as its object Germanic interference in the political institutions of America. If we ever have to face that situation it is better we should do so now and have it over with.

We have now no fund to send telegrams with, but we each have a vote in November.

BRECKINRIDGE LONG.

Approves Sentiment of Editorial.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The sentiment in your front page editorial, I am sure, must evoke full response in the heart of every unqualified American.

The propaganda of Mr. Wulff and his confederates in its attempt to deceive any of our representatives, executive or legislative, must defeat itself by its very baldness.

It is to the shame of our country's history that heretofore the rights of our citizens have not been and are not now accorded the respect due them from foreign Governments, and their subjects. It has been and is a reproach on our country that its citizens have found it necessary to put themselves under the protection of foreign flags because their own would not, could not or did not secure to them their safety and their rights. It would be to our greater and additional shame to let such a thing continue.

There is no need to characterize or search for the motives behind the propaganda above referred to. It is fitting, however for our President and our members of Congress to know that Americans are for America, are supporting them in their efforts to secure to Americans their country and their rights, and to look to them to see to it.

W. CHRISTY BRYAN.

A Word for the Irish.

(Copy of a Letter to Senator Stone.)

In this mail I have written Hon. Champ Clark in repudiation of the sentiment expressed in some 14,000 telegrams sent by citizens of St. Louis to their representatives in Congress.

Peace, indeed, we want most heartily; for peace we pray and are willing to make any honorable sacrifice; but if these comparatively few telegrams have led you to believe that the sentiment of Missouri was expressed and that your constituents have called upon you to become the mouthpiece and representative of such a groveling, cowardly whine as is embodied in the phrase, "peace at any price," then, my dear Senator, I extend to you my most sincere sympathy for the shame and disgust you must have experienced because of your misconception of the truth. Such a sentiment could not be attributed to Missouri by her enemies and I will not believe the injustice would be done her by a native son; that William Joel Stone would wield the knife of Brutus.

If you could see, as I have seen, the Germans of St. Louis gravely shaking their heads at the continued outrages heaped upon the land of their adoption by the country of their nativity, you would be assured that the sentiment of these many telegrams does not represent the majority nor even of the majority of the minority—the German element of St. Louis.

If it were not for the fact that the smoke from this tiny bonfire might make it look like a conflagration when viewed from Washington, I should say that is was really quite humorous, as I heartily share the natural distaste for England that has been the cause of this movement by some prominent Irish here, but, unlike them, I have not grasped this opportunity, or, to state it more accurately, I have not let my sentiment against England eclipse my first obligation to America.

I sincerely hope you shall understand and appreciate these Irishmen. It takes no more than the raising of the American flag and a serious call to their patriotism to make them the staunchest Americans.

With best personal regards, I am,
Respectfully yours,
NORBERT J. DONOVAN.

Thinks Wilson Is Wrong.

(Copy of a letter to Speaker Clark.)

Dear Sir: Just read an article in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch requesting all St. Louisans to send letters or telegrams to you urging you to uphold the President, etc. This to offset the thousands of telegrams sent, urging Congress not to sever diplomatic relations with Germany.

It is needless for me to tell you about the Post-Dispatch. You, as well as every good Democrat, will never forget the venomous editorials published against you four years ago. Now this very same paper which could not see anything good in you is trying to use you to foment trouble. (One of its specialties.)

I am not one of those that have been sending telegrams. I do not belong to any alliance or league taking sides in this controversy. Just a plain American citizen.

I believe in my country. I believe in my home and family. I believe in upholding the President when he is in the right and I also believe in voicing my disapproval when I think he is in the wrong, especially when I did what I could in a humble way

The Duty of Americans.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Please accept my congratulations and deep appreciation of the stand you have taken with reference to the German sentiment which has been forwarded to Congressmen as being the sentiment of the United States. I am a real American, a descendant of the early settlers of this country.

Trusting that you will continue to arouse the Americans here to a sense of their duty, I beg to remain with sincere good wishes,

Very truly yours,
E. K. FISHER.

"Movement Was Needed."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

May I congratulate you on your front page article of today (28th), headed "Vindicate St. Louis?" I heartily indorse your sentiments and your movement is very much needed. From a long acquaintance with Eastern sentiment and that abroad, I can say that St. Louis needs some such public pronouncement very badly, and the wide circulation of your paper will give it the necessary publicity.

D. IEL H. CLARK.

"American Spirit Dormant."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Hurrah for the Post-Dispatch!
Hurrah for President Wilson!!
Hurrah for the United States!!!

Congratulations on your independent and able stand in this hotbed of anti-American sentiment—St. Louis.

Your specific and practicable plans to crystallize and give momentum to the rather dormant, though nevertheless genuine, American spirit in St. Louis bids fair for producing the desired results.

I, for one, appreciate the fine patriotic spirit you have displayed.

From a newspaper standpoint your latest move, both in conception and execution, constitutes a master stroke of journalistic enterprise.

Again, congratulations.

Yours with appreciation,
J. O. SPEED.

Wulff Gives His Views.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I respectfully submit the following statement partially in answer to the article "Vindicate St. Louis," published yesterday in the Post-Dispatch. If vituperation and misrepresentation could win this fight, our cause would be hopeless against the Post-Dispatch. That paper says "The telegrams were admittedly sent at the instigation of a pro-German organization as a part of a pro-German propaganda in behalf of German against American interests." This has not only not been admitted, but has been specifically denied. For any paper to accuse 14,000 residents of St. Louis of being un-American is un-American in itself.

It must be understood, of course, that we do not expect to make this unanimous, nor do we anticipate the support of these journals whose sole business it seems to be to save the waning fortunes of Woodrow Wilson.

Stripped of all generalities and other nonsense, there are 14,000 men who signed these telegrams and over 200,000 more in Missouri who are ready to sign similar appeals to Congress. The situation is simply this: A certain portion of American citizenship is opposed to the one-man policy of plunging us into a war without our knowledge or consent. We did not create the condition; we are merely stating the condition. We are absolutely convinced, especially since the events of recent days, that we represent a clear majority of the American people. Believing this to be a fact and fearing that Congress may be kept in ignorance of the true condition of public opinion by papers which repress the public view, we have adopted the system of direct information to Congress.

The right to reach Congress through a direct expression of public opinion is not un-American, but strictly American. To foam at the moth about pro-Germanism and all that sort of exploded rot, demonstrates the weakness of the cause of those who seem to be set on plunging us into war.

This is not the time or place to argue the merits of the question, but in behalf of the 250,000 signers of these telegrams throughout the United States, I respectfully submit to the Post-Dispatch and kindred journals that we will not yield our rights as American citizens by reason of any reflections upon our patriotism or any appeal to our fears.

We welcome the attempt of the Post-Dispatch to gain signatures in this city for its cause, feeling that when it comes to a showdown, it will be found that we can get 10 to its one.

The very fact that in so brief a time as three days, 250,000 people signed telegrams for peace, in as vast an area of territory as that covered by the telegrams sent to Congress recently, must demonstrate and prove to every fair-minded person that this result is not due to organization but that the organization is rather the result of a specific and spontaneous public sentiment. The resort of the weakling is to quibble about the means, but to all those who are sincerely interested in getting to the bottom of American public opinion, results alone count. This mass of telegrams is simply the culmination not of a propaganda, but of a set purpose of the American people not to go to war on a mere quibble or "a doubtful right," as stated by Secretary of State Lansing.

The recent vote in the primaries of Michigan and Nebraska for Henry Ford the great advocate of peace, is another definite demonstration of public sentiment. The fact that the President's victory over Congress in the shelving of the McLemore and Gore resolution was Pyrrhic in nature is another proof that he is flying in the face of public opinion.

The people who have signed these telegrams from all over the United States are rendering this nation a distinctly patriotic service. The President of the United States has not the backing of public opinion in the extreme measures we are led to believe he has decided upon.

As I stated before, we do not expect to make it unanimous. We expect people to differ with us from various causes; some good, some bad and some indifferent. But there is no use being silly about it. The promiscuous calling of names, the threats of investigation and the "To-be-shot-at-sunrise" stuff is played out.

HANS WULFF.

Says War Would Aid Germany.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your article, "Vindicate St. Louis," is an insult to the intelligence of your readers. Do you imagine that the so-called "German-Americans," or any other intelligent people of St. Louis want to avoid war because they fear for Germany? I am engaged in a business parallel to that of a reporter and hear the views of all classes of people. I have found that the almost unanimous view is that the greatest kindness we could do to Germany would be to declare war.

In that case Germany would not have to respect our flag and would blow up ships carrying munitions of war indiscriminately.

Another view they entertain is that we could not possibly aid the allies any more than we are doing at present, namely, sending them arms and ammunition, loaning them money and not standing strictly to our protest of their interference with our neutral commerce, but wanting to "climb" Germany, for killing our egoists who, through their bullheadedness, invite trouble on Uncle Sam.

I do not expect to see this in print in your paper, because I do not think you dare publish it.

RICHARD DAVIS.

"Fine Brand of Neutrality."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In tonight's Post-Dispatch there is an article headed "Vindicate St. Louis." What for? Because St. Louisans are against war? Why do you agitate war with Germany? Any American who joyrides over to Europe on a steamer of one of the belligerent nations (and who most likely has his passage paid with Albion's money) and loses his life in doing so has no one to blame but himself.

What's the matter? Have the neutral vessels ceased to go to Europe? You newspaper editors ought to be ashamed of yourselves. Do you ever rake England over the coals for her violations of the international laws, such as trade restraints and illegal ship seizures? Do you ever go into hysterics over the hundreds of Americans killed in Mexico? Why don't you advocate cleaning our own back yard infested with illiterate greasers, instead of allowing yourself to be blinded by the bull of the mighty? Albion? You are certainly showing a fine brand of neutrality.

"Vile Opportunism vs. Right."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

When I picked up Friday's Post-Dispatch the first thing I said to myself was, "There is an American paper in St. Louis." Then after I had read about the 14,000 telegrams I got so angry that I picked up the receiver, called Western Union and sent the following night letter to the Hon. Champ Clark: "As a native-born Missourian and speaking for legions of other true Americans, I condemn and repudiate all expressions of opinion from this section which seek to influence our spokesmen in Congress in the direction of vile opportunism as against our right and our honor. The nation is sound at heart in spite of those 14,000 telegrams."

I congratulate the Post-Dispatch on its clean courage.

"A True American Stand."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I cannot help praising you for the noble and true American stand you are taking and have always stood for during this terrible European war. I have spent most of my 43 years in St. Louis and have many warm German friends and realize that this country and Germany have been friends for a long time, but if we must retain her friendship at the expense of sacrificing our rights, as well as the rights of humanity I say let us give up the friendship. I have written to the Congressman and also to the Speaker as suggested by your article in tonight's paper, and hope there will be many thousands more who will do the same.

W. S.

Suggests Counting Noses.

A. L. Pierce of 2618 Sheridan avenue, writing to the Post-Dispatch, asks: "Whom do these so-called German-American organizers represent? He would like to know if they are organizing for America's destruction and the establishment of an imperial German Government in its place. He suggests that if this is the intent it would facilitate and simplify matters by counting the Americans on the one hand and the pro-Germans on the other, and if the pro-Germans are greater in number, invite the German Crown Prince to "come over and unfurl the imperial flag, burn cities, towns and villages and massacre women and children."

As for breaking with Germany, he says, that should have been done 18 months ago, and that the necessity has increased four-fold since.

David L. Keiser, an engineer, with an office in the La Salle Building, telephoned to the Post-Dispatch that he had sent Speaker Clark a copy of the letter printed in the Post-Dispatch editorial.

A letter signed "An American Patriot" says that the writer has sent a letter to Speaker Clark, "to protest against the false impression made on the country by the sending to Washington of pro-German telegrams. These telegrams," he writes, "were not sent by true Americans, but by heart-and-soul Germans, whose thoughts are not for the land of their daily bread, but for the imperial German Government."

Defends the Pro-Germans.

Wilson H. Stites of 821 Chestnut street, a real estate agent, declares that the Post-Dispatch has no right to deny its readers the right to arrive at their own conclusions and opinions regarding the administration, by questioning their rights or their patriotism." In a letter to the Post-Dispatch entitled "Germanizing America," Stites argues that each citizen should, by inherited right, reach his own opinion, but that to accuse a man of being actuated by unpatriotic motives is to assume infallibility. Stites says the President's opinions are not infallible and have undergone changes since the opening of the war. Adding that the Post-Dispatch is "assuming itself the mouthpiece of concentrated wisdom, and spokesman of the world of thought," he urges "live and let live" as a motto for newspapers. Germany, he continues, has ever been a friendly country to us, never having sunk an American ship, fired on our flag, hired savages to slaughter us, set foot on our soil or burned our capitol. Stites urges consideration of the benefits and advantages gained by this country, due to German industry and enterprise in the West and Northwest.

A well-known St. Louis lawyer, who asked that his name be not printed, writes congratulating the Post-Dispatch for "being resoluted against by the German Alliance, alias German-American Alliance." This, he says, is a great honor. "You correctly diagnosed the situation," he writes, "as is evidenced by the fact that the German Alliance so readily confirms it by denouncing you, for telling just what is their purpose."

Another St. Louisan, asking that his name be not printed, sends the Post-Dispatch a copy of a letter written by him to Speaker Clark, in which he declares himself "one who does not sympathize with any propaganda that has for its object the truckling to foreign interests against those of the United States."

Some Adverse Criticism.

An anonymous note, signed "A True American," says, "I suggest you move your yellow journal to England." Another, signed "American," calls the Post-Dispatch a "pro-British hireling."

Another anonymous contributor declares that "people have just as good a right to sympathize with Germany as you have to sympathize with England." He adds, "I would have a whole lot more respect for you if you would never mention the war in your confounded editorials. You write your editorials as though you were divinely inspired. You let on as though Germany was a place where cannibals lived. Gentlemen, it's a fact, Wilson is the poorest President we've ever had. If you Democrats can't nominate a better man than him you had better hush. The Post-Dispatch is a great paper, but your editorials disgust me."

TRIAL OF MEN WHO KILLED MRS. BATES SET FOR MAY 24

Two Deputy Sheriffs and Policeman Neither Ask for Change of Venue Nor Separate Trials.

TUCSON, Ariz., April 29.—The trial of Deputy Sheriffs Johns and Wiley and Policeman Salazar, for the murder of Mrs. John Savage Bates, daughter of Julius S. Walsh, St. Louis banker, was today set by Judge Smith for May 24. The three, in an automobile, pursued Mrs. Bates and her husband, Capt. Bates, on the night of April 11, as they were on their way home in their automobile, and fired on the car, killing Mrs. Bates. They said afterward that they were hunting the perpetrator of a supposed robbery, and that they shouted an order to halt, before firing.

It developed that no robbery had been committed, but that a false report of a robbery had been made in a telephone message to the Sheriff.

No application for a change of venue, or for a separate trial was made by any of the three defendants, although both actions had been predicted.

According to the testimony of the defendants at the Coroner's inquest, Johns fired the first shot, which, according to Capt. Bates, was the shot which killed Mrs. Bates.

Immediately after setting the trial date, the court began consideration of an application for a restraining order and writ of certiorari, to delay the special election set for May 22, for the recall of Sheriff Forbes. The recall proposal resulted from the Bates tragedy, and from the killing of two Mexicans, nearly a year before, by other deputies of Forbes.

U. S. BETRAYED CASEMENT, AGAIN SAYS GAELIC AMERICAN EDITOR

John Devoy Defies Administration or Federal Courts to Make Him Recant Charges.

NEW YORK, April 29.—John Devoy, editor of the Gaelic American, foremost among Irish newspapers in this country which are upholding the Dublin revolutionists, repeated today his declaration that the United States Government officials had "treacherously" betrayed Sir Roger Casement into the hands of the British. He defied the American administration and the Federal courts to make him recant.

Referring to his previous charge against the Wilson administration and Secretary Tumulty's statement "that the accusation was a lie and the accuser a liar," Devoy retorted that Tumulty was a "convicted liar" because of his denial of statements regarding alleged outrages on nuns and murders of priests in Mexico.

NEW CHECK CLEARING PLAN FOR FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS

Cost of Collection Will Be Assessed Against Members in Proportion to Use of System.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The Federal Reserve Board announced today that it would put into effect, June 15, its new plan for country-wide check clearing and collection. Under the plan the actual cost of clearing and collection and checks will be assessed against member banks in proportion to their use of the system.

A circular announcing its decision was mailed today by the board to 7600 member banks. The important features of the plan, the announcement says, are as follows:

"The Federal reserve banks will accept at par all checks from member banks whether drawn against other member banks, non-member banks or private banks.

"The actual cost without profit of the clearing and collection of checks will be paid by the Federal reserve bank and assessed against the member banks in proportion to their sendings.

MME. O'GORMAN TELLS OF HER WORK AT FIRING LINE

Wife of English General Staff Officer Addresses Three Gatherings Here.

Mme. O'Gorman, wife of Colonel "The" O'Gorman, an officer of the General Staff of the English army, made three addresses here yesterday in the interest of the French wounded emergency fund, to awaken interest in which she came to America six weeks ago.

Audiences, composed chiefly of society women, at the St. Louis Country Club at luncheon, at the home of Mrs. L. Ray Carter, 8 Portland place, and at the Central Public Library, heard her story of her personal experiences close to the firing line in Flanders.

The society which Mme. O'Gorman represents in her campaign to raise funds has charge of 600 hospitals in French and Belgian territory, she said, and she has been the active head of one of these since it was established shortly after the beginning of the war.

"I was in Antwerp when it was bombarded by the enemy,' 'said Mme. O'Gorman. "I was also in Malines during the bombardment of that place.

"In Malines I was in charge of a hospital in which we had about 40 patients on the morning of the day the shelling of the town began. Before nightfall the number of wounded in our care had been increased to more than 600.

"Fortunately for some time during the early part of the day the building in which we were quartered was not struck by the shell fire, but I thought it best to have all the patients taken into the cellar and this was done.

"We had no water in the house and it was necessary to draw what we used from a well in the yard. The shells were dropping thick all about the house and the building itself had been struck many times late in the afternoon. We had run out of water and the wounded were suffering terribly because we could get none. Two men who had volunteered to get water from the well had been killed and I feared to permit others to try it.

"Late in the evening it was indicated the troops could hold out but little longer against the enemy, and I decided to retreat with the army. Having heard stories of cruelties and depredations by the enemy I decided to take with me in the motorbus transport as many of the wounded in my care as possible.

"This plan was followed. Of course, we could not take all the wounded, and many of those we did take died during the retreat from the effects of the bumping of the motorbusses. We could not stop to bury these unfortunates and merely laid their bodies by the roadside and went on.

"In the early part of the war I frequently assisted in taking wounded soldiers from the trenches to the hospital camps. The scarcity of men for this sort of work made it imperative that the women do it.

"Few realize that in a war of the sort now being waged in Europe the civilian population suffers equally with the soldiers in the armies. As a matter of fact the soldiers are better cared for, as all of the regular hospitals and nearly all of the doctors are at their disposal.

"Families throughout Flanders and Brittany have been scattered by this war and there is many a little child being cared for by charities who does not know whether it has any kinfolk living. There are many small children who are even nameless because they were left destitute when too young to know or tell their names.

"Many children of such tender age that they are unconscious of the horrors being enacted about them have wandered into the trenches. I have two of these unfortunate children in my hospital and I know of several regiments which are caring for children who came into their trenches to play.

"After the captures of my hospitals at Antwerp and Malines, with all of their equipment, I decided to have my next hospital a moveable one which I could take out of the enemy's reach when it became necessary to leave. I hit upon the idea of a barge hospital which we tow from place to place with automobiles and this is now stationed at Poperinghe, within a few miles of Ypres.

"I have a milk station, consisting of quite a herd of fine cows, and we are delivering milk to the children in the district for miles about every day by automobile."

Mme. O'Gorman said the condition of the soldiers and civilians this spring, with regard to health, is much better than it was this time last year. Then both the armies and civilian population were in the throes of a typhoid epidemic. She said that during the first few weeks of the epidemic, 80 per cent of those afflicted died.

Mme. O'Gorman came to St. Louis from a trip through the cities of the South. She will leave tonight for Minneapolis. After a visit to several cities in the North in this country, she will cross into Canada.

Own Your Own Oil Well

Big Oil Development Right Here at Home Two Flowing Wells Brought in—St. Louis Field to Be Mammoth Producer

Read What Sinclair Says—What Montgomery Says —Then Grasp This Opportunity While You Can Get Your Share of These Profits

Never before has the demand for oil and oil products been so great as it is at the present time.

Never before have investments in oil-producing properties been so profitable as they are now.

Harry Sinclair, the famous Oklahoma oil magnate, who has made millions operating independent companies, recently declared in newspaper interviews:

"The high price of gasoline is not due to manipulation or corners, as many people suppose. It is due entirely to the fact that the demand exceeds the supply."

Mr. Sinclair had reference to the known producing wells. Oil experts can calculate exactly the daily production. Every available barrel is used. The demand is for more oil.

The Standard Oil Co. and scores of independent refineries are buying every barrel of oil they can get.

This larger and rapidly growing demand means that still MORE fortunes—still LARGER fortunes will be made in oil.

Read What Montgomery Says About It

Hugh Montgomery is one of the best known oil operators in the United States. He has operated for years in Beaumont and, in fact, the entire Gulf Coast field. Here is what he says about the St. Louis field:

"The possibilities in the St. Louis field are simply wonderful—beyond the power of any oil expert to calculate. Both the wells already drilled are producing a heavy flow of oil of a quality second only to the best Pennsylvania. The flow in both these wells was obtained at about 1530 feet. All indications lead me to believe that the mammoth gushers will be brought in at 2200 to 2500 feet."

(Signed) HUGH MONTGOMERY.

St. Louis, Mo., April 3, 1916.

The St. Louis Oil Field

Right here at our very doors is one of the greatest oil fields in the world. It affords you a real ground floor opportunity.

This field is located fifteen miles east of Eads Bridge, in the great American bottoms—only 45 minutes from Broadway.

It is within a few miles of the great $15,000,000.00 refinery of the Standard Oil Co. at Wood River, Ill., and which receives oil by pipe line from Oklahoma and Pennsylvania.

Now, at last, here is a great subterranean lake of oil right here at home, almost with a stone's throw of one of the world's greatest refineries.

Think of the vast economy to be obtained by the refinery in getting crude oil from our wells instead of through a pipe line a thousand miles long, with enormously expensive pumping stations every forty or fifty miles.

Two Wells Already Drilled

We own 340 acres of the choicest land in this field. It is level land surrounded by fertile farms.

Already two flowing wells have been brought in at 1530 feet.

The oil is of the finest quality, second only to the best Pennsylvania Crude.

Preparations are being rapidly made for the drilling of other wells, and will be pushed with all possible haste.

Read Hugh Montgomery's statement. Then see these wells and you'll want to participate in this enterprise.

This Is the Poor Man's Chance

Many of the millionaires who have come into the limelight during the past few years were poor men a few years ago.

Some of them borrowed money to make their initial investment in oil properties.

They are today reaping the reward of their courage. Here are a few striking examples of success in the Oklahoma and Texas Fields:

Andy Richards, of Tulsa, made $600,000.00 in ten months.

Charles Wrightsman, of Tulsa, made $2,500,000.00 in three years.

John Doolin, of Oklahoma City, invested $400.00, and it has produced $250,000.00 for him.

Robert Galbreath, of Tulsa, made $3,000,000.00.

Myers Fisher, a Kansas City shoe clerk, invested $250.00 in oil stock, and within a year he sold out for $19,500.00.

John T. McCarson invested $3,900.00 and received in dividends $106,000.00.

Geo. M. Snowden, and T. W. Horn each invested $1500.00, and each received $40,858.02.

Sarah Rector, a negro girl in Muskogee, has an income of $525.00 a day, or $188,000.00 a year from her interest in oil properties.

These examples might be multiplied by the hundred, as it is a well-known fact that the oil business has made more millionaires than any other industry.

No Stock for Sale

This is not a stock-selling scheme, but a big, reasonable, straightforward and business-like co-operative plan.

You many own a quarter acre or more of this property, organize your own company, and sink a well on it if you wish.

Furthermore, you will participate in the profits derived from our own wells.

We have selected the best 80 acres, on which the two flowing wells are located. This 80 acres is divided into quarter acre tracts. A limited number of these tracts are offered for sale.

You may buy one tract, or get three people to join you and buy four tracts together, and sink a well on them.

A warranty deed, in fee simple, is given with each tract, which insures you absolute ownership of your own oil property.

Besides owning your land, you will receive 50 per cent of all the profits derived from the production of all the wells we drill on our part of these 80 acres.

The price of each quarter acre tract is only $500.00, which is less than the value of choice residence lots in St. Louis County.

Not a Gamble or a Prospect

About seven out of every ten oil companies are organized and the stock is sold before drilling operations begin. Some of them are successful—many of them failures. The company organized only on paper is no better than the "wild cat" mining scheme.

But here you have an opportunity to buy an oil proposition that is actually producing. It is right here in the suburbs of St. Louis, where you can see it and be convinced within an hour's time.

Don't Delay—Act Promptly

See us tomorrow. Make arrangements to go out and see these wells. Talk with Hugh Montgomery about the St. Louis field. Select your own tracts and organize your own oil company.

Opportunities of this kind are few and far between. You may have read of the fortunes made by others. You may have regretted that you didn't have the same chance.

Your opportunity is now before you. It is as good or better than any you have ever read about. Don't let it pass.

This is not a speculation, but a solid investment—a golden opportunity to realize large returns on a small amount of capital.

It is a business proposition in which the poor man has an equal opportunity with the capitalist.

6 COUNTIES REVIVE ST. LOUIS-INDIANA HIGHWAY PROJECT

Midland Trail Boosters Plan Bond Issues for Improved Road Across Illinois.

HOLD MEETING AT FLORA

County Presidents Named to Launch Work—Route Is Historic One.

From a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FLORA, Ill., April 29.—Midland Trail boosters of six counties met here in mass meeting yesterday and organized for the purpose of working for county bond issues for the purpose of building an across-the-State highway from Vincennes to St. Louis, as a part of the ocean-to-ocean Midland Trail.

The meeting revived the Lincoln Trail movement inaugurated by the Vincennes-St. Louis Good Roads Association, which became dormant two years ago. The route of the planned improvement is the same. This route has now been officially designated by the National Highway Commission at Washington as a section of the Midland Trail from Washington to San Francisco.

The 152 miles of the old State road from Vincennes to St. Louis, across Lawrence, Richland, Clay, Marion, Clinton and St. Clair counties, which it is planned to improve, is level and straight, the straightest stretch on the entire trail.

Road Improved in Places.

The road has been improved in places, through State aid and by other means, but this method has been found too slow and the meeting was held to take steps toward having the counties issue bonds for the simultaneous improvement of the road across the State.

The meeting was held at the opera house. James B. Smith of Clay City was chairman and Dwight M. Morris of Salem was secretary. Permanent organization of the Illinois Midland Trail Association was perfected by the election of the following officers: State president, J. M. Tanner, Flora; vice president, G. W. Lowe, Olney; secretary, H. J. C. Beckemeier, Carlyle; treasurer, J. H. Vawter, Salem.

County presidents were named as follows: J. A. Grey, Carlyle, Clinton County; C. E. Hull, Salem, Marion County; W. D. Scudamore, Flora, Clay County; Edward Phillips, Olney, Richland County; J. Philbert, Lawrenceville, Lawrence County. Each county president is to name vice presidents to represent each of the important towns in the county.

Addresses were delivered by James P. Wilson of Polo, Ill., member of the State Highway Commission, and Homer J. Tice of Greenfield, "Father of the Good Roads Law of Illinois."

Flora was decorated for the meeting. An automobile trip arranged for the visitors by the Flora Commercial Association extended beyond the town to the apple orchards which bound it on all sides.

Both of the speakers made their appeal to the farmers as the ones who derive the greatest benefit from the Midland Trail and from the improvement of all other roads. It was pointed out that the economy in hauling effected by hard roads would more than equal the increased tax which the farmers would have to pay under a good roads bond issue.

Dirt Roads Expensive.

Wilson pointed out that the trip from the farm to the railroad, over dirt roads, is the most expensive that the farmers' products have to take. It costs a Clay County farmer $2.30, he said, to haul a ton of products 10 miles over dirt roads. Illinois, he said, ranked twenty-second in road improvement. He pleaded with farmers who were not on the roads first to be improved to support the bond issue. "If good roads are not started," he said, "they will never reach you. Put them first where they are needed most and afterward they will branch out everywhere."

The county presidents are to take the initiative in arranging for mass meetings in the different counties which will take steps toward submitting to the people of each county the proposition for a bond issue. The amount to be voted upon in each county will be determined by each county. It is the expectation that in each county the proposition will be not only to issue enough bonds to improve the Midland Trail, but enough to improve the other roads radiating from the county seat and connecting with the Trail.

The towns through which the across-the-State traffic will pass on the Midland Trail are East St. Louis, Edgemont, French Village, O'Fallon, Lebanon, Summerfield, Trenton, Aviston, Breeze, Beckemeyer, Carlyle, Huey, Ferrin, Shattuc, Sandoval, Odin, Salem, Banister, Iuka, Xenia, Flora, Maysville, Clay City, Noble, Olney, Sumner, Bridgeport and Lawrenceville.

The improvement of the road from St. Louis to Vincennes will make an automobile trip to Cincinnati an easy two days' trip. The roads between Vincennes and Cincinnati are good and will be further improved.

Route Is Historic.

The route is historic. Lincoln traveled over part of it from Vincennes into Illinois. In the early days it was a stage coach route between Vincennes and St. Louis. Along the road still stand some of the old taverns. It is the oldest highway of any considerable length in Illinois. Over it passed many of the pioneers who settled the West.

The farmers who gathered at the mass meeting here were impressed with the arguments that were made for good roads. Large quantities of farm products are shipped from Florida and the disadvantages of dirt roads are known. Red-cheeked apples and red-top hay are the chief products of the section. About 1500 carloads of apples are shipped from the apple belt each year. The little Redtop mill at Flora paid the farmers $297,000 for red-top hayseed last year. Shipments of cattle and eggs are very heavy.

Automobile organizations will co-operate with the county organizations in working for the bond issues which will make possible the Midland Trail improvement.

$200,000 Road Bond Issue Carries in Wayne County, Mo.

PIEDMONT, Mo., April 29.—The $200,000 bond issue for permanent roads carried in Wayne County today by a vote of five to one. Nearly complete reports gave 2173 votes for the bonds and 421 against. Wayne County now has 30 miles of automobile road built by the citizens and County Court connecting Piedmont and Greenville, the two principal towns in the county.

BODY OF GOLDIE ROBINSON TO BE SHIPPED TO HAYTI, MO.

Generosity of St. Louisans Will Provide Little Girl With Proper Burial.

The body of Goldie Robinson of Hayti, Mo., the 11-year-old "little mother" who died April 22 at St. Luke's Hospital, will lie in state again today at the Wacker-Helderle Undertaking Parlors, 2321 South Broadway. Tonight the body will be shipped to Hayti. The girl's family is destitute. It was thought at first that the body would be buried here in potter's field. This has been averted by many contributions, the total of which, yesterday noon, reached $80.10, according to Morgue Keeper John J. Kennedy.

After shipping expenses are paid the remainder of the money will be turned over to the father of the girl. A white coffin, shroud, and shipping case, valued at $100, were donated by Fred D. Gardner, president of the St. Louis Coffin Co. Many women telephoned police headquarters yesterday afternoon offering floral contributions.

Births for Week Exceed Deaths.

There were 233 births and 202 deaths reported in St. Louis last week. Bright's disease caused 27 deaths, tuberculosis, 22; pneumonia, 26; cancer, 14, and diphtheria, 5. There were 3 suicides, 1 homicide, 7 accidental deaths and one due to criminal carelessness.

ST. LOUIS TRADE BOOSTERS TO TOUR KANSAS AND NEBRASKA

Fifty-One Towns and Cities Between Kansas City and Lincoln to Be Visited Next Week.

About 100 members of the Business Men's League will leave St. Louis next Sunday night on a special train over the Burlington Railway for the tenth annual trade extension tour of the Sales Managers' Bureau.

The first stop of the party will be at Falls City, Neb. The trip will continue for six days, reaching St. Louis the following Sunday morning. The Burlington, Missouri Pacific and Union Pacific lines will be used in Southern Nebraska and Northern Kansas.

This territory has never been visited by a St. Louis booster train. Letters have gone ahead to Mayors, commercial clubs and newspapers, announcing the coming of the party, and meetings will be held at the night stops with the commercial clubs, these being Lincoln, Hastings, McCook and Beatrice, Neb.; Salina, Kan., and Kansas City. Fifty-one towns and cities between these points will be visited, with stops of from forty minutes to two hours at each.

In the party will be representatives of all the St. Louis wholesale dry goods, shoe, hat, millinery, clothing, hardware and drug houses, as well as other wholesale and manufacturing lines. Ivan Osborne is chairman of the Trades Extension Committee and Robert E. Lee, secretary of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the Business Men's League, will be in charge of the train. Seymour's band of 15 pieces will be taken along.

The train will be made up of three sleepers, dining, baggage and lounging car. The tourists will eat and sleep on the train.

St. Lawrence O'Toole's Euchre.

A euchre and peanut party will be given at 2:30 p. m. today by St. Lawrence O'Toole's Branch No. 32 of the Catholic Knights and Ladies of America at the school hall, Fourteenth and O'Fallon streets.

MISS GILFILLAN, TEACHER HERE FOR 42 YEARS, DIES

Was Instructor at Central High for 23 Years Before Retirement Last January.

Miss Evelyn G. Gilfillan, a teacher in the public schools for 42 years, died yesterday at St. Ann's Hospital. She had been ill for about two years and had undergone several operations for cancer.

Miss Gilfillan retired as a teacher last January because of her own illness and that of her mother, Mrs. Lucinda Boswell Gilfillan, formerly a school teacher and for many years principal of the Compton School.

The illness of the two women occasioned their giving up their home at 3511 Bell avenue, where the family had lived many years, and taking up their residence at St. Ann's Hospital. Mrs. Gilfillan died at St. Ann's Jan. 9, less than a week after being received there. She was the widow of John A. Gilfillan, former principal of the Lincoln School, and was 60 years old.

Miss Gilfillan began teaching in the old high school at Fifteenth and Olive streets. During the last 23 years she was instructor in Latin and French at Central High School. On the eve of her retirement, and before it had been announced she would give up her place, she presented each member of her classes with a handsomely-bound book.

Her body will lie in state in the funeral chapel of the Wagoner Undertaking Co., 3621 Olive street, after 1 o'clock this afternoon. The funeral will be held at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

ROOSEVELT OUT OF RUNNING, SAY G. O. P. LEADERS

Eastern Politicians, After Conference at French Lick, Declare He Has No Show.

GIVE HIM 175 VOTES

Declare Result of Primary in Massachusetts Was Turning Point.

CHICAGO, April 30.—The Tribune today prints the following special political article:

FRENCH LICK, Ind., April 29.—Theodore Roosevelt is definitely out of the running as a probable nominee of the Republican national convention, if the group of national politicians from the East claiming to speak for more than half of the delegates to the Chicago convention, who have just finished a three-days' session here, are to be believed.

All preliminary plans for the convention, now only five weeks away, are going forward upon this supposition, which became a fixed opinion in their minds this week, say these leaders. According to them, the Massachusetts primary result cinched earlier estimates of what could and would happen. The conference broke up last night, to be resumed in Washington, Monday morning. In Washington the entire program for the Chicago convention is to be made, barring only the selection of the presidential candidate.

One possible obstacle to their plan is the condition in Pennsylvania, where it is not yet a certainty, that Senator Penrose can secure control of the big eight of that state's bunch of 68 delegates. The present arrangements are being discussed upon the premise that Penrose's organization will win the primaries May 16.

Concede Roosevelt 175 Votes.

The figures that were made in French Lick, based upon inside returns from all over the country, assert that at no stage of the convention can Col. Roosevelt line up more than 175 votes. In this estimate of 175 are included, it is claimed, every wobbly state delegation and individual district delegates here and there in favorite son states and in states that are closely bound into the combination that now expects absolutely to control the convention.

In New York, upon the tip from State Chairman Tanner, the Colonel is conceded 12 and no more; in Illinois the Colonel is credited with a dozen to 15 votes and these are marked up for Roosevelt upon the single theory that the local State fight will smash up the Sherman strength.

It is understood that the well-defined purpose of the convention organization now in process of completion is to stay away from a pre-arrangement that carries the naming of the candidate, leaving that entirely and absolutely to the delegates in the convention on a trying-out of all of the candidates with the single exception of Col. Roosevelt.

There is no thought of a concession that would permit the Roosevelt management of the Progressive campaign in 1912 to take over possession of the convention, the organization or the dictation of the platform. George W. Perkins and his immediate entourage are to have no part in running the convention. Such is the word from the "inside."

Name May Not Be Presented.

Upon a showing of 175 votes, the maximum Roosevelt strength as these men estimate it, the supposition seems to be that Col. Roosevelt will not permit his name to be used as a convention candidate; that he could stand for the nomination only by way of a sweeping cry in the convention representing much more than a bare majority.

The management of the proposed convention organization doesn't know yet what is to be done about the Hughes boom. More of this will be accurately ascertained before the middle of the coming week at Washington.

It is understood that the component parts of the machine in construction embraces all of the favorite son states and all of the favorite son booms, with the exception of the La Follette delegates from Wisconsin, all but the dozen pro-Roosevelt delegates in New York, and all of New England, barring a dozen scattering delegates in Massachusetts and Connecticut, and particularly all of the South, with Colorado and Utah thrown in for good measure.

W. C. STRIBLING JR. SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN AUTO OVERTURNS

His Sister, Mrs. Mildred S. Blackwell, Slightly Injured in Accident in St. Louis County.

William C. Stribling Jr., 23 years old, of 4961 Berlin avenue, was seriously injured at 4 p. m. yesterday when a Ford roadster he was driving upset on the La Due road, about a quarter mile east of the Price road, St. Louis County. His sister, Mrs. Mildred S. Blackwell, of 4919 McPherson avenue, was in the car. She suffered slight bruises about the body. Stribling suffered a broken jaw, a gash in the right cheek, possibly internal injuries, and lost two teeth.

They were on their way to the St. Louis Country Club when the machine skidded into a pool of oil.

Stribling was partially pinned under the car, but Mrs. Blackwell was thrown clear. She was taken by J. D. Wooster Lambert to Clayton, where her injuries were pronounced superficial. She was then taken to her home. Stribling was taken to Barnes Hospital. He is a stepbrother of Lady Wilfrid Peek.

Knocked Senseless and Robbed.

Paul Hartwig of 1623 Texas avenue reported to the police yesterday that he was knocked unconscious and robbed by a man who accosted him at Missouri avenue and Rutger street about midnight Friday and asked him for a match. The robber struck him as he put his hand in his pocket, and relieved him of $30 and a gold watch.

Ode by a St. Louis Woman Read at Shakspeare Exercises

TWO poems in honor of Shakspeare, written by a St. Louis poet, Sara Teasdale (Mrs. E. B. Filsinger of the Usona Hotel), were read by William Faversham, the actor, at the tercentenary celebration at the Shakspeare statue in Tower Grove Park Friday afternoon. Delegates to the Drama League convention were in the audience.

The longer of the two poems, an ode written for this particular occasion, follows:

—Gerhard Sisters Photo.
SARA TEASDALE.

Shakspeare Tencentenary Ode.

Beautiful earth, bride of the sun,
Miserly winter is over and done;
Now is the joyous time of year
When the bride-groom sun draws near,
Trailing in splendor the robes of his lengthening light.
Oh earth, put on your bridal gown,
For even here, within the town,
Spendthrift April has spun for you
A shimmering gown of green and blue,
And made it doubly bright
With dandelions about the hem
And blue sky for a diadem.

Now at this holy and abundant hour
When earth looks up to heaven like a flower,
And the victorious spring is at its height,
We come to celebrate a man who passed
Three hundred springs ago into the night.
He passed, he did not die;
He spent the riches of his soul and cast
His wealth abroad, as prodigal as spring.
He did not die, as April will not die;
It only passes by,
Ripens to summer, glows in autumn gold
Yielding increase a hundred hundred fold,
And with each future spring
Sending its seeds on far and farther wing.
So does this poet's spirit live in us,
And in earth's children multitudinous,
Increasing with the ever-flowing years,
And living in our laughter and our tears.
He is not dead whose spirit still is free
Dwelling in beauty everlastingly.

Caesars and kings and captains turn to dust,
But he who gives us beauty is secure,
The fragrance of his spirit will endure
When sword and shell and cannon turn to rust;

Now, with a score of nations locked in war,
Let us take beauty as our holy trust,
And both for them and for ourselves upraise
The paen of our praise
For this strong spirit who so tenderly
Shows us what we might be,
And what we are.

And, seeing that all but beauty pass away,
And that in our own frail and simple ways
We must record in beauty what we feel
If we would have it last beyond our day,
We plant a tree in this green April place,
And set our love upon it like a seal,
And consecrate its freshness and its grace
To him, the greatest son of all our race.

From the hidden strength of earth
May it draw, as once he drew,
Beauty changeful and always new,
Spun of sunlight or the dark;
Under its boughs may dance and mirth
As well as weary sorrow come
Its shadow be a shelter place
For men of every creed and race,
And in its boughs the meadow-lark
Sing, when we ourselves are dumb.

WINEROOM CABARET BILL TO BE MODIFIED FOR HOTELS

If Measure Becomes Law It Will Affect 357 Saloons and Restaurants.

The Rev. John L. Brandt, as chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Ministerial Alliance, is the author of a bill pending in the Board of Aldermen that would prevent cabaret performances of any kind in places where liquor is sold and which would abolish 357 winerooms which he says investigators of the alliance have discovered in St. Louis.

The bill was introduced Friday by Alderman Julius Haller by request. Its prohibitions are so sweeping in effect that Alderman Haller and the Rev. Mr. Brandt, fearing the measure might be construed to prohibit dancing in hotel dining rooms and lobbies by paying guests, will prepare an amendment to expressly sanction such functions.

The bill provides a fine of from $25 to $100 for each violation. It provides that no room separated by a wall, partition or screen shall be maintained on the premises of any barroom in which liquor is sold, with or without food, to either men or women. It makes an exception in the case of hotels, which may serve dinner parties in private rooms provided that in the event only four or less guests are participating, they must be all of the same sex.

WOMAN AND MAID DIE IN FIRE

Son Is Also Injured in Blaze Near Carthage, Mo.

CARTHAGE, Mo., April 29.—Investigation has not yet developed cause of the fire in which Mrs. Elizabeth Hall and her maid, Alma Shaw, lost their lives and which destroyed the country home, Hallwood, early yesterday morning. Edward Hall, son of Mrs. Hall, was so badly injured in the fire that it is believed he has little chance for recovery.

Hallwood was valued at $15,000. Mrs. Hall was one of the wealthiest women in Jasper County and her place covered 1000 acres. It is six miles from Carthage.

RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY KEEPS MOTHER FROM SON'S WEDDING

Two Groomsmen Also Fail to Appear at the Fowler-Riddle Nuptial Ceremony.

Mrs. F. E. Fowler of 4465 Maryland avenue, did not attend the marriage last night of her son, Francis E. Fowler Jr., to Miss Emily Riddle, daughter of Mrs. Truman P. Riddle of the St. Regis Apartments. Her reason was that, as a Catholic, she objected to her son being married by an Episcopal minister. Two groomsmen also failed to appear because of the religious controversy.

The ceremony was performed at the Riddle apartment by the Rev. Truman Post Riddle, brother of the bride. Stanley J. Birge was best man and the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Edith Riddle. A reception to 200 guests followed the ceremony.

It was announced at the Riddle home that the Rev. Mr. Riddle has been appointed a chaplain in the United States navy and will report for duty on the battleship Maine, May 29. He is one of the assistants at St. George's Church, in New York City. At 11 o'clock this morning he will preach at Christ Church Cathedral.

BOY, 5, IS RUN DOWN BY AN AUTO

Charles P. Burgess, President of St. Louis Screw Co., Was Driving.

Leo Meyers, 5 years old, of 6059 Horton place, was run down yesterday afternoon when crossing the street in front of 1051 Hodiamont avenue by the automobile of Charles P. Burgess of 5076 Westminster place, president of the St. Louis Screw Co. The boy suffered scalp wounds and internal injuries.

Witnesses said Burgess was driving only about 12 miles an hour and that the accident was unavoidable.

Debate at Meeting Reveals St. Louis Is Only Big Center Getting Concession.

DUES A DOLLAR A YEAR

Convention Ends With Re-election of Percival Chubb as National President.

Members of the Drama League of America, at the closing session of the annual convention last night at the Buckingham Hotel, adopted a resolution that the propriety of any of the 54 centers of the league asking reduced admission prices for the members from theater managers should be referred to the next annual convention.

Percival Chubb, president of the organization, when questioned by a Post-Dispatch reporter, said that St. Louis is the only city of the first class that has been getting such reduced rates.

"During the week," Chubb said, "we have been securing half rates at the Shubert. In some other instances the St. Louis organization has secured rates, but I wish to go on record as saying that I believe the organization is right in opposing such an arrangement. The sentiment of the organization was practically solid in favor of members paying the usual box office prices and I will support this plan on behalf of St. Louis."

Chubb said that in addition to that of St. Louis, several small centers have asked reduced rates and that he hopes the organization will stand firmly in support of prices asked by the management of high-class productions.

Otto Heller, president of the St. Louis Center of the Drama League, told a reporter that he approved of the action of the convention in postponing action for one year upon reduced prices of seats to members of the league. He said that the membership of the league has increased in St. Louis from 300 to 1100 in the last six months. He said that while he did not believe in asking favors from any theater, that he did believe the members of the league were right in trying to get lower prices. He said that lower prices would not only be a good thing for the public, but also for the manager.

There is no initiation fee to the Drama League, and the annual dues are $1.

The annual banquet of the League, earlier in the evening, was attended by about 300 persons.

Miss Grace Griswold of New York, one of the directors of the Bandbox Theater, spoke on "Conditions Behind the Scenes."

"One of the great kicks made by actors and actresses," she said, "is the manner in which mirrors are placed in dressing rooms. Sometimes it is necessary for an actress to have the neck of a swan in order to see the mirror.

Zoe Akins spoke about children upon the stage. She said it might be well to permit children from 6 to 12 years of age upon the stage if they were given proper schooling and care, but she believed that a recommendation should be made to the authorities of all States that children between the ages of 12 and 16 years be kept off the stage. The portrayal of parts represented by children more than 12 years, she said, could easily be assumed by older persons.

As a conclusion to the League's meeting the Players, a local amateur organization, presented Bernard Shaw's play, "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets." The four characters represented were "The Beef Eater," Dr. John Green; "William Shakspeare," Samuel Goddard; "Queen Elizabeth," Mrs. George Gellhorn, and "The Dark Lady," Miss Mary Wham.

The production was unusual because of the omission of footlights for the stage. All lighting was supplied from the wings and was a dark blue. The effect was intended to show one item of unnecessary expense involved in the production of most of the modern plays. In Shaw's own manner the play portrays Shakspeare picking up many of his notable saysings from chance conversation.

The League did not decide upon the place of the next annual meeting but Pittsburg appeared to be favored by members of the Executive Committee.

Chubb was re-elected president. Other officers were elected as follows: Secretary, Mrs. Norman K. Anderson, Chicago; treasurer, J. C. Shaffer, Chicago; vice presidents, Mrs. A. Starr Best, Chicago; Mrs. Otis Skinner, Philadelphia; Dr. Richard Burton, Minneapolis; Prof. Archibald Henderson, University of North Carolina; Mrs. Ben Ali Haggin, New York, and J. Howard Reber, Philadelphia.

CINCINNATI SYMPHONY FIRST TO PLAY STRAUSS MASTERPIECE

CINCINNATI, O., April 29.—By stealing a march on the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Ernst Kunwald, has won the honor of giving the first American performance of the new "Alpine Symphony" of Richard Strauss, the completion of which is considered perhaps the most important event of this year in the world of music. It is considered the most stupendous work yet written by the Viennese master.

The "Alpine Symphony" was to have been played on May 4 during the Cincinnati music festival, but when the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, under Leopold Stokowsky, advertised that it would give the first American production of the work, Dr. Kunwald set the date forward to last Friday, when it was played before a great concourse of music lovers from all parts of the country, who acclaimed the premiere with unbounded enthusiasm.

The orchestra was augmented to more than 100 musicians for the performance, and Dr. Kunwalk conducted the intricate score, which took 50 minutes to play, entirely from memory.

GOVERNMENT TO BUY 6200 HORSES IN EAST ST. LOUIS

National Stock Yards Firms Bid to Furnish Animals for Use in Mexico.

The Government tomorrow will receive bids from commission firms at the National Stockyards in East St. Louis on a contract for 6200 horses for the army. Since the expeditionary forces entered Mexico, about 1400 horses have been purchased by the Government at the stockyards, at an average price of $150 each.

Holland-Nugent-Maxwell Bros. Commission Co., which has sold more than 100,000 army horses to the allies, has been dissolved, and its assets taken over by the Holland-Maxwell Commission Co. Joseph Nugent, vice president of the old firm, has entered the commission business at Des Moines, Io.

The company has taken over all the contracts for supplying horses to the French and Italian Governments, which are buying at the rate of 600 head a week. A shipment of 650 mules was sent out of the stockyards yesterday to Portland, Me., whence they will be transported to France.

BILL TO LIMIT CAMPAIGN FUNDS IS TO BE PRESSED

Owens Bill Would Limit Individual Contributions to $5000 and National Committees to $250,000.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Administration Senate leaders have decided to press for early passage the Owen bill to further regulate and limit campaign contributions in presidential, senatorial and congressional elections. The Elections Committee today began consideration of the measure and plans to report it next week.

The Owen bill would regulate all disbursements of political committees, limit individual contributions to $5000 and limit aggregate disbursements of all political committees of any party made to influence choice of presidential electors to $250,000. Aggregate disbursements by political committees for nomination or election of a United States Senator would would be limited to $5000 and for be limited to $5000 and for any Representative in Congress $2500.

U. S. COPPER PRODUCTION IN 1915 WAS 2,026,000,000 LBS.

High Record Output and Value Attributed by Geological Survey to War Demand.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Stimulated by the demand resulting from the war, copper production in the United States passed the 2,000,000,000-pound mark last year, for the first time in the history of the industry.

In an advance statement issued today, the United States Geological Survey placed the total production of copper from all sources at 2,026,000,000 pounds. Smelter production of primary copper was 1,388,000,000 pounds, a record quantity, being 238,000,000 pounds more than produced in 1914, or an increase of 21 per cent.

The total value of the 1915 smelter output of primary copper, at an average price of 17.5 cents a pound, was $242,900,000, an increase of $90,000,000 over 1914.

LA FOLLETE WANTS WHOLE U. S. TO VOTE AS TO WAR

Advisory Action to Be Taken After President Breaks Relations Under New Senate Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Senator La Follette today introduced a bill providing for an advisory vote by the people as to whether the United States should declare war against any nation with whom the President had severed diplomatic relations.

He did not ask for immediate action on it.

HEADACHE HIS ONLY INJURY

Negro Pitched Headlong From Wagon by Street Car.

John Quincy Adams, a negro driver for the Hunkins-Willis Lime and Cement Co., was thrown from his wagon when a Park car hit the wagon at Spring and Park avenues yesterday afternoon. His head struck the pavement but he only suffered a headache from the fall.

Hugh Greenwall, motorman, of 3857 Folsom avenue, received a wrenched back and possible internal injuries. He was crushed in the vestibule of the car.

FURTHER SHORTAGE OF $4400 FOUND IN LE PAGE BOOKS

East St. Louis School Trustees Formally Demand Payment of $41,400 by Treasurer.

Auditors who have been going over the accounts of State Representative Stephen Le Page, retiring treasurer of the Outlying School District of East St. Louis, who has admitted that he has used $37,000 of school funds for private purposes, have found an additional shortage of $4400.

Instead of being $37,000, the total of the deficit thus far appears to be $41,400. A statement to this effect was submitted to Le Page at his home yesterday. County Superintendent of Schools Hough, who submitted it, was not inclined to discuss his conversation with Le Page, but his remarks last night indicated that he had hoped for a settlement on the presentation of the statement and had been disappointed.

Jessie I. Gedney, one of the three trustees of the district, reflected the same disappointment. He declared Le Page, who had promised to convert his real estate holdings into cash and pay the amount due, should have made settlement when the statement was presented to him.

In answer to questions by a Post-Dispatch reporter, Gedney said he thought no more than another week would be allowed Le Page in which to straighten things out, and indicated that unless he did so within that time some legal action would be taken. Asked if such action would be a suit to recover the money he replied, "That is the big question."

Le Page could not be reached for a statement. Inquiries at his home elicited the information that he was out.

The audit was made by Hough, W. Y. Ludwig, chief accountant in the office of the State Superintendent of Schools, E. M. Sorrells, a private accountant, and W. R. Rice, LePage's bookkeeper. The additional $4400 discovered is said to be credited in Le Page's books as paid on certain warrants, but the auditors say they have been unable to find the warrants.

After he had told his bondsmen that he was indebted to the school fund for $37,000, LePage told the trustees that all of his records except one cash book and the records for the last two years were burned in a fire which destroyed his home. The cash book showed LePage's receipts from the City Treasurer for the 12 years he has been in office.

The auditors as yet have been unable to find this ledger. Rice told them it had been used in the trial of a case and could be found in the files of the Circuit Court, but a search there has failed to bring it to light.

LePage's explanation of his shortage was that he used the money in real estate transactions. He furnished a schedule of all his holdings and estimated them as worth $105,000. Efforts have been made to get a loan on this property to cover the deficit, but so far they are not believed to have been successful.

Supt. Hough said last night that he expected to take some action unless settlement is made within a few days.

"I don't know what action the law requires of me," he said, "but whatever it is, I will take it."

August Eggman, LePage's successor, has qualified and taken office. At the time the shortage was announced, LePage said to a Post-Dispatch reporter:

"The only statement that I have to make is that when Mr. Eggman is appointed and qualifies, I shall make a cash settlement with him for all the money due the school district."

The audit was intended to find out just how much he owed. It was announced yesterday that another and more thorough one would be made immediately. LePage lives at Seventy-third and State streets, East St. Louis.

RAILROAD WORK IN ALASKA

Construction at Fairbanks to Open Nenana Coal Fields.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 29.—Positive announcement that work would soon begin on the Fairbanks end of the Government railroad in Alaska, which will mean the opening of the Nenana coal fields and the consequent resumption on a large scale of mining operations in the big Fairbanks district, was made today by G. F. Cramer, disbursing agent for the Alaskan Engineering Commission of the Fairbanks division.

DOUBLE WEDDING FEATURE OF HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT

When the Last Orator Says: "Beyond the Alps Lies Italy," Four Will Join Hands in Marriage on Platform.

High school commencements without a marriage ceremony on the program are such dull things in Fillmore, Ill., that this year's graduation class will provide a double wedding. According to the plan, as soon as the last young orator has notifed an awaiting public that beyond the Alps lies Italy, and when the diplomas have been handed around, Miss Esther Halford and Ross P. Kessinger will step to the center of the platform.

There they will be joined by Otis Hoffman and Miss Florence Bost, alumni of the high school. The Rev. Mr. Hoots, pastor of the Methodist Church, will say the words whereby Miss Halford will become Mrs. Hoffman and Miss Bost will become Mrs. Kessinger. After the graduation exercises in 1911 Otis Supinger and Miss Edna Card, members of the class, were married.

35,000 GARMENT MAKERS LOCKED OUT IN NEW YORK

Workers in 400 Shops Are Out of Work and 1800 Shops May Be Affected.

NEW YORK, April 29.—A lockout throwing between 30,000 and 35,000 garment making employes out of work in more than 400 shops was declared in effect today by the cloak, suit and skirt manufacturers' association. Unless an agreement is reached within 48 hours, it was stated by officials of employes' unions today, there will be a strike of 1800 independent shops, which would bring the number of idle men and women up to nearly 70,000.

The employers have rejected several offers of arbitration. They refused to send representatives to a conference called by Mayor Mitchel last week and today they issued a statement declaring that "it is to be regretted" that persons and civic bodies "without any intimate knowledge of the situation should inject their activities at such a critical moment."

SHAKSPEARE DECISION MEETING

Chicago Judges Plan to Take Up Tuthill Ruling.

CHICAGO, April 29.—A meeting of the Circuit Court Judges was called today for Monday noon by Chief Justice Frederick A. Smith at which consideration may be given the recent decision of Superior Judge Richard C. Tuthill that Bacon and not Shakspeare wrote the literary works attributed to the latter.

Many of the Superior and Circuit Court Judges in private interviews have said that the "dignity and standing" of the judiciary was brought to ridicule by this decision, which has caused much comment in this country and abroad.

GERMANS SPREAD 1000 MINES OVER SEA EACH MONTH

Naval Official Says They Will Be a Menace to Ships for Several Years.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 15.—German submarines and mine-layers place an estimated number of 1000 mines each month in the waters of the entente allies. The question as to what becomes of the great majority—those which do not accomplish the object for which they were posted—is dealt with interestingly in a report prepared by Rear-Admiral Degouy, after a careful calculation which includes figures as to the mine-carrying capacity of submarines, the number of voyages of submarines and mine-layers, and the number of mines located and destroyed.

Admiral Degouy believes that the presence of these engines of destruction will be a formidable danger for ships for several years after peace comes.

"Quantities of mines," this navy official declares, "are carried away from their anchorage by the currents into wide ocean, perpetuating the danger perhaps, but diminishing immediate risks; quantities of others drift ashore, where they are immediately made harmless; the fishermen, whether they like or not, and often to their great peril, capture a great number in their nets.

"The adjustment of the exploding apparatus of the engine is not so simple, and its apparatus for stability at the proper depth doesn't always work. To produce its full effect the mine must be held at a depth of from three to five yards.

"If the stabilizing apparatus doesn't work, it will descend too deeply or will come to the surface, where it will be readily discovered and destroyed. Where no stabilizing apparatus is used, floaters are required, and they also are easily discovered by good observers.

"Moreover, mines too close to the surface have not the maximum destructive effect.

"Notwithstanding the conditions that reduce to very small proportions the mines that really explode out of the 1000 laid each year, they constitute a formidable danger that will not disappear for several years after the war is over.

"All the mines that drift to sea risk some day or other encountering a ship. Such accidents have already occurred, as in the case of the French battleship Bouvet destroyed by a drifting mine at the Dardanelles."

BESCHER'S HOMER WITH TWO MEN ON DEFEATS CHICAGO

Long's Four-Base Hit in the Fifth Also a Big Factor in 8—4 Victory for Manager Huggins' Men.

CUBS KNOCKED OUT OF LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

McConnell, Leading Pitcher of Tinker's Staff, Driven to Bench by Hard-Hitting St. Louisans.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 29.—The Cardinals today located the range, timed the speed of a pair of Cub twirlers, bombarded them for ten safe drives, including two home runs and not only won their first game of the series, but stopped the winning streak of the men of Tinker at seven and dropped them from first place in the National League.

The final score was 8 to 4.

Long and Bescher were the Cards who produced the circuit drives and both selected timely spots, for there was one on, when Long hit over the left field fence, and two were standing on the paths when Bescher smote his mighty swat. Thus are five of the Cards' runs accounted for by those two long drives.

These were the spectacular features of a game that abounded with the unexpected, for while the score indicates that the men of Huggins won handily, the 10,000 fans who witnessed the combat will testify that it was anything but an easy victory. And they will tell you that the two clubs were tied at four, at the end of the seventh and that the Cards won in the last two rounds.

McConnell Driven From Mound.

It was the long-delayed punch of the Cards, the return of the missing wallop, that gave them this game and marked their initial victory of the season in Chicago. George McConnell, who has been the recognized star of the Cub staff, was driven from the mound and Prendergast, his successor, treated even more rudely. But while the Cubs were compelled to bow in defeat, they caused all the havoc that they could and pummeled Doak in the seventh until he cried quits. Slim Sallee was then brought to the mound. And he had enough to hold the Cubs while his mates pounded out the sweet win.

This third contest, one that drew 10,000, that was graced by perfect weather, that saw the Cubs fighting for their eighth straight win, was a pitchers' battle in the earlier stages. It was Doak against McConnell and the latter's record for the season was but a single pass and two runs in the three games that he had pitched. The Cards did nothing but threaten in the opening round; but a short right field fence gave the Cubs one, for Cy Williams dropped a high fly upon the wall and it bounded into the street for a home run

Hug's Men Take the Lead.

Not until the fourth could the men of Huggins overcome this handicap and then they counted two and took the lead. Smith opened with a single, Betzel doubled and the former counted. Long put down a perfect bunt and Fischer threw the sphere into right field, Betzel scoring.

The fifth was barren for both, but the Cardinals scored two more in the sixth and apparently clinched the game. Bescher the first man up, walked, Smith sacrificed. Betzel grounded out and with two gone McConnell grooved one. It was the ball Long was looking for. He swung and the next instant it fell among the bleacherites and the batter as well as Bescher started a slow trot, being careful to touch all the bases.

With the score 4 to 1, it looked easy. For Doak had allowed but three hits, had possessed wonderful control and looked a certain winner. Then came the seventh and joy for the Chicagoans. With one gone, Saier was hit by a pitched ball, Doolan walked, Fischer beat out an infield hit and the bases were filled. Doak failed to steady. Yerkes singled and Saier and Mann, who had run for Doolan counted. That was all for Doak and Sallee came in. Zwilling, a pinch hitter, wafted a long fly to center and Fischer counted the run that made it four all.

Wild Throw by Mulligan Helps.

And then the game stood just as if they hadn't played an inning, save that Prendergast was sent to the slab for Chicago. The Cards immediately scored a run on a wild toss by Eddie Mulligan, the St. Louis boy. The ninth saw the visitors clinch the contest. With one gone Snyder and Sallee singled, Gonzales ran for his brother catcher and Bescher lifted the ball squarely over the right field fence. There was a parade of Cards then that spelled victory, and stopped the longest winning streak the Cubs have had since 1910, the one that dropped them out of first place.

IOWA BEATS NEBRASKA IN DUAL TRACK MEET

AMES, Iowa, April 29.—Iowa State College defeated the University of Nebraska today in a dual track and field meet here by a score of 61½ points to 52½. A cold rain which continued throughout the day put the track in poor condition and prevented record breaking performances. The Iowans showed especial strength in the middle-distance runs and the hurdles, taking first and second in the mile, two miles, high and low hurdles. Nebraska won both first and second places in the 100 and 220 yard dashes and also won the quarter mile event with an Ames man second. Ames won the relay, and Nebraska the half mile, while the points in the weight events and the jumps were nearly evenly divided.

Cross-Country Title Winner and Field of Runners He Defeated Yesterday

START OF THE CROSS COUNTRY RACE.

Biel Wins in Close Race for Cross-Country Title

Missouri Athletic Association Distance Runner Is First by Five Seconds Over J. Bantle—M. A. A. Also Wins Team Prize.

IRVIN BIEL and the Missouri Athletic Association fired a double barrelled load of surprise among the hosts of the "they can't come back" gang and the first guessers of the local long-distance running fraternity yesterday afternoon.

The occasion was the twelfth annual M. A. A. 6½-mile, Forest Park cross-country run for the Western district A. A. U. championship, in which Biel, representing the Cherry Diamond, played the prodigal son act by romping home in first place after a sojourn of several seasons in the land of "also rans."

The spunky little runner wasn't feted with any fatted calf, but was rewarded with a good-looking gold medal for his efforts.

As to the Missouri A. A., it won back lost prestige in local distance running circles by defeating the Columbian A. C., 17 to 38, an dincidentally copping first three positions. It was the first time in some four years that the M. A. A. gained point honors over the Tangled C in a running meet. What is more, it was also the first run that Biel had landed since 1912, when he breasted the tape first in the club 10-mile marathon. Six years ago he was victor in the cross-country.

Time Was Very Slow.

The time of yesterday's race wasn't startling in the least, the winner taking 4m. 10 3-5s. for the grind, while the mark hung up by Joe Erxleben in 1910 is 38:46. The weather conditions were excellent and the track in good shape, all of which leads to the conclusion that Joe simply was able to step faster. Less than five seconds after Biel finished in yesterday's run, Joe Bantle finished, followed in 3-5s. by Arthur Rettig. Both of these boys represented the M. A. A.

Levi Asakainan, fourth, was the first C. A. C. runner to finish.

The manner of totaling the points for team honors was to count the position finish of each of the first five runners on each team as that many points. First place counting one, second place two, and so on.

Although 16 runners had entered the event, only 12 starters faced Starter Dr. C. W. Bassett on the track of the Triple A club, at 2:30 o'clock. After the firing of the gun the contestants ran four laps of the track and then started a 5½-mile jaunt through the park. This carried them along the main drives down around Jefferson Memorial, south to Nigger Hill and east to the Triple A, where the race was finished with a lap around the track. Five laps of this track constitute a mile.

Biel Takes Lead at Nigger Hill.

At the three-mile mark, Rettig, Asakainan, Biel, Kaysing and the Bantle were bunched with a fairly good breach between them and the rest of the contestants. At Jefferson Memorial the order was Joe Bantle, Rettig, Asakainan and Biel. Then going up Nigger Hill, two miles from the finish, Biel forged ahead and was never after that headed. He breezed up to the clubhouse a leader of about 40 yards over Rettig and was about 25 yards to the good at the finish.

On the A. A. A. track Bantle dashed ahead of Rettig and after a pretty sprinting race maintained his lead at the close of about 5 feet. The order of the finish and time is as follows:

Biel, M. A. A., 41:10 3-5; J. Bantle, M. A. A., 41:15 1-5; A. Rettig, M. A. A., 41:15 4-5; Asakainan, C. A. C., 42:37 2-5; A. Bantle, M. A. A., 42:39; W. Matthews, C. A. C., 43:40; J. Probst, C. A. C., 44m; J. Kaysing, C. A. C., 44:26; C. Brickey, C. A. C., 44:41; C. Burns, M. A. A., 44:43; H. Levinson, M. A. A., 45:12; Edelman, C. A. C., 46:12.

Soldan Batters Yeatman Curver Winning 12-0

With Pitcher Brockmeyer twirling unhittable ball and the West End batters slamming Winkelman to all corners of High School Field, the Soldan High School baseball nine had but little difficulty in walloping the Yeatman High team, 12 to 0, yesterday morning.

The extent of the Yeatman offense was a three-base swat by Goessling in the fifth inning. This was the only safety yielded by the Union Avenue moundsman throughout the game. Brockmeyer's splendid exhibition backs a rapid rise in Soldan stock in the I. L. race, inasmuch as Harrison, the other gold and brown pitcher, held Central to but three hits last week.

MISSOURI RUNNER EQUALS RECORD IN 120-YARD HURDLES

Bob Simpson Covers Distance on Turf Track in Fifteen Seconds Flat.

PHILADELPHIA, April 29.—Three world's records were equaled and one collegiate record was broken on Franklin Field today in the annual relay race carnival of the University of Pennsylvania.

In winning the 2-mile college relay championship of America, Yale equaled the record of 7m. 53s., made by an Irish-American Athletic Club team in 1910.

Cornell equaled the record of 17m. 51 3-5s. in winning the 4-mile college relay championship of America.

Simpson, the western champion from Missouri University, equaled the world's record of 15s. for the 120-yard hurdles. Simpson has equaled the world's record before on a cinder path, but his performance today was remarkable because it was made on grass.

F. C. Smithson, of the Pacific northwest, a member of the American Olympic team, made a record of 15s. on grass on July 25, 1908, in Great Britain.

Mucks Sets Discus Mark.

The college record broken was for the discus, Mucks of Wisconsin, the American champion discus thrower, raising the figures from 140 feet 2 5-8 inches to 145 feet 11½ inches.

Another feature event of the day was the winning of the mile relay championship by Harvard in a hard finish. Pennsylvania won the freshman one-mile relay championship. St. Albins, Washington, D. C., captured the prepatory relay championship at a mile and the Northeast High School, Philadelphia, won the high school national relay one-mile title.

The one-mile relay college championship race was an exciting affair. The starters were Harvard, Princeton, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. Wallace and Barrett of Princeton led in their relays, but in the third quarter Bingham of Harvard took the lead and held it to the end of the relay with Richardson of Princeton and Williams of Wisconsin close up. Scudder of Pennsylvania ran a poor quarter and Meredith, the Olympic champion, of whom much was expected, was unable to catch Wilcox of Harvard, and Moore of Princeton, who were leading on the last relay.

Meredith Runs Great Race.

Meredith made a great race of it, but was only able to cut down some of the 20-yard lead, and Wilcox finished first with Moore second. Meredith was third and Smith, Wisconsin, fourth. Meredith's unofficial time for the quarter was 47 4-5s.

The two-mile relay championship was won by Yale in easy fashion. Her runners were Rolfe, Cooper, Barker and Overton, in the order named and had the anchorman been pushed he probably would have broken the world's record.

In the four-mile relay championship Cornell's sterling milers, Taylor, Hoffmire, Windnagle and Potter, were never in trouble. Had Potter known he was equaling the world's record he might have extended himself enough to set a new mark.

The 100-yard dash was a great race between H. Smith of Michigan C. Smith, Wisconsin; Terschner, Harvard, and Sol Butler, the negro flier from Dubuque. To many of the spectators it appeared as though Terschner had breasted the tape first, but the officials announced that H. Smith was across first and C. Smith second. There was no daylight between the four men as they crossed the finish line.

The weather was fine and about 18,000 persons saw the competition between the East and West.

THE SUMMARIES:

One mile college relay championship of America—Harvard (Pennypacker, Biddle, Bingham, Wilcox), first; Princeton (Wallace, Barrett, Richardson, Moore), second; Pennsylvania (Kaufman, Dorsey, Scudder, Meredith), third; Wisconsin (Burke, Harvey, Williams, Smith), fourth. Time by quarters—51s, 1:41 1-5, 2:31 1-5, 3:19.

Pole vault—Foss, Cornell and Newstetter, Pennsylvania, tied for first place at 12 feet 6 inches, and Foss won the toss for first place; Rector, Dartmouth; Curtis, Syracuse, Haydock, Harvard; Runyan, Penn State, and Sewell, Pennsylvania, tied for third place at 12 feet.

Broad jump—Won by Worthington, Dartmouth, distance 23 feet 1¼ inches; second, Pogue, Illinois, 22 feet 4¾ inches; third, Carter, Illinois, 21 feet 7½ inches; fourth, Butler, Dubuque, 21 feet 1¼ inches.

Four-mile college relay championship of America—Won by Cornell (Taylor, Hoffmire, Windnagle, Potter); second, Wisconsin (Merrill, Benish, Schardt, Harvey); third, Pennsylvania (Mitchell, Colton, Dekorn, Humphreys). Time, 17m. 51 1-5s. equaling world's record.

Discus throw—Won by Mucks (Wisconsin), distance 145 feet 11¼ inches, breaking the collegiate record of 140 feet 2⅝ inches, made by Garrels, Michigan, in 1905; second, Husted, Illinois, 140 feet; third, White, Syracuse, 134 feet 9½ inches; fourth, Dorizas, Pennsylvania, 130 feet 9 inches.

One-mile high school relay championship of America—Northeast High, Philadelphia, first; Newark (N. J.) Central, second; East Orange, N. J., third. Time—3m. 33 4-5s.

100-yard dash, final—H. Smith, Michigan, first; C. Smith, Wisconsin, second; Teschner, Harvard, third; Butler, Dubuque, fourth. Time, 10 2-5s.

Javelin throw—Final, won by Nourse, Phinceton; distance, 171 ft. 11¼ in.; second, Culp, Illinois, 138 ft. 6 in.; third, Creighton, Pennsylvania, 133 ft. 3½ in.; fourth, Nash, Rutgers, 125 ft. 6½ in.; fifth, Gennert, Princeton, 125 ft.; 5¼ in.

Two-mile college relay championship of America—Won by Yale (Rolfe, Cooper, Barker, Overton); second, Chicago (Clark, Stout, Merrill, Diamond); third, Michigan (Murphy, Ufer, Donnelly, Carroll); fourth, Princeton; fifth, Pennsylvania. Time by halves, 1:59, 3:57, 5:57 1-5, 7:53. This equals the world's record.

One mile freshmen college relay championship of America—Won by Pennsylvania; second, Princeton; third, Pennsylvania State; fourth, Columbia. Time, 3:29 4-5.

One mile preparatory school, relay championship of America—Won by St. Albans, Washington; second, Mercersburg; third, Exeter; fourth, Huntington, Boston. Time, 3m. 27 2-5s.

Shotput—Won by Mucks, Wisconsin, distance 48 ft. 1¼ in.; second, Richards, Cornell, 44 ft. 10⅝ in.; third, Cann, New York University, 44 ft. 8¾ in.

High jump—Richards, Cornell, and Oler, Yale, tied for first place at 6 ft. 3 in.; Johnstone, Harvard and Treweeke, Kansas, tied for third place at 5 ft. 11 in.

120 yard hurdle final: Won by Simpson, Missouri; second, Grubb, Cornell; third, Ames, Illinois. Starr, who finished third, disqualified for knocking down three hurdles. Time, 15s., equalling world's record.

Cobb Owns .350 Batting Average; Kauff's Is .290

Ty Cobb, who yesterday sent over the tieing run for the Tigers with a single in the ninth and then won it for Jennings with a double in the eleventh, now has a big lead on his rival, Benny Kauff. Including yesterday's figures, when Cobb batted .500 and Kauff only .200, the Tiger star has the edge .350 to .290.

Cobb, in the contests he has played this season, has cracked out 14 hits in 40 times at bat, while Kauff has connected safely nine times in 31 attempts. Kauff still leads in pilfering, with three against one for Ty. The figures:

Cobb	40	2	14	1	1	.350
Kauff	31	2	9	2	3	.290

Weilman vs. Benz Today.

Carl Weilman, the lanky southpaw, who has beaten the White Sox twice this season, and Joe Benz are down to pitch in the second game of the series between the Browns and White Sox this afternoon.

Whitesett Breaks Leg.

FULTON, Mo., April 29.—Andy Whitesett of Harrisonville, shortstop of the Westminster College baseball team, broke his leg and dislocated his ankle in sliding home this afternoon in an interfraternity game. He will be unable to play the remainder of the season. The accident is a hard blow to the Blue Jays in the race for the collegiate championship, as Francis E. Fisher of St. Louis, manager and coach, who was to have played short, has been declared ineligible under the four-year limit.

BALTIMORE, April 29.—The Johns Hopkins lacrosse team scored their fourth consecutive victory of the season today by defeating Stevens Institute, 14 to 2.

CONDITION HELPS 'SAILOR' JERABEK DEFEAT SHERIDAN

Chicago Fighter Far From Being in Best Shape for Contest at the Stag A. C.

SHARPE'S DECISIONS.

CHARLES ("SAILOR") JERABEK of St. Louis vs. Mickey Sheridan of Chicago, 8 rounds, weight 147 pounds at 3 p. m.—Jerabek the winner on points.

EMMET WEST of Edwardsville, Ill., vs. Charley Cain of St. Louis, 8 rounds at catch weights (West, about 124; Cain about 135)—West the winner by knockout in third round.

PETE MACKLIN vs. "Happy" Howard, 8 rounds at about 118 pounds—Macklin the winner on points.

By Harry S. Sharpe,

Referee for the Future City Athletic Club and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

"Sailor" Jerabek of this city outboxed Mickey Sheridan of Chicago last night at the Stag Athletic Club, and won his bout; but he had reason to know that he had been in a hard contest and probably was very glad when it was over.

Jerabek was in first-class condition, and this aided him greatly in some fast boxing; but he didn't outhit Sheridan nor did he out-fight his opponent when the latter was able to rouse to the task. This he was able to do only as long as his poor condition would permit.

The Chicago boxer came into the ring with a hard wallop concealed about his person, but with a large portion of extra weight that should have been left in the city by the lake. It certainly was of no value to him last night, though it did give him the smooth, sleek, soft appearance of one who is eating not wisely, but too well.

The weight for this bout was 147 pounds at 3 p. m., and it was announced that both boxers were under the weight at that hour. Perhaps 'tis true. Jerabek certainly was. He looked lean as a racehorse, every rib showing plainly enough to be counted, and he looked fit to "fight the fight of his life."

Tricks Avail Sheridan Little.

Sheridan is an aggresive and exceedingly tricky fighter, and his cunning in doing the unexepected had Jerabek in trouble on various occasions. For instance, while looking at Jerabek's toes, Sheridan would suddenly swing for the head. Some of these 'haymaking" attempts were dangerously near getting results, but many of them missed by inches, a foot or a yard. Then, when walking away from Jerabek, as if to try for a new balance of his body, Sheridan would suddenly whirl and slam with right and left to head or body. Again, he would swing out from the ropes, holding on with one hand and using the other to prescribe an arc, much like a man cutting grain with a scythe.

These maneuvers were disconcerting, but the St. Louis boy held himself steady, and by straight boxing, using left jab and right counter, he managed to get inside most of Sheridan's swings in time to escape the worst part of the danger.

After about four rounds of boxing, Sheridan began to tire. Condition was begining to tell and Sheridan was paying the toll exacted for his lack of sufficient training. Then the Chicagoan walked bodly and carelessly right into the danger zone, within easy reach of Jerabek, and it looked as if he were insanely reckless. Rolling his head from side to side away from the direction of Jerabek's punches he managed to slip many of them in a manner that won applause. However, he couldn't get away from all of them and every one that landed in the latter part of the bout was like draining sap from a tree. Jerabek was tired, too, but he had strength in reserve and it answered the call for help.

Referee Names Jerabek.

Though there was some hard slugging done, there was not a knockdown in the bout. Both men suffered considerable punishment. At the end Referee Eddie Randall had but little trouble in separating the difference and naming Jerabek the winner.

"Young" Leach Cross failed to appear for his part in the semi-final with Emmet West of Edwardsville, Ill., and his place was taken by Charlie Cain. Charlie appears always willing to substitute, but never seems to be given time to train. It was so again last night, and Charlie was counted out in the second round.

It was West's first bout for a period of two years, and he plainly showed the effects of his absence from the ring. Both boys boxed like green amateurs. West weighed about 124 pounds, while Cain was 10 or a dozen pounds heavier.

"Kid" Macklin outpointed "Happy" Howard in a slow preliminary of eight rounds.

It was the final boxing show the Stag A. C. will give this season, according to statements made at the ringside. About 300 spectators were in attendance.

TRIPLE PLAY AND 3 DOUBLE "KILLS" BEAT BROWNS 3-1

Sensational and Lucky Work by White Sox Defense, Plus Pratt's Amazing "Strategy" With Three On, Defeat Jones' Men.

By W. J. O'Connor.

BRAVE men wept, yesterday, when the Browns defeated Eddie Plank, the battle-scarred veteran of 42, who has done as much as Gen. Meade to make Gettysburg famous. For it was the Browns, friends, who knifed Plank, although the White Sox get credit for the victory, 3-1.

In the denouement of Plank's well-conceived plot to break the Borwns' losing streak, sensational baseball was revealed. A triple play was turned against the Browns; a double play was whipped over at their expense and twice during the game they filled the bases with one out, but failed to score.

There were plays which forced one to think of elephant tusks and before the panic was at an end, even Fielder Jones became involved in senseless strategem that stained an otherwise immaculate escutcheon.

But throughout the fight Plank pitched like a machine, with precision, keen mental perception, perfection and persistence. He never faltered and Jones paid the highest tribute to him that has been paid to any Brown pitcher so far this season, to wit: At no time during the game was a relief pitcher sent to the Bull pen to warm up. And Jones' judgment was justified by the final results for not one of the enemy's runs was made without the assistance of a Brownie.

Plank was touched for seven hits, but he fanned two men in the pinch. He fanned two others at random, but Plank's theory is to toy with the enemy until the pinch comes; then pitch. He passed three men, one purposely. He deserved to win.

Browns Fail on Home Grounds.

That he didn't is a story, involved but interesting and likewise amazing. Yesterday's defeat was the fifth link forged in a chain of successive reverses for the proteges of Fielder Jones. It was their ninth loss out of eleven games at Sportsman's Park. They won one and tied one since opening there against the Cardinals.

But in every ball game, whether keenly contested or lop-sided in its eventuality, there is one determining play technically, that is in the argot of the baseball trade, called the "break." Yesterday's break was a boner and it came at the very start of hostilities, knocking many of the spectators plumb off their chairs.

The first Brown inning unraveled itself as follows: Shotton singled. Austin sacrificed. Sisler singled and Shotton went to third. Marsans walked and the bases were filled. Now for the dynamite. Pratt, who has the distinction of being the club's clean-up hitter, the man who should carry the punch, went to bat and signalled to Shotton for the squeeze play.

Pratt's Amazing Strategy.

Shotton took a disinterested lead. He probably was awed by the audacity of Pratt in trying such a play in contradiction to all good baseball principles, all fundamentals of sound strategy, all essentials of Jonesque baseball. So he lazily advanced with the pitch and when Pratt missed connections on a waste ball, high and outside, Shotton was trapped like a rat, flat-footed off third and retired, Schalk to McMullen.

The play fell like a pall on the fans and the players alike. Jones shouted something it was good the fans didn't hear and Pratt rolled meekly to Collins for the third out.

From that time on the Browns were whipped although Plank hurled like a trojan and seemed to improve with time. However, the climax of stupidity of such proportions—three men on and only one out—took the pep out of the Browns and gave the Sox the stimulant to win in spite of Plank's perfect pitching.

Pratt's unsuccessful strategem was the break. It beat the Browns, because otherwise they would probably have yielded a run and a run to Plank would have meant the game.

HOW BROWNS MISSED CHANCES TO SCORE

FIRST INNING — Shotton singled. Austin sacrificed. Sisler singled, Shotton going to third. Marsans walked, filling the bases. Pratt missed connections on a squeeze-play bunt and Shotton was picked off third, Schalk to McMullen. Pratt rolled to E. Collins.

THIRD INNING—Plank singled. Shotton popped to Russell. Austin bunted and Russell made a late throw trying for Plank, both runners being safe. Sisler popped a single to left, filling the bases. Marsans lined to Jackson and Jones sent Plank in. He was doubled standing up, Jackson to Schalk.

SIXTH INNING — Pratt walked. Tobin fanned, after twice failing to sacrifice and Pratt was doubled trying to steal. McMullen tossed out Clemons.

SEVENTH INNING—Johnson walked. Plank sacrificed and was safe on McMullen's fielder's choice. He tried for Johnson. Shotton failed twice to bunt then lined to Weaver, who touched second, doubling Johnson and threw to Fournier retiring Plank on a triple play.

"That Beats Me," Said Jones When Shotton Hit Into a Triple Play

From the very beginning the Browns seemed to roll along on the tidal wave of misfortune which has engulfed them in seventh place. They were stymied by Old Man Jinx from the start, but it was not until the seventh inning that the straw fell which broke the camel's back.

With the score tied at this juncture, Johnson auspiciously inaugurated a rally with a walk. There were large whoops on the next play when McMullen foolishly tried to force Johnson at second on Plank's sacrifice. Johnson was safe and nobody was out.

"And," yelled Jimmy Austin at first, "nobody ain't going to get out."

But Jim didn't reckon with fate. Shotton came up with implicit instructions from Jones to sacrifice. He failed miserably twice. He tried too hard to beat out a bunt, instead of "laying it down." After fouling two he was forced to hit. Johnson and Plank were running and Bert hit the closest thing to a single that has been hit at Sportsman's Park this season.

He drove a whistling liner over second base and here was the blow that killed father. Weaver was playing close to second to hold Johnson on. That is he was continually bluffing Ernie back to the bag and when Shotton's drive came whizzing by he was not more than ten feet from the bag, and he was "out of position."

Nevertheless, for this particular play, he proved to be in exactly the right spot. He leaped and speared the line drive, touched second, doubling Johnson and tossed to Fournier, tripling Plank.

"That beats me," moaned Jones, who stood and stared into space like a man who has been stung by the tsetse fly.

'Twas the Last Straw.

After that the Browns were broken in spirit. They went out in order in the two remaining rounds and carried their tails between their legs and their heads low.

Three double plays were made at their expense, in addition to the aforementioned triple play. In the third inning Fielder Jones who is bearing up remarkably well under the strain, went momentarily squirrelly and sent Plank in from third on a line drive to Jackson. Plank was doubled from here to Dead Man's Hill and another rally went up in smoke.

In the sixth inning Pratt coaxed a pass and Tobin, renowned for his ability to bunt, failed utterly in trying to sacrifice. Finally he fanned and Pratt was doubled trying to steal, although the world today is ignorant of Pratt's reason for "going down."

The Sox scored the first run because of a high throw by Clemons. In the third frame Schalk smacked a single off Plank's curve. Plank's cunning prevented Russell from sacrificing and he went out on a pop to Austin. Plank divined Schalk's intent and wasted one as Ray bolted for second. Clemons had oodles of time, but he threw high to Johnson and Schalk was safe. J. Collins then lifted to Sisler, but McMullen, with two strikes, shot a single to left and Schalk counted.

The Browns tied it in the fifth. One gone, Shotton doubled to right. Austin lifted to Jackson, but Sisler's speed gave him a hit on a roller to Weaver. Shotton galloped to the plate and was out on Fournier's throw to Schalk, but Schalk dropped the ball and it was all over, 1—1.

J. Collins opened the first portion of the eighth with a double to left. McMullen bunted and Austin made a throw a little wide to Pratt. The ball hit Pratt's hands and then hit the ground, J. Collins scoring while McMullen went to second. E. Collins sacrificed him to third, Sisler to Pratt, and Fournier proved easy on a pop to Tobin. But Jackson jockeyed to a 3—2 count and then exploded a triple to right center, scoring McMullen. Plank fanned Felch, a right-handed hitter.

BOBBY ANDERSON AND JACK WHITE TO BOX TUESDAY

Brother of the "Knockout King" Is Matched With Duquoin Terror by F. C. A. C.

PADDY KELLY ON AGAIN

Husky Irish Battler Will Oppose Pierce Mathews in the Semi-Windup.

By Harry S. Sharpe,

Referee for the Future City Athletic Club and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

Bobby Anderson of Duquoin, Ill., and Jack White of Chicago will top the bill at the Future City Athletic Club Tuesday night. Anderson is well known here, but White is a newcomer.

White has some of the capabilities of his illustrious brother, Charley, a contender for the lightweight title, but has never been considered quite so good. He has been knocked out by Joe Rivers and Johnny Dundee; lost to Johnny Griffith, Joe Mandot, Frankie Russell, Johnny Kilbane and Abe Attell, and won from such boxers as Eddie Dennie, Harry Thomas, Tommy Dixon, Patsy Kline, Tommy Bresnahan, Tommy Kilbane, Biz Mackey, Sammy Trott, Tommy Gary, Frankie Conley and Cleve Bridges, scoring knockouts over the last five. White boxed Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, four times, securing two draws, was beaten once in 12 rounds, and the other was an eight-round, no-decision bout.

White has engaged in many battles during the eight years he has been boxing and has borne a good reputation. He has not done anything much of note during the past year, but prior to that time had been boxing very regularly. He is not thought to be quite so good now as he was rated several years ago.

White arrived in the city last Thursday and was immediately matched with Anderson. He appears to be in good condition, and it is probable he will give Anderson a good battle.

Anderson Has Made Good.

Bobby Anderson has not lost a bout here since he started in on Oct. 26 of last year, and he has won all of them except one draw that he boxed Leo Witt. His winning bouts were won on points, except the one he boxed with Howard Richardson on Dec. 7, which he won by a knockout in the fifth round of a fierce slugging match.

Anderson's St. Louis record contains defeats of Leo Witt, twice; Howard Richardson, Jack Clune, Matty Smith, twice, and "Young" Otto Wallace. For a boy who had never been heard of prior to last October, the record he has piled up is an excellent one, indeed.

Anderson is a natural fighter, muscularly strong and of great recuperative powers. He is very aggressive, and starts his battle from the very beginning of the bout. He is not at all talkative, and there is nothing of the "grand-stand" play about him. Admitting that it takes two to make a fight, Anderson can be depended upon to do his part.

Anderson and White have agreed to do 133 pounds at 3 p. m. on Tuesday.

Kelly to Meet Mathews.

Paddy Kelly, who signaled his return to the local ring by outpointing Matty Smith at the Coliseum, last Tuesday night, has been engaged to box Pierce Mathews in the semi-final, eight rounds at 133 pounds.

It is a good thing for Kelly that he has been keeping in condition, because he was not notified until Saturday morning that he would be wanted for the bout. Mathews had been matched with Joe McMullen, to whom he lost a close decision at the Keokuk A. C. on April 15 in a very hard-fought bout.

The match appeared to [illegible] satisfactory to McMullen's manager when it was made last week, but recollections of that hard bout with Mathews, when the latter was [illegible] in his best condition, may have suggested the advisability of calling it off.

It is unfortunate if this be true, because McMullen has made a decidedly good impression in his four bouts, and the ones he boxed with Mathews and Howard Richardson, both of which he won, stamped him as a comer.

Patsy Flanagan and "Happy" Howard will box six rounds at 112 pounds in the second preliminary. Flanagan is the youngster who opposed Jimmy Curtis at the Coliseum on the night of the Wills-Langford bout. He had never appeared before, and accepted the bout only that morning. He made a decidedly good impression and Tommy Sullivan wants to give him a chance to develop, as he believes he shows promise of becoming a good boxer.

In the first preliminary "Smiley" Fulgen will box Tommy Belrose six rounds at 140 pounds. They boxed on April 11, and Belrose, looking more like a fattened sea lion than a fighter, quit in the fourth round.

Burke Popular in Memphis.

"Battling" Ball, one of the negro boxers who performs with some regularity on Friday nights at the Future City A. C., is just back from Memphis, Tenn., where, on last Tuesday night, before Billy Haack's Phoenix A. C., he boxed Earl Murphy, also of St. Louis, an eight-round draw, according to the referee's decision, though Ball opines that he had a shade.

Ball reports that Tommy Burke, the St. Louis middleweight, is a great favorite in Memphis, having made a good impression in his bouts with Art Magirl there some months ago. They boxed twice, and each time the bouts were declared a draw, but Ball says many who witnessed them believe Burke should have been given the decisions. Burke is reported to have a match in Memphis the early part of May.

What Nationality Is Sullivan?

A week ago last Tuesday "Kid" Herman of Pekin, Ill., and Jimmy Murphy had been matched to appear before the Future City A. C., but word was received that Herman would be unable to appear, but his manager, Jim Kenney, notified Tommy Sullivan that he could substitute a boxer by the name of "Buck" Timothy, "who, in appearance," said the manager, "is a dead ringer for Herman."

Herman has a Jewish cast of countenance, very pronounced.

Now comes a letter from Jack Tibbets, who was very well known here as a successful boxer some years ago. Tibbets, in his communication, says:

"I have just seen 'Buck' Timothy work. He is a bantamweight and a great little boxer. He LOOKS EXACTLY LIKE 'BROOKLY TOMMY' SULLIVAN."

Sullivan is an Irishman, and he can't see the joke.

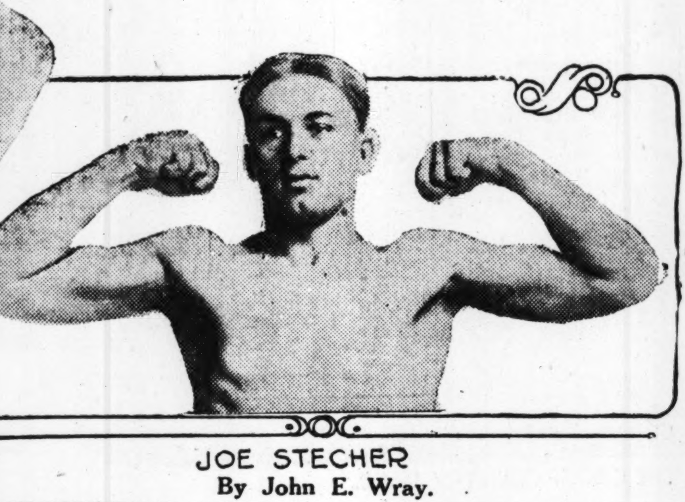
Bowman Is Released.

TOLEDO, O., April 29.—Pitcher Abe Bowman, one of the players Roger Bresnahan obtained in the transfer of the Cleveland American Association team to Toledo, was released today to South Bend in the Central League. Bowman had not been given a chance with the local club since the opening of the playing season. [illegible]rly was with the Cleveland American League club.

Joe Stecher's Conquest of Americus May Drive Gotch Back to Retirement

On Its Face the Nebraskan's Defeat of Schoenlein, in Jig Time, Proves He's a Title Class Mat Man—the Stage, However, Seems All Set for a Big Bout—Champion to Hold Tryout Test Against Cutler on May 2.

FRANK GOTCH



JOE STECHER

By John E. Wray.

JOE STECHER, the tall Nebraska wrestler, famous for the development of the "scissors" hold to a point where he is now considered invincible by many of the mat fraternity, probably caused World's Champion Frank Gotch to sit up and consider strenuously his young rival's defeat of Gus Schoenlein, known as "Americus" last Friday.

Stecher's "scissors," used in throwing Americus, cut a large figure. It enabled Joe to down Americus twice in 4 minutes, which cut exactly in half the time required for the same result in their previous meeting.

When this pair first came to grips Americus, report had it, was not in condition. The result was considered something of a "fluke," as Americus was rated a strong second-class heavyweight contender. The second defeat of the Baltimorean by Stecher, achieved with even greater ease than the first time, proves that condition had nothing to do with Americus' downfall and that the Nebraskan is really a mat man of formidable ability.

That is the construction Frank Gotch is certain to put upon it. He KNOWS Americus.

Test Bout for Gotch.

GOTCH is engaged to wrestle Charles Cutler at Kansas City, May 2, according to news reports. This encounter will be in the nature of a self-test on the part of the Iowan, who is now between 35 and 40 years of age and at a time of life when men athletes put the question of endurance up to themselves.

If his showing against Cutler in this hour handicap match is satisfactory to Gotch, he will consent to a championship contest with Stecher.

Wrestling Fans Suspicious.

THE atmosphere of hippodrome lingers about the proposed contest in the opinion of some critics. They say that Gotch played the coy champion at the start; declined to come out of retirement; reconsidered and said he would compete if the public demanded it; signed with the Sells-Floto circus at a fat weekly salary of $1500; then announced his test match with Cutler—etc.

The affair, from the Stecher standpoint, is likewise supposed to have its promotion angles. Stecher, it is pointed out, has beaten a lot of easy marks, but he has not been sent against anybody of REAL class, Schoenlein excepted. Moreover, it is asserted that Joe backed out of matches with Strangler Lewis Aberg and Zbyszko and gives every indication of being "saved" for his title match with Gotch.

Stecher Should Meet Lewis.

HOWEVER, he can't be blamed for that. But the public would be better satisfied to see Stecher clean up some of the "beef trust" candidates and PROVE his superiority before opposing Gotch.

Victories over men like Mort Henderson go for nothing. Who ever heard of Henderson before they put him across as the "masked wrestler," in Rubeville, New York?

Rubeville, New York?

The last world's championship wrestling match was held at Chicago in the baseball park there, some four years ago. Within the gates were $87,000 worth of perfectly confiding onlookers and one and one-half wrestlers.

Gotch was the "one," having full use of both arms and two legs; Hackenschmidt had but one leg and lost in the hollowest fashion. Furthermore, every wrestler or wrestling man in touch with the inside KNEW that Gotch would win at least 48 hours before hand. The writer got the tip two days before the bout and the man who gave it to him cleaned up quite a sum of money for himself.

Will the Gotch-Stecher bout be another case of only one and one-half man in the ring, with Gotch being cut down to half a man by years?

Gotch, like Jeffries, may be beguiling himself into the belief that four years of retirement have had no deterrent effect on him. His case is astonishingly like that of Jeffries and the dope points to a similar finish.

MEET WITH AMES WILL PROVE TEST FOR TIGER STARS

Cyclones Expected to Make Missouri Hustle in Track Events on May 6.

From the Post-Dispatch's Special Correspondent at Missouri U.

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 29.—Next week is a busy one for Tiger track and baseball teams. The Ames cinder athletes will come to Columbia for the annual outdoor meet Saturday, May 6. Friday and Saturday the Tiger baseball nine will play Ames at Ames, after meeting the Chinese university team from Honolulu Tuesday in Columbia.

The track meet with Ames is the first of the season out of doors, with the exception of the Drake relay games, and will give the first line on the Tigers and the Cyclones as contenders for the honors of the Missouri Valley meet in Columbia, May 26 and 27. This will be of some importance, as Ames was second to the Tigers in the valley meet last year and seems to be the chief rival this year, although Kansas has improved materially.

Last year Missouri beat Ames easily on their rivals' field, although Simpson was beaten by Packer in the high hurdles, the surprise of the meet. The score was 72½ points to 54½ points, and the Tigers should repeat with as safe a margin of victory as this next Saturday.

Packer will probably take a second in the high hurdles, although this is not certain, with Renick doing so well as Simpson's understudy. Simpson and Daggy should take first and second places in the low hurdles.

Ames Strong in Sprints.

Ames will be strong in the sprints, as usual, but will have to do well to beat Simpson and Renick in the century, and Renick, Pittam and Daggy, if he runs, in the 220-yard dash.

Missouri counts on the quarters, perhaps both places. Niedorp is pretty sure of first place, and if Daggy, who is the coming star of the Tiger team, enters, he will have a good chance to take second. Pittam also runs this event.

Ames' main strength will come in the long-distance runs, and there is no denying that the Cyclones may take first and second in the half mile, mile and two-mile runs, having the weakest chance in the half mile. They will take second in numerous events, and have a good chance to cop the half-mile relay, although the Tigers have shown great improvement here with the addition of Renick and Pittam.

The showing of the Tiger one-mile relay team at the Drake games was not bad, but somewhat disappointing, for the coaches were hoping that they would run away with first place. This they did last year, nosing Chicago out of first when that team fouled; but this year both Chicago and Wisconsin finished ahead of them. The main reason was the three-yard penalty assessed against them for Niedorp's jumping the gun, an accident which sent him off in the rear and gave the entire four Tiger runners a serious disadvantage in their positions.

Relay Team Disappoints.

The showing of the relay team was not considered good or spectacular enough to warrant sending it to the Penn games. Their time was good, however, and it must be remembered that Wisconsin broke the Drake relay record to win.

That the prediction that the Tiger baseball team was a sure enough pennant contender was not unbiased seems to be proved by their showing in their first Conference games early this week, when they whipped the Kansas Aggies by 11 and 12 run leads. The Missouri pitchers, Bryant and Taylor, held their opponents well in hand, while the batting of their teammates brought in runs by the wholesale.

The entire trip of the team, which lasted a week, was successful, the five games played being won. They defeated the Sooners twice and the Oklahoma A. and M. College once in Stillwater and once on their return to Columbia, when a scrub team was sent in to give the varsity players a rest.

Smith, World's Best Bowler, Has Rolled 40 Perfect Games

Jimmy Smith of Brooklyn, N. Y., generally is regarded in the tenpin world as the best bowler of the United States, and might be acclaimed the champion if it were possible to determine absolutely a national title holder from the many tourneys held in various parts of the country, two of which at least claim national prominence.

When Smith is described as the best bowler it means that in any individual match or series of matches those who profess to follow the performances of the leading exponents of the alley game would rather stake their coin on the Easterner than any other man who might be named. Smith is consistent, and he is most consistent when the stakes are high, either in money or honors. In other words, he is a great "money bowler," as the term is known.

Furthermore, Smith is an exponent of the natural ball, as opposed to the leaded or trick ball performers. The young New Yorker takes considerable pride in this fact, and maintains that just as good or better results may be obtained from the use of the regular ball. In support of this contention he points to his home-and-home match against Franz of Cleveland in 1909. The match was rolled for a side bet of $2000 per man, of which Smith took $500 of his own backing. Franz used the dodo ball.

Downed Franz by 597 Pins.

The conditions called for 15 games in each city, total pins to count. On his home alleys Smith accumulated a lead of 634 pins, and lost only 37 pins of this margin when he went to Cleveland, leaving a final advantage of 597 pins for an average of approximately 224. This was one of the most notable performances in Jimmy's career.

Aside from his advocacy of the natural ball, Smith also follows a uniform method of delivery, whether it is to be a hook or straight ball. While he varies the ball thrown according to the alleys, he uses no wrist twist in securing the hook. To accomplish that feat he twists his thumb, middle and little fingers in delivery. "And the only way to get the pins," says Smith, "is the 1-3."

Jimmy Smith—of which the Smith, by the way, is assumed, the family name being Mallom—was born on Sept. 19, 1885, in New York City, where his father has been foreman in a rubber works for 44 years. Mallom pere, who was born in Italy, although Jimmy's mother was American born, figured a career in the rubber works for this particular son, who was one of a family of three brothers and one sister.

This particular ambition on the part of Mallom Sr. was given a rude shock when it was discovered that Jimmy, 15 years old, had played hookey from the St. Patrick's Parochial School and taken a position as pin boy in Herman Ayler's alleys at 71 Smith street. There was a family scene, as well as a visit from the truant officer, and Jimmy was sent back to school, but his stay was short, and soon he was at the alleys again. Then the father determined to let his son get tired of the back-breaking job.

Started as Pin Boy.

But Jimmy did not get tired of bowling as a sport and a business. He was promoted from pinboy after a six months' apprenticeship, and advanced to the wineroom as delivery boy for family trade. This work did not keep him off the alleys, and he had learned the angles and how the pins should be hit, from "behind the pit." Smith attributes much of his subsequent success to his experience in "setting them up" for others and to observing the mistakes of more experienced performers.

Smith left the employment of Ayler, with whom he began as a pinboy, in 1905, to accept a position with William Cortes as manager and to represent the latter's alleys in the Greater New York individual championship, a round robin affair similar to that held annually in Chicago and other cities. The games were 16 of 11, with 18 rooms represented, total matches to count. In 1905 Smith tied for the title with Lee Johns, holder, and won the roll-off. He repeated his success in 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909 and again in 1912, after returning to New York from Buffalo, where for more than two years he acted as manager for John G. Flaws' alleys at a salary of $30 per week and whatever he could earn in exhibitions, which brought his average up to about $50 a week.

Smith competed in the American Bowling Congress tourney at St. Louis in 1911 and won the all-events title. He participated in many other tourneys, but always was more successful in match plays than in the big tourneys against large fields, where luck is admitted to cut a wide figure, with so few games to be rolled.

Claims Three-Game Record.

Smith claims a world's record for three games in competition, rolled at Toronto on Feb. 24, 1912, when he gathered 279, 296 and 256, for a total of 771. He also has 40 perfect scores of 300 accumulated on different alleys.

Smith rolled 19 matches against the pick of Chicago bowlers in 1912 and lost only one match, to Louis Levine, at the Lorenz alleys. He was less successful in his 1913 venture, but still took a good majority of the tests. He characterized Tony Karlicek as his hardest opponent.

J. DILLON SAYS HE WILL STOP FULTON WITHIN 10 ROUNDS

"Giant Killer" Offers to Do This of Give His Services Free of Charge.

HEAVIES DODGE HIM

Moran and Coffey Have "Black-Listed" Him Same as They Have Weinert.

By Robert Edgren.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Jack Dillon is one of the best fighting men ever developed in this country. While many of our "star" heavies refuse to meet him, taking refuge in the plea that the disparity in size would make the match a joke, the sport following public has a fairly clear idea of the facts.

Dillon is too dangerous—that's all. He hits too hard. He's too aggressive. He beats his opponents, from clever Battling Levinsky up to the big, rough ones, too consistently. Dillon's latest is a letter sent out by his manager offering to stop Fred Fulton within 10 rounds or give his services without receiving "a cent of the purse."

Dillon must have confidence in himself to challenge a man six feet six inches tall and weighing 217 pounds. Dillon wanted to fight Willard, who is six feet seven inches tall and weighs 259 pounds. Probably he thought by beating the next in size he might force delayed recognition by other heavyweights who have been getting big purses for ordinary performances.

Barely over middleweight class, and not gifted with the height and long reach that made Bob Fitzsimmons a terror among the heavies when he was middleweight champion, Dillon is doing all of his fighting in the heavyweight division, and without barring any opponent.

It isn't Dillon's fault that he hasn't met the men nearest the top in the heavyweight class. He has knocked out so many heavyweights that the "big fellows" can't be dragged into a ring with him. The style in which he knocked out big Tom Cowler put a crusher on any hope Dillon may have entertained of getting matches with Frank Moran, Jim Coffey, etc.

Probably the best heavyweight in New York today is Charlie Weinert. Dillon has fought Weinert twice. The first time he stopped Weinert in Philadelphia. The second time he beat Weinert badly here in New York. Neither Moran nor Coffey is anxious to have anything to do with a man who can whip Weinert, for they have Weinert on the blacklist themselves. Without a doubt both Dillon and Weinert can beat Coffey. A Dillon-Coffey or a Weinert-Coffey bout would draw a great house. Dillon and Weinert are both willing. You don't see Billy Gibson hustling around to match Coffey with them. He's too wise.

Dillon Has Beaten Weinert.

Moran, being as rugged and hardy as Dillon and Weinert, could meet either on even, or fairly even, terms. But in either match he'd risk being hammered down from the position he has gained by twice knocking out Coffey and by boxing 10 rounds with Champion Willard. Where he is Moran can make money until he's beaten. He won't hunt for trouble.

Australians are the most enthusiastic amateur sportsmen in the world. Although half a million Australians have gone to the war, including in their number nearly all of the country's best athletes, all sporting events are held as usual. But, although championships are being held, Australian sporting authorities have decided that all champions who have gone to the war shall hold their titles until they return to defend them, if they ever do return.

Australia is developing a Chinese boxer who may become a champion some day. His name is Clarence Taggie Chen, and they say he is the gamest thing ever seen in a ring. In an interview published in the Referee, Clarence says of himself:

Does Not Claim Title.

"The Referee has always praised me, but really I don't deserve it. I am not much of a fighter, and one paper says Rud Kee always was my master. My first battle was with Will Hughes. We stood toe to toe and smashed. I got him in the fifth, but he deserved as much credit as I. He was gamer than I was, I think. All my opponents have been real gentlemen. I have not received a decent hard punch—one that dazed me—yet, but I hope my opponents do not think I belittle them when I say this. I am going to the United States. I am not going to say when I get there, 'I am champion of so-and-so country.' I will start from the bottom rung and I think I can make some of the second-raters travel over the short courses over there."

In spite of his quite amazing modesty, so the Referee says, Clarence Taggie Chen is a cheerful, plucky, popular and very able 126-pounder. He is Australian born.

Barry Back in Ring.

Jim Barry, who has fought Sam Langford just 16 times, is back in the ring. A year ago Barry was a physical wreck from the use of cocaine, a habit he acquired when a doctor in California gave it to him for several weeks while treating a broken hand. Barry broke the habit eight months ago, since which time he has made voyages to England, South Africa and other places, working as a fireman on various steamers. The hard work seems to have given him a new hold on life. Only 29, he is now about to start all over again.

Barry is anxious to correct a mistaken idea that he's an Italian. "Why," he said yesterday, "I don't even know a word of the Italian language. People thought I was an Italian because I used to go around with Leo Pardello. In fact, I'm half Irish and half Sioux Indian. My real name is Hugh Edward Rogers. I am from Drayton, Dak., where I have several brothers living now. My father was Jarvis A. Rogers of County Antrim, Ireland. My mother was a fullblooded Sioux Indian from the White Earth reservation, Minnesota."

Regarding his plans, Barry said: "I am going to take on a few fights before going after Langford again. Sam is older than I am, and I'll get him yet if I have to wait until he has white hair."

Aldredge Lands Title.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 29.—George H. Aldredge of Dallas won the Texas amateur golf championship here today, when he stymied Bryan Heard of Houston on the thirty-seventh hole of their match. The two had fought on even terms throughout the day.

What Boots It?

AS long as a guy has a good working knowledge of the baseball language and is able to address himself to the umpire in such terms as to leave no doubt in that official's mind as to his qualifications for a successful career in the field of porch-climbing endeavor, the added accomplishment of being able to speak English is of little or no value and is apt to be more of a detriment than a help to the struggling ballplayer who is trying to make an honest living in spite of the machinations of a prejudiced and narrow-minded official who is endeavoring to take the bread and butter, to say nothing of the bacon and eggs, out of his mouth.

Webster Track Stars Win Meet From McKinley

In a dual meet replete with good performances, the Webster High School track and field team gained a 58 to 43 victory over McKinley High School squad at Francis Field, yesterday morning. Strength in the sprints and the weight events enabled the county lads to gain a victory over the South Side athletes. The best mark of the day was set by Kremer of the winning team, a slightly built lad, who tossed the shot 45 feet, 2½ inches. In winning this event Kremer defeated Deeds, the Interscholastic champion. Irland's 23 2-5 seconds for the 220-yard dash and Spencer's 5:03 for the mile also were unusually good.

The summary:

100-yard dash—Minchinson, McK., first; Irland, W. H., second; Rountree, W. H., third. Time, 10 2-5s.

Broad jump—Booth, W. H., first; Leffler, McK., second; Hart, W. H., third. Distance, 20 ft. 4½ in.

440-yard dash—Schuster, McK., first; Hammann, W. H., second; La Mont, McK., third. Time, 54 2-5s.

High jump—Rountree, W. H.; Lefler and Snycott, M. K.; tied for first place. Height, 67 in.

High hurdles—Leffler, McK., first; Booth, W. H., second; Roanolte, McK., third. Time, 17 4-5s.

Mile run—Spencer, W. H., first; Schall, W. H., second; Halman, W. H., third. Time, 5m. 3s.

Pole vault—Childs, McK., first; Booth, W. H., and Guerber and Leffler, McK., tied for second place. Height, 9 ft. 8 in.

220-yard dash—Irland, W. H., first; Rountree, K. H., second; Minchison, McK., third. Time, 23 2-5s.

Shotput—Kremer, W. H., first; Deeds, McK., second; Feuerborn, McK., third. Distance, 45 ft. 2½ in.

Discus hurl—Kremer, W. H., first; Deeds, McK., second; Feuerborn, McK., third. Distance, 107 ft. 11 in.

Relay race—Webster first, McKinley second.

Only 12 Former Federals Are Swatting Over .275

Of This Number Nine Are in the National League, While Ward Miller, Gedeon and Magee Are the Only Ones in the Ban Johnson Circuit.

JUST 12 of the players grabbed by the major league clubs from the Federals are hitting better than a .275 average to date. Nine of these are with National League outfits, while three are in the A. L. Of this number just two, Kauff and Flack, did not jump from the majors to the outlaws. The Browns have two hitting better than .300, Pratt and W. Miller, while Gonzales is the only Card in the select circle. These averages include last Wednesday's games.

Only one member of the Tigers' big three—Cobb, Crawford and Veach—is hitting .300. The lone representative is Cobb. Crawford is swatting .273, while Veach's mark is .255. Harry Heilman is carrying the aggregation with his clouting.

The two Tiger stars are not the only ones who have not hit their true stride. Frank Baker, Lajoie, Eddie Collins, Joe Jackson, Duffy Lewis, Stuffy McInnis and several others are far below the .275 mark. They'll be up there in a short time and a lot of the present select circle clouters will be in their present places.

Tris Speaker is the leading base stealer, with four pilfers. The other speeders—Cobb, Maisel and Eddie Collins—have not hit their true stride.

Samuel Agnew, the former Brown, has a swat mark of .071 with the world's champion Red Sox. He has made just one hit in 14 times to the plate.

Babe Ruth is the same slugger he was in 1915. His only hit of the present campaign was a double.

Shortstops for the American League clubs are heavy hitters—not. Here are the figures: McBride, .278; Chapman, .218; Bush, .208; Lavan, .200; Scott, .171; Terry, .152; Witt, .143, and Peckinpaugh, .086.

National League Notes.

The two St. Louis boys shortstopping in the National League are having little success with the willow. Eddie Mulligan with the Cubs has a swat mark of .100, while Ollie O'Mara is hitting .083 for the Superbas. No wonder they were benched.

Larry Doyle, who last season topped the N. L. in batting, is away down the line with a .192 mark so far this season. Buck Wheat of the Superbas, another slugger, is clouting .190. The old boys are slow in starting, but before the campaign is over they will be up there.

There's no one close to Max Carey in base stealing with his total of six, except Hal Chase of the Reds. This is more than the Superbas and Phillies have pilfered as teams. Robinson's men have four stolen bases and Moran's champions five.

Buck Herzog sure had to go some when he benched Mollwitz in favor of Chase. Mollwitz was hitting .462. But Prince Hal is clouting .455 at the present time. Fifteen hits in 33 trips to the plate to date. Also five stolen bases.

Wallace Gives Two Swats and McKinley Wins

Interscholastic Champions Shut Out Cleveland, 5—0, for Second Victory.

The McKinley High School nine gained its second successive victory of the Interscholastic League season by defeating the Cleveland High team, 5 to 0, at High School Field, yesterday afternoon. The game was one of the best played between local scholastic nines this season.

Although the score does not bring out the closeness of play, the contest was throughout a pitching duel between Schulz of Cleveland and Wallace of McKinley, with the latter having the edge. Te South Siders garnered five safeties, while Wallace was touced for onl yt taoin aoinilitit was touched for only two.

McKinley did the most of its scoring in the early innings, tallying twice in each the first and third frames. Another run was added in the eighth. Cleveland came closest to scoring in the ninth, when with two outs, Midkiff's charges got a man on second and third. The next man fanned.

Principia Beats Cadets, Who Had Five Runs Lead

Local School's Rally in Later Innings Defeats Alton Boys 7 to 5.

The Principia Academy baseball nine overcame a large lead rolled up by the Western Military Academy team, and by opportune hitting in the later innings, defeated the Alton cadets, 7 to 5, at Robison Field, yesterday afternoon.

The visitors got to Pitcher Schaberg in the first two innings and aided by a few Principia miscues chased 5 runs over the plate.

This was all of the scoring for Western, however. Schaberg settled down as did his support and the Illinoisans were shut out from then on. Principia started its scoring when Western left off tallying a pair in the second. One in the third, and two in each the fifth and seventh innings spelled the victory.

Robinson and Newell each landed two safeties for the winners. Western was able to garner but three bingles off of Schaberg. A large delegation of students accompanied the cadets to the game, while Principia was no less loyally supported.

TWO TALLIES IN FIRST GIVE PIRATES VICTORY

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 29.—Pittsburg defeated Cincinnati here today by the score of 2 to 1. The home team scored their runs off Toney in the first inning, on a double by Baird and singles by Barney, Hinchman and Wagner, after which Schulz went in to pitch. He gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth and Dale pitched the last inning. Mamaux allowed one run in the seventh on singles by Groh, Mollwitz and Griffith and after he had passed the first two men in the eighth he gave way to Miller, who retired the side.

GIANTS LOSE SEVENTH STRAIGHT GAME, 5—4

NEW YORK, April 29.—The New Yorks lost their seventh straight game here today when they were defeated by Brooklyn in a 12-inning game, 5 to 4, before the largest crowd of the season. Brooklyn won in the twelfth inning on successive singles by Daubert, Stengel and Wheat. Fred Merkle of the New York team won an automobile in the eighth inning when his two-base hit struck a sign on the left-field fence, the advertisement having offered a car to the first player who hit the sign with a fly ball. The sign has been up since the opening of last season. Score:

To Hold Summer Bouts.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 29.—Minneapolis boxing enthusiasts may have the opportunity to witness fight bouts throughout the coming summer, if an experiment of officials of the Minneapolis Boxing Club proves successful. It is planned to stage a fight, May 12, and if the turnout of fans warrants it, boxing matches will be held here the year round instead of only during the winter season, as at present.

Public School League Champions Defeat Ashland 4-3, but Game May Be Protested

Tieing Run Not Allowed by Umpire James Royal

Pitcher Fox of the Ames School Nine Twirls No-Hit Contest in Beating Bryan Hill.

While the Benton School team, present holder of the Post-Dispatch trophy and the Public School League championship, won from Ashland, yesterday morning, 4 to 3, in the second round contests, there is a chance that the game will have to be played over. The Ashland officials have a technicality on which they may base a protest after a talk with Umpire James Royal.

In one of the later innings, Ashland had a runner on third with two out. A play was made to catch the base runner at the plate, but the ball bounded away from the catcher. The run scored, but here Umpire Royal stepped in, also a spectator.

A policeman standing on the sidelines picked up the ball and threw it back to the infield. Then the umpire ruled that the runner should go back to third base. This one marker was the margin of the Ashland defeat. Ashland officials said yesterday that no protest would be made until the matter had been talked over with Umpire Royal.

Run May Not Count.

It hardly seems probable that the umpire based his ruling on the blocked ball rule, as an attempt was being made to get the man at the plate. If such was the case, though, and he called "Time," his verdict was O K according to Section 3 of Rule 37, which reads as follows:

If a person not engaged in the game should retain possession of a blocked ball, or throw it or kick it beyond the reach of the fielders, the umpire shall call "Time" and require each base runner to stop at the base last touched by him until the ball be returned to the pitcher in his position and the umpire shall have called "Play."

Fox Pitches No-Hit Game.

One of the features of yesterday's battles was the pitching of Fox for the Ames team. He beat Bryan Hill, 5—2, and did not allow his opponents a hit. It was the second no-hit contest turned in this season, Kelly of Crow last week setting Jackson down without a bingle. Errors behind him gave the Divoll team its two markers. Fox is a right-hander and expects to twirl his team to the pennant in Group F and later to the championship of the league.

While he turned in a clash without allowing his rivals a single bingle, Fox does not figure he did it all himself. Speaking of the incident in the Post-Dispatch office he said:

"The boys behind me helped me a lot. They did some great fielding and without their assistance I would have been unable to get by with it."

Gallagher a Real Hitter.

This J. Gallagher, who pitches for the Harrison team is a batter as well as a pitcher. In fact its hard to tell at which end of the national pastime he excels. For instance in the two games played by his club this year he has made eight hits in nine trips to the plate, while he has held his opponents to three swats.

Last week he allowed his rivals only two hits, while he made four out of five, one of them a homer. Yesterday he beat Webster, 10-4, allowing only one hit, while his contribution was four in as many times up. He has 36 strikeouts for the two clashes. Considerable swatting and hurling.

If Crow lands the division title in Group E, Pitcher Kelly can be thanked. Last week he beat Jackson without a hit and 17 strikeouts. Yesterday he beat Divoll, 5-2, with five bingles and 19 strikeouts. Pretty fair, five bingles and 36 strikeouts in 18 innings.

When Emerson beat Clark yesterday, 12-11, it was the first time in four seasons they were able to turn the trick. Last season Clark beat Emerson out of the Group D title.

After they had gotten off to a very bad start, the principal of the Irving School volunteered to buy new suits for the tossers if they won. This gave them new life and they went out and trounced Blair, 16-9. So the principal is out the price of new uniforms. Linhardt and Roettner knocked home runs and received a box of candy, as one of the teachers had put up this prize for the circuit clouts.

NAVY CREW IS VICTOR OVER PENN VARSITY

ANNAPOLIS, Minn., April 29.—In one of the most exciting acquatic contests here in years Navy's first eight-oared shell crew today defeated University of Pennsylvania's varsity eight by two lengths over a mile and 5-16 course on the Severn River. Navy's time was 7m 10s; Pennsylvania's, 7m 19s. Ideal weather conditions prevailed. The midshipmen's stroke was slower, but more powerful than the Quaker's, and Vytlacil, who set the winning pace displayed excellent judgment. Before the quarter-mile point was reached Navy had forged to the front, and at the half was leading by nearly a length. The lead was increased in the final spurt.

Navy's supporters are higly elated tonight at the victory over a crew that defeated Yale last Saturday and much credit is given to Coach Richard Glendon.

Pennsylvania won the other two events of the afternoon.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Seven Municipal Leagues to Play Contests Today

Interstate Opens Its Season Today With Four Games

Circuit Wound Up 1915 Campaign With Only Six Clubs, but Now Has Two More.

The Interstate League, the only local semi-professional circuit, that has survived following the great interest taken hold on the local ball tossers by the Municipal Baseball Association will open its season tomorrow with four games, two of them here, one in East St. Louis and the other in Belleville. The circuit this season is opening with eight clubs, while in 1915 it closed with only six.

Opening day celebrations will be on tap at all the parks. At East St. Louis and Belleville the Mayors of these cities will pitch the first ball.

The Alpen Braus, last year's champions are scheduled to open the season with the Ben Millers at Brock's Park, while at C. B. C. the Wabadas and Brockmeyers will fight it out for leading honors. Brother Lawrence of C. B. C. will pitch the first ball to start the Wabada-Brockmeyer battle.

At East St. Louis, Dick Slack's Giants are down to fight it out with the Manewals. The Southerns, who for the past few seasons have been playing independent ball with great success go to Belleville to open the campaign with the Hustlers.

Catholic School Baseball League Plays 14 Games

The Catholic Boys' League, made up of teams from eight parochial schools and two boys' clubs, opened its season during the past week, playing four rounds of games. The season was scheduled to commence a week earlier, but owing to the inclement weather the contests were postponed until last week.

Brother Henry of Rock Church is president of the circuit, while an executive committee composed of a representative from each team, is in charge of the battles. The schedule calls for 18 games. An attempt will be made to pit the winner of the pennant against the Public School League champion.

Results of the games played to date:

Cote Brilliant 5, Rock Church 4.

COBB'S 2-BAGGER WINS FOR TIGERS, 5-4, IN 11 ROUNDS

Incidentally Ty's Bat Also Puts Hugh Jennings' Men in First Place.

DETROIT, April 29.—Cobb's double in the eleventh inning after Vitt had singled and had advanced to second on Kavanagh's sacrifice gave Detroit a thrilling 5 to 4 victory over Cleveland here today. The Tigers, two runs behind when they came to bat in the ninth, staged a successful batting rally. Singles by Young, Crawford and Cobb tied the score. The game sparkled with fine fielding. Graney twice cut off runners at third by splendid throws. Score:

LOS ANGELES, April 19.

FREDERICK W. KELLEY, international champion high hurdler, today broke the world's record for the 220 low hurdles on a curved track, making it in 24 2-5 seconds in a sanctioned exhibition race. The previous record was 24 4-5 seconds, established in 1908, and equaled last year by Kelley.

TRIPLE BY PIPP WINS FOR YANKEES, 4 TO 2

PHILADELPHIA, April 29.—New York defeated Philadelphia in 10 innings here today, 4 to 2. The home team scored its runs off Fisher in the fourth inning by bunching three hits with two errors and led until the ninth, when, with two out and Peckinpaugh on second as the result of a single and a stolen base, Hartzell, who batted for Fisher, singled, sending in Peckinpaugh and tieing the score. New York then won on an error by Witt, Pipp's triple and Peckinpaugh's single. Score:

WRAY'S COLUMN

More of War's Ravages.

WAR'S grim hand reached across the Atlantic ocean and snatched from among us one Firman Cassignol, the veteran French billiardist who recently died in New York, superficially as the "result of an operation."

In reality, according to a member of the company which controls practically all of the cueists of this country, Cassignol died of a broken heart. When he went on the operating table there was neither desire to live nor the vitality left to resist—a condition brought about by disasters suffered through the great European struggle. As told to the writer, Cassignol's sad case was as follows:

When the war started his family consisted of his wife, two sons and a daughter, the latter being engaged.

In the battle of the Marne his oldest son was killed.

In the subsequent fighting his second son was terribly mangled, and if he survives will be utterly helpless.

His wife died of grief at her losses.

Then, to cap the climax, his daughter's fiance was killed and she was prostrated.

Grief Killed Desire to Live.

WITH nothing left in France to live for, the veteran cueist brought his daughter to America to try and forget his troubles in his tour with Cochran and in his challenge of Hoppe. Considering what must have been his mental state, his performance during the tour was truly astonishing, he averaging over 25 for the entire trip—a "big league" performance.

In the minds of his friends in this country there is said to be little doubt that lack of a desire to live contributed to the failure of the operation which he underwent.

Fulton Being Vindicated?

FRED FULTON'S defeat of Al Reich, Friday, seems to be rather a vindication of the Minnesota fighter, if the battle is acepted at its face value. Reich is a clever boxer and was considered as having all the essentials of a world-beater—except heart.

However, there are some suspicious circumstances about the career of Fulton, since he came into public notoriety as a prospective opponent of Jess Willard.

One of these was his easy knockout of rugged Jim Flynn.

Another was the failure of Reich to extend himself to the limit of his ability.

Still another is the fact that the hand of the "syndicate" is seen in both matches.

It is not beyond possibility that Fulton is having a reputation built up for him, in order to make him an acceptable sacrifice on the altar of big Jess Willard next winter.

Such tactics are not new in the history of the boxing game.

That Early Dope.

AT present the Federal Leaguers—men who were developed there, not those who went to outlaw berths from the major league—are not creating any furore, in the hitting line since they came up. Flack and Kauff are the only .300 hitters, and the opposing hurlers have yet to get next to their weaknesses.

But Not for St. Louis.

SIOUX CITY'S municipal tennis courts will be constructed of asphaltum, as are many of the courts on the Pacific Coast, where the greatest tennis stars of the country were developed.

The advantages of the asphalt court lie in the ease with which they can be kept in shape, the low cost of maintenance and the fact that they can be used a short time after a rainfall. The court always has the same action, with the respect to the rebound of the ball, whether the weather conditions change or not.

Imagine asphaltum courts in St. Louis, when the temperature in the open reaches 110 degrees or more? Blistered feet and oven-like radiation of heat would be the almost certain results. In California, which owns a regular climate, it's different.

According to Philadelphia writers, George Paskert, the outfielder, is a "much-improved player." Wonder why George waited until he was 35 to pick out a time for developing his game? Paskert was always pretty near the top notch, if we recall his playing correctly.

Our Rowing Problem.

WHILE St. Louis is facing another year without a rowing regatta in local waters, owing to inability of the Southwestern Rowing Association to finance its annual event, Duluth, Minn., is making preparations not only to handle the National Rowing carnival next July, but to pay half the expenses of many of the crews that will compete there.

A news item in an Eastern newspaper states:

> There is general appreciation of the fact that great sacrifices must be made by Eastern oarsmen who row there, as it means a loss of 10 days, at least, from their vocations, and most young men starting out in life have little cash to spare for athletic purposes.
> Transportation will be paid to Chicago and return from this and other Eastern cities by the Duluth club, which will help considerably toward reducing expense accounts.

QUAKER

Note Carefully How These Tires Are Built Up

Low Mileage Cost
Versus High "Gas" Price

You can equalize the high price of "gas" by reducing the mileage cost of your tires. You cannot bring down the price of gasoline, but you can use QUAKER TIRES.

5000 MILES

Because we are so confident of the result of comparison in actual service, we much prefer that you put a single QUAKER on your car and try it out against one, two or three different makes on the other three wheels. After this conclusive test there will be no need to argue the merits of Tempered Rubber.

When car owners, everywhere, report mileage records of 10,000 miles or more, and say: "Quaker Tires ride easier than other makes," you ought, at least, talk matters over with the nearest Quaker Dealer.

MAIN AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Section 5,

Pages 2, 3, 4 and 5.

ADVISED OF ADVANCE IN PRICE OF CASE "40"

Announcement is made by Mr. Ruhl, general manager of Stephens-Ruhl-Adams & Co., local distributers of Case automobiles, that, owing to the rapid increase in the price of metals, it has become necessary to advance the price of the Case "40" to $1190, beginning May 1. The former price was $1090.

Stephens-Ruhl-Adams & Co. anticipated a marked shortage of automobiles some time ago and placed orders for a number of cars, which are now on hand, and until this supply is exhausted, they will be able to make immediate delivery. That this was a wise step is demonstrated by the fact that the factory has now practically discontinued shipments for some time to come.

SOLVED GAS FEED PROBLEM

"Until our vacuum system was perfected," says an official of the Stewart-Warner Corporation, "it was practically impossible for the manufacturers to turn out those low, comfortable, stream line bodies which are so popular today. That was because so many of them were using the gravity system for getting the gasoline to the carburetor and, of course, that meant that the gasoline tank had to be mounted quite high in the front of the car, generally under the front seat. The tank took up considerable room and as a result the bodies were high, often uncomfortable, impractical and unsightly.

"The only remedy for the appearance of the car was to attach the gasoline tank to the rear of the machine, but when it was located there the carburetor was often higher than the tank, when the car was on an incline, and naturally there was no gravity to carry the fluid to its destination."

M'FARLAN PRICE UP

C. H. Dolfuss Jr., local representative of the McFarlan car, is advised by W. B. Adams, chief engineer of the McFarlan Motor Co. of Connorsville, Ind., that the company has largely increased its capitalization and will at once enlarge its plant to provide for an increase in the output, which for the coming season will be 1500 cars.

Announcement is also made that because of the great advance in the cost of all raw materials, the price of the McFarlan car after May 1 will be advanced to $3250.

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

Stevens-Ruehl-Adams & Co., representatives of the Case car in St. Louis, territory, have added V. S. Perkins to their sales force.

The Consolidated Car Co., of Detroit, makers of the Abbott-Detroit, have just appointed distributors in Cleveland, Ohio; Brooklyn, N. Y.; New York City; Minneapolis, Minn., and Jacksonville, Florida.

A second order for Packard light service motor trucks for the United States army in Mexico has just been filled by the Packard Motor Car Co. of Detroit. Uncle Sam now has 56 in use there.

A. E. Barker, district representative at Cleveland, Ohio, for Dodge Brothers, has been made supervisor of districts.

The Kardell Motor Car Co. has opened a storage battery service station at 4154 Olive street with G. M. Rizer, formerly with the Exide Co., in charge.

The factory of the Moon Motor Car Co. has been increased one-third in the last two months.

The Ahlberg Bearing Co. has opened branches in San Francisco and Portland, Oregon, according to advices to manager Burkholder of the St. Louis branch.

Hugh Chalmers, president of the Chalmers Motor Car Co., announces that his company will spend a million dollars next year advertising the Chalmers line.

J. H. Ellis, former service manager for the Dodge Co., and Inglish Horckitz. former Giant tire representative in Akron, are handling the retail sales of American heavy car type tire with offices at 207 Pierce Building.

J. F. Schneider has opened the Auto Battery and Supply Co. at 3912 Washington avenue to distribute, among other lines, the Fox pneumatic shock absorber.

Ollie Hupt, city agent for Ford cars, has removed to larger quarters at 4125-27 Olive street.

Frank E. Stevens of the Stevens Motor Car Co., local distributers of Lexington Cars, announces the sale of the Lexington "Minute Man" Six to Fred Nolting, Nolting, Ill.; F. C. Garrett, Columbia, Mo.; Dodson Ridgeway, 713 Tuxedo boulevard; C. W. Timberlake, Jefferson City, Mo.; George Cutter, 6140 Kingsbury boulevard.

TROUBLE-PROOF TIRE.

This year, more than ever before, tire manufacturers are offering the car owner tires that are claimed to be puncture proof, but it was left to C. B. Woodworth, president of the Leather Tire Goods Co., Niagara Falls, to bring out a tire absolutely puncture proof under normal driving conditions.

Omitting tiresome details of construction, the material used is of the highest quality rubber and sea island cotton, with an inner layer of chrome leather, which under pressure resists the tack, nail and glass that are the terror of the car owner or driver.

This layer of chrome leather does not reduce the resiliency nor in any way lessen the riding comfort of a standard made pneumatic tire. J. B. Sickles Saddlery Co. are distributers for Missouri and Southern Illinois.

SICKLES ACCESSORY LINE

The J. B. Sickles Saddlery Co., Twenty-first and Washington avenue, has installed a complete automobile accessory department in charge of R. L. Hunt. The company has been appointed distributer for Missouri and Illinois for McGraw tires and Woodward puncture-proof tires.

A special line of seat covers for all makes of cars will be carried in stock or made to order. A high-grade, imported limotex fabric as well as the best domestics, of a character to insure easy cleaning with brush and water or gasoline, will be used.

RACERS TO CONTEST IN PIKE'S PEAK CLIMB

President Eugene A. Sunderlin of the Pike's Peak Auto Highway, and Spencer Penrose, brother of Senator Penrose, have appointed Worth Colwell to manage the First Annual Pike's Peak automobile and motor cycle hill-climbing contest, Aug. 10, 11 and 12, jointly with the Pike's Peak Auto Highway officials. Colwell will leave New York for Colorado Springs about the middle of July, and, in the meantime, has assurances of an entry list of considerable class, including the fastest cars and best-known drivers in the world. The course for this sensational event is 13 miles from Cascade to the summit of the mountain, reaching an altitude of 14,109 feet.

The Car of Spectacular Performance
Jeffery Six

THE great ideal of the Jeffery engineers—who introduced the high-speed, long-stroke, high-efficiency motor to America—has always been to give maximum power at the speeds which are used most in actual service.

The Jeffery Six is their realized ideal of power It gives you the power you need on crowded streets in heavy traffic—it gives you the power you want on rough country roads and in a thousand unforeseen conditions. From 3 miles an hour or less on high—up to 60 ~~miles or~~ more—she is smooth, silent sure

Step on the accelerator and you'll have the power sensation you never even thought of before. She starts like a sprinter at the crack of the gun And silent! At forty miles an hour she sings along as sweetly as if she were just getting ready to make twenty Then open the throttle and you'll learn for the first time what the word MOVE really means

The price is $1450—and for every dollar of it you get more power at the speed you use—more riding-comfort and driving-comfort—than you ever thought possible

And act NOW This is the car that sells so rapidly that the Thomas B Jeffery Company was long ago compelled to double its planned output of it We have a number on hand—but we can't increase our allotment because the factory cannot increase its output

The "Gold Standard"

$1250

We Will Keep "Open House" All This First May Week

YOU ARE INVITED—Everybody is invited.

REO FOLK EVERYWHERE—all Reo distributors—will keep "open house" during this first week in May.

THIS IS TO CELEBRATE the biggest season's business Reo has ever enjoyed, and the year of most wonderful satisfaction enjoyed by Reo users.

YOU KNOW, MAY IS THE MONTH when all hearts, young and old, lightly turn to thoughts of—motoring. It is natural—inevitable.

AND YOU KNOW from past experience, that May is the month of biggest demand—and that those who fail to get their cars in that month may have to wait till late in summer.

THEN TOO, MILADY without her new car for May feels much as she would wearing her old bonnet in the Easter parade—it simply isn't to be considered.

SO IT IS FITTING that we Reo Folk observe this first week in May by "dolling up" the place, inviting our friends and keeping "open house" for the benefit of those who will want to see the new Reo models.

WE'LL MAKE IT A FESTIVE WEEK—give you a cordial welcome, spend all the time with you talking Reo and showing you the fine points of these cars.

REO IS THE "GOLD STANDARD" of automobile values—so recognized throughout the world.

THERE ARE MANY REASONS why Reo is recognized as the Gold Standard of automobile values—we'll show you.

COME IN, SEE US: Let's talk it over, compare point for point, measure 'em up. See for yourself.

IF YOU HAVE NEVER owned or driven a Reo you cannot understand why Reo users are so enthusiastic.

IT'S VITALLY IMPORTANT—this matter of selecting a new automobile. You could well afford to spend a week on it. Yet an hour or two will suffice.

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF to become thoroughly informed as to the relative merits and the relative values of the cars offered you.

IT MEANS SO MUCH—several seasons of pleasurable motoring, or weeks and months of disappointment and chargin. All depending on whether you choose right or wrong.

IF IT'S A SIX—a seven-passenger car—you have set your heart on, you can't be too careful this year. This year more than ever before.

FOR THIS YEAR you've heard new and wonderful claims made for some Sixes—new words in the advertising vocabulary—new feats in engine building.

IF—IF—THEY MAKE GOOD—all well and fine. But—if—not—what then?

SO IT BEHOOVES YOU to look well before you leap. Safety First.

THERE'S ONE SIX—and we know of only one—that you can tie to with absolute certainty that it will live up to reputation—measure up to your every requirement. One Six whose tremendous demand this year is based on tremendous performance in the past.

THERE'S ONE SIX that did not need to be re-designed this year—only refined in minor details—to retain its supremacy.

THERE'S ONE SIX that has led all others in popular favor and yet for which no sky splitting adjectives were necessary to describe its virtues.

THERE'S ONE SIX that has outlived almost as many other Sixes as Reo the Fifth has outlived other four-cylinder cars.

AND THERE'S ONE SIX that is known wherever motor cars are known as "The Gold Standard" of Sixes—because of its tried and proven quality.

THE FAME OF THAT SIX rests not on artificial exploitation nor verbal pyrotechnics, but on true worth as proved by performance in hands of owners.

WE'LL SHOW YOU THAT SIX—though the demand is such that every Reo is snapped up the minute it leaves the factory; we'll keep a Reo Six on the floor all the coming week to show you—that you may study and see wherein lies the quality that has gained for this Reo product the title "The Gold Standard."

WE'LL SHOW YOU that, because of the class of men who make them; the experience that goes into the designing and the manufacturing; the quality of materials and finish; Reos are 24-karat pure—"The Gold Standard" of automobile values.

IF YOU'D BE SURE that when you've drawn your check you have secured the Six that is, beyond question, the greatest Six obtainable at any price, you have it in this Reo Six.

WE DON'T DESIRE to discount anything anyone might choose to say about their product—goodness knows the man who has Reos to sell needs be envious of no other man—but we do say "this is a good year to be careful" what new Six you select. Some of them are too new. And too good to be true!

IN SELECTING A REO you can be sure—absolutely sure—that you have a car in which there is no experimental, no untried, no unproved factor. If its a Reo, it is the "Gold Standard."

SO MAKE IT A POINT to come in and say "Howdy" and look the Reos over.

WE WON'T IMPORTUNE you to buy—that isn't our way. We'll answer any questions you may choose to ask, courteously and gladly. And we'll show you the proofs of everything we say.

FURTHER THAN THIS it's up to you. We'll deem it only a friendly call—unless you desire to make it a business one.

BUT WE REPEAT: If you'd have a Reo and have your Reo in May, the order must be in our hands at once. Demand is tremendous—hopelessly in excess of the possible supply. So if you've delayed till now, don't delay further.

A WORD TO REO OWNERS: From the above you might infer that you are not invited. On the contrary you have a standing, and a perpetual, invitation.

AND THIS WEEK we are particularly desirous of seeing all Reo owners—nothing will so tend to stimulate Reo enthusiasm among prospective buyers as a few smiling Reo owners mingling in the crowds.

YOU KNOW—and they know you know—so they'll want to ask you.

YOU OWE IT TO REO to come in during the week and tell your friends about your Reo—performance and low upkeep cost.

SO YOU'RE INVITED—doubly.

OPEN TILL 9 P. M.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"A little while ago, prices on the Stock Exchange were breaking because of the imagined possibility that the war would soon be ended, and with it American prosperity. Later, the market broke again, on the possibility that the United States might itself be involved in a state of war with one of the European Powers. After each of these Stock Exchange demonstrations came a vigorous recovery, based, perhaps, less on belief that the predicted events would not come to pass than on a growing conviction of the strength of our own economic position, independently of these other considerations.

"On neither of these occasions were there visible signs of alarm by the investing public. If their buying slackened, they at least did not begin to sell in quantity. This was all the more striking from the fact that some of the signs of boundless prosperity, which gave so extraordinary an aspect to the last half of 1915, did not continue to contribute to the growth of financial enthusiasm.

"It had become evident that the wheat crop of 1916 would be much smaller than the two preceding war harvests. The spectacular flow of gold from Europe to the United States ceased. Surplus reserves of the New York banks no longer broke all records of the market's history. There remained the unprecedented export trade; the railway earnings, still wholly unmatched for any corresponding month; the 'high record' monthly bank clearings, showing the largest actual volume of business ever witnessed in this country, and the earnings of the steel trade 30 per cent beyond the highest figures reached in the years before the war. Yet these factors were effect as much as cause, and the question became rather general, whether we should not presently see a movement of reaction in these directions also.

The Trade Expansion.

"That the recent extraordinary achievements in financial and industrial record breaking could go on indefinitely no one has seriously imagined. It was reasonably sure that $60,000,000 net earnings for a Steel Corporation quarter and $215,000,000 monthly export surpluses in the country's foreign trade would reach and pass their maximum before many months, as it was that annual gold imports of $451,000,000 and autumn surplus bank reserves of $224,000,000 could not continue. The distinctly more important question when considering either the inevitable change in such directions, or the possibility of grave events in international politics, has all along been the question, whether the country as a whole was or was not, in its own financial undertakings, assuming the unprecedented conditions to be permanent.

"Had this actually been the trend of American finance and business during the 12 months past, the ground ahead of us would be full of pitfalls. If the maximum trade and profits of that period had been capitalized, so to speak, on the financial markets (as they were in 1901) then any change in prevalent conditions would bring a dangerous situation to the whole financial situation. But all observant people are aware that this is exactly what has not happened.

"With all the immense and fully justified enthusiasm over the great economic advantages which circumstances had thrown into the lap of the United States, our people have at no time lost consideration of the abnormal and temporary character of at least a part of them.

The Expansion in 1901.

"At no time has the illusion of 1901, that old principle of finance and economic experience were no longer applicable to the United States, held any control over the American financial mind. On the contrary, the beginning in 1914, with a very general belief that the war could bring nothing but financial misfortune to this country, the equally prevalent attitude, when returning prosperity had surpassed the wildest expectations, was one of warning at the uncertainties of an absolutely unknown future, both during and after the European war.

"What has been perhaps the most noteworthy fact of all, is the presence of this caution and conservatism in the very industries which might most readily have been pardoned for losing their heads in the shower of sudden profits. As a matter of fact, it is in the steel and metals trades—perhaps the largest direct industrial beneficiaries of the war—that one has encountered all along the most serious preaching of preparation for whatever of changed conditions the future might have in hand.

"These are not the underlying influences which create a precarious and vulnerable financial situation. They have an even interesting bearing on the immediate and longer future, when it is also recognized that the spirit of caution arises in no respect from doubt or misgiving as to the soundness of the country's real position. They are not, least of all on the Stock Exchange, the reflection both of the ruling conservatism and of the basic confidence which prevail."

LONDON REVIEW

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 29.—It is believed in financial circles that Berlin will again endeavor to procrastinate with Washington; basing those tactics on the belief that the United States desires peace. Hence, in such procrastination is recognized the danger of the situation. Nevertheless good "city" judgment is that Germany will climb down: because, if you were to sever relations with Berlin, your power to assist in tightening the financial blockade and shortening the war would be enormous.

All experienced people recognize that the Irish revolt and the withdrawal of the military service bill have dealt a blow to the Government's prestige. Yet neither of them indicates a spirit of disaffection in the nation as a whole. Whatever the precise course which the domestic crisis will take, every sign indicates stronger prosecution of the war, determination and better organization.

The Labor Question.

Only common sense is necessary, in the business community's view, to settle the real problem of compulsory service. The simple fact of our enormous financial responsibilities necessarily means limitation of army recruiting at some point; but it also increases the necessity for organization adequate for preventing wastage of labor.

The entire difficulty of the present situation lies in the fact that, while the nation is intent on war and disregards party politics, the politicians themselves seem to be unable to shake off party spirit. The national voice, however, is becoming stronger and more compelling. France is now steadily releasing gold; some of it is going to neutral European countries in payment of the country's huge imports.

French exchange on London, now 28 francs 30 centimes to the pound, is likely to recede to at least 27½ francs, that being the level at which the recent French loan was issued here.

The results of our own management of the foreign exchanges have been excellent from the financial standpoint; but we still lack sufficient control over the imports themselves.

Gold Supplies Are Large.

Gold supplies in our market are excellent, when one considers the great excess of imports over exports. But all these resources will be required for the autumnal demands.

The cautious and almost pessimistic views expressed by people like J. J. Hill and other of your leading bankers, inspires confidence here in your outlook, because it indicates that the financial community is not losing its head through war prosperity.

The continued expansion in our currency notes is largely a natural reflection of the inflation of banking deposits; causing bankers to desire to maintain proportionate holdings in available currency.

The increase in dividends of German banks over the previous year attracts the comment in the city that, while the larger dividends were earned, their payment leaves inadequate provision for contingencies.

COTTON TRADING IS QUIET WITH VALUES STEADY

Week's Market Is Without Feature; Spot Prices Are Firm.

Cotton futures were quiet last week. Such an evenness in prices makes traders expect something turn up over night. Going back to March 1, on which date the price of future contracts was the lowest for the past two months. July contracts in New York went as low as 11.52c, but recovered within a day or two to a level some 30 points higher after which the extreme fluctuations in price were from 11.80c to 12.25c.

In April the low was 11.86c and the high 12.14c for July in New York. During the last week the low was 11.90c and the high 12.14c for July. At the close of yesterday the final price for July were 12.12c.

Spot markets also are quiet. Quotations for middling cotton in New Orleans have stood at 11.88c for a month or more. Apparently the daily changes usually affecting prices are not considered new, or else the price now existing, around 12.00c for July in New York, is deemed a fixed value until something extraordinary in the way of new crop developments or decidedly new political factors arise.

The Market Position.

As the market now stands, there seems to be a fairly stable balance between demand and supply. The manufacturers are selling their goods at a price far above a parity with the price of spot cotton, but are plentifully supplied, carrying large stocks in their own warehouses, and see ever before them a large stock in the hands of producers and the middle men, thus they are in a position not to run the price of cotton up on themselves. On the other hand, the holders of cotton have steadily and consistently sold, all during the season, at remunerative prices, and now, with the advantage of cheap and easy money, seem not to be shaken from their stand for 12c cotton.

Exports last week were larger, the total for the week being 140,327 bales; for the season 4,427,865. With 13 weeks to go, there seems the likelihood of exports of 5,750,000 bales.

No change may be noted in the ocean shipping situation. Europe carries small stocks and must have cotton as she can get it. In Liverpool the sales of the week and the forwardings were small, more because of holidays than for any other reason. The sales were 34,000 bales, of which 29,000 were American, and the forwardings 69,000, of which 58,000 were American. Stocks increased from last week, the total being 903,000 bales, of which 614,000 were American. Stocks afloat are 152,000 bales, of which 125,000 were American.

Prices in Liverpool advanced during the week, middling uplands being quoted Saturday at 7.95d, compared with 7.82d Thursday, April 20, the last market day of the previous week. May-June closed at 7.70d, an advance of 7 English points, while December-January gained 3 points, and March-April, 1917, advanced but 2 points. The spot market yesterday was quoted "idle," but spot prices and the near future contracts were firm.

The Spot Markets.

Quotations in the various spot markets in this country continue steady. Galveston quotes the market steady, with middling at 12.35c; New Orleans, steady, middling at 11.88c; Mobile, steady, 11.81c; Savannah steady, 12.30c; Augusta steady, 11.75c; 11 5-8c; Norfolk, steady, 11.88c; Wilmington, steady, 11½c; Houston, steady, 12.30; Augusta, steady, 11.75c; Little Rock, steady, 12.31c; Memphis, steady, 12c; St. Louis, steady, 12c.

Crop estimates all show a slight increase in acreage. The weather for the week ending April 26, 1916, is given by the weather bureau as follows: "Planting of cotton is nearly completed in the southern part of the region, and is progressing satisfactorily in the central and northern districts. The crop is coming up well and there is an excellent stand generally reported. Chopping has begun in Georgia. Rain is needed in some eastern states for cotton."

Since the report was issued the weather has been clear over the South; in one or two localities temperatures are reported as too low.

Granite Bi-Metallic Mining stock continued its advance on the local Stock Exchange yesterday, selling up to 80c, compared with 72½ cents yesterday. The issue was in demand from several brokers, who had orders owing to record prices in the silver market. Independent Brewery first preferred also was strong and higher and advanced over 1 point on trades at $19.25 to $20.12½. The 6s of the company also showed a sharp gain at $57.50 to $59.50.

National Bank of Commerce was steady on sales at $107.50 and $108, and Mercantile Trust was steady at $342. Boatmen's Bank was fractionally easier at $127.25. United Railways issues were irregular on the sales and quotations recorded.

PRICE RANGE IN CATTLE MARKET SHARPLY LOWER

Steers Lose 15c to 25c on the Week; Hogs Are About Steady.

Hogs	46,454	54,743	39,981

Heavy runs distributed around the six principal western cattle markets forced a decline in local prices last week. St. Louis probably suffered the least decline. The market here ruled about steady until the mid-week session when a generous offering arrived. Buyers became backward in their dealings and demanded discounts before purchasing. The consequence was a decline of 15c to 25c generally on all classes of steers. The top for the week was $9.50, with a range of $8.00 to $8.75 catching the bulk of the offerings.

Yearlings were hit hardest. Buyers demanded concessions all week and the close was 35c to 50c lower on these classes. The best was a drove of mixed steers and heifers at $9.50. Not many straight heifers were offered. The rank and file of them sold in a radius of $7.50 to $8.50. There was slow movement and sellers encountered some trouble getting satisfactory outlets. Cows were nearly steady. There was a good inquiry for the choice kinds. The week's top was $8.25, with the bulk of them going from $6.00 to $7.50. Canners and cutters were steady to 10c lower. The major portion of the canner cows sold from $4.50 to $4.75. There was good clearance each session of all cows. Bulls were in good, strong call. The supply was light and buyers were after them. The best bulls sold up to $8.00, with $6.00 to $7.00 getting the bulk. The butcher market was fairly good and the only exception was the yearling grades. Buyers had moderate receipts to contend with and sellers had no trouble cleaning them up early.

Southern Receipts Light.

Southern receipts of cattle were very light. There were hardly enough cattle on sale to give buyers a good start. The fact is that the week's total supply could have been handled in a single day. Texas steers made up the main portion of the receipts. The market was 25c lower on the steers and 50c under Monday's trade. The best fed steers sold for $8.40, with the bulk going from $7.45 to $8.25. Some yearling fed Texas steers sold for $7.25, with a couple of loads of heifers at $7.60.

In sympathy with the native steers buyers insisted that they made reductions here, and at times sellers had a little trouble, but a good clearance was effected at the close of each session. Common mixed classes sold fully steady, with the good quality kinds around 10c to 15c lower. A string of Arkansas steers at $6.60 were about the only steers on sale in this division. Canners went from $4.50@4.75, with heavy common yearlings in the same radius. Cutters sold for $5 mostly. These common classes were wanted and there was a thorough clearance.

With but a moderate supply of hogs on sale each day there was no material change to the trade during the entire week. The top of the market ranged between $9.90 and $10, while the bulk of the hogs sold at $9.65@9.90. All buyers were right active in their operations most days and the packers paid clear up to the top of the market on several days.

The good grade hogs with a little weight were the best sellers at all times, but still the strictly good ones that did not weigh as much as 200 lbs. found a good outlet and sold pretty close to the top of the market. Hogs with both quality and weight were pretty scarce all week and therefore those offered went readily at good prices.

Best offerings as a rule brought $9.85 and better, while the mixed and plain grades sold at $9.50@9.80, and the throwout rough packers, that is the old sows and stags, sold at $9.20@9.40. Best grade of lights under 125 pounds, sold at $9.35@9.75, fair offerings $8.65@9.25, best pigs under 125 lbs. at $8.25@8.85, and others from $7@8.

Sheep Receipts Are Small.

The supply of sheep was again small each day, and as a result prices were on a slightly higher basis towards the close of the week. Buyers fought all advances hard as they claimed that values were entirely too high. Most of the offerings were lambs from Colorado, but there was a sharp sprinkling of natives offered.

Quite a few spring lambs were received and the good ones sold at $12.00@16.00, while the poorer grades sold around $10.00. The best of the Colorado lambs that had not been sheared went at $11.25@11.55, while the medium kinds sold at $11.00@11.25. Clipped lambs sold at $8.85@$9.50.

The best of the wool mutton sheep sold at $8.50@8.75; fair grades around $8.25; clipped sheep that were good, $7.85@8.25; fair, $7.25@7.75 and the bucks with wool on at $7.25@7.50, and clipped, as a rule, around $6.50.

Horse runs fell off sharply, the supply being lightest of the year. Trading was quite satisfactory, but demand was beyond the available supply and in consequence some buyers were required to lay over with their orders for the coming week's market. The Southern affair was a shade stronger, but at that was not especially good. Good, big sound work types brought fully their worth and all Easterners found a good steady market. Horses formerly branded by foreign governments for artillery service have been selling in auction at a big advance and for that reason a very small proportion of arrivals are consigned to them. Few war horses came in and no noteworthy trading was done in that quarter.

Best grades of miners, as well as drafts and pack mules sold on a generally steady market all through the week. In fact, any good sound animals 14½ and up were all right to ship, but medium grades found a much lower market.

Higher prices in the local wheat market resulted yesterday from snow and rain in the Northwest, where already the spring crop acreage had been diminished to a notable extent by previous adverse conditions. Prices closed unsettled, but with gains of ½c to ¾c at $1.03½ for May and $1.12⅛ for July. Other leading staples, too, all showed an advance, corn ⅜ to ½c, and oats ¼c to ⅜c.

Reports from Manitoba and Saskatchewan, as well as from the Dakotas and Minnesota, indicated that the seeding of wheat was being seriously hampered anew over nearly the entire spring crop belt. Accordingly traders flocked to the buying side, and took additional courage from current gossip that the German note would be favorable to the conditions of the United States. Bullish sentiment was further increased by predictions that world shipments would be light.

The only important reaction in the market took place in the last hour, when for a short time considerable selling was done on account of a bearish estimate of the Kansas crop and because of the apparent absence of any important export business. Good support on the break rallied the wheat market in the final dealings. It was said houses with foreign connections were the leaders in the purchasing movement at the close.

Estimates that 1,500,000 bushels or more wheat would be delivered in Chicago Monday on May contracts, were received in general with no surprise.

Corn rose with wheat. Predictions of heavy Chicago deliveries Monday, perhaps 2,000,000 bushels, seemed to have no more effect on corn than on wheat. Oats were helped upward by assertions that consumption had been larger than expected and that the crop was late. The forecasts pointed Chicago deliveries of 1,000,000 bushels on May contracts Monday.

At the moment traders say the future movement of wheat prices is a "toss up." As an indication of sentiment a Post-Dispatch representative yesterday asked several Merchants' Exchange members for their views on the market. Peyton T. Carr expressed the opinion that values might back-and-fill for a while, but a sharp advance was in order later on; Ralph J. Pendleton took the opposite view and thought that while prices might hold steady for a short time, very much lower quotations would prevail throughout the summer; Ray Carter declared that any one of several factors might develop that would cause a runaway market on the upturn; William Lanyon said he expects the market to move up and down in a range of 3 to 5 cents for some time to come. A. C. Petri was a pronounced bull.

Those favoring the bull side of wheat expect higher prices because of the fact that the war in Europe still is on, and there are no indications that peace is in sight, which makes shipments of wheat from other countries than America unusually difficult; on the outlook for the new wheat crop, where a shortage of about 150,000,000 bushels is indicated in winter wheat, and in spring wheat territory weather has been such as to assure nowhere near the large acreage of last year, while the same holds good as to conditions in Canada.

While wheat conditions in Kansas and the Southwest are good, the bulls say that a sudden change to hot weather will cause the crop to go back, as already Hessian fly and green bug damage reports are being received, and growing weather will no doubt develop a decided crop scare, as every year wheat is bulled more or less on crop damage from insects.

While wheat supplies are excessive in all markets, these traders say that the loss in the new crop will make farmers hold the last of their supplies, and that a light movement of wheat may be expected even if a minor crop scare develops.

The bears expect a wide break for these reasons. Last year after May 3 wheat futures went to pieces, the May option in Chicago selling from $1.64 to $1.39 before the last day of the month, and then the decline extending throughout the summer, with minor rallies, until in the fall futures dropped below the dollar mark for a few days; that regardless of the outlook in Europe, the Turks may sue for peace and possibly the Dardanelles be opened for shipments of wheat from Russia, where two crops have been harvested with practically no exports, indicating unusually heavy reserves; that Australia and the Argentine both have unusually heavy surpluses of wheat, which sooner or later must be reckoned with as market factors; that the domestic visible supply of wheat is 20,000,000 bushels more than last year, while the world's surplus is over 150,000,000 bushels more, and that even granting a short domestic crop this year, the carry-over of last year's record harvest of 1,000,000,000 bushels will be sufficient, with supplies of new wheat, to cause a total of nearly the same as the record crop when the fall comes.

Last, but not least, the bears have the "calendar" to point to as a bear factor, for in only one year in the last 20 has wheat failed to decline late in May, even if the "crop-killers" had a good inning in the early days of the month.

LEASES ON LOCUST AND CHESTNUT BY AUTO CONCERNS

Transactions During Week Regarded by Realty Men as Conclusive Evidence That Those Thoroughfares Are to Become Virtually Exclusive to Automobile Traffic.

FUNSTENS BUY FUR DYEING SITE

Louise Apartments, Lindell and Vandeventer Avenues, Sold to Woman for $200,000 With 2000-Acre Farm as Part Payment—Circular Building Leased.

Leases under which automobile interests are to obtain possession of eligible corners on Chestnut and Locust streets were closed last week. One of these, signed by Eugene Christy for the Mercantile Trust Co., and by agents of the Republic Truck Co., was for the building at the southwest corner of Sixteenth and Chestnut streets. This is an attractive one-story structure with frontage of 130 feet on Chestnut street by a depth on Sixteenth street of 72 feet. It was recently erected by the Fredonia Realty Co. from plans drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw, who has designed several Locust street buildings for automobile interests.

Trucks manufactured by the Republic Truck Co., the factories of which are in Michigan will be displayed in this building, which will be finished in mahogany and tiling, with concrete flooring.

The lease was taken in the name of Louis Fischer, formerly general manager, but now consulting engineer, of the McKinley System. The lease, according to Bradshaw, foreshadows the growth of Chestnut street as an automobile center, and realty men express the view that Chestnut street ultimately will be reserved as practically an exclusive thoroughfare for automobile traffic.

Another lease closed last week was one under which the Fredonia Realty Co. will erect a two-story fireproof building for the Kardell Motor Co., agents for the Reo car, on the north side of Locust street, 55 feet east of Compton avenue. The building, which will have a terra cotta front, will be arranged with offices and storerooms on the first floor and with a shop on the second floor, reached by an electric elevator. Every modern appliance for the handling of cars will be installed. The building will be ready for occupancy Aug. 15. This lease also was negotiated by the Mercantile Trust Co. Plans and specifications were prepared by Preston J. Bradshaw, whose office will supervise construction.

The Window Display Advertising Co.—Edward A. Berg and G. W. Schwarzkopf—signed a lease with the Mercantile Trust Co. for the circular building at the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Locust streets. Berg, who was formerly connected with the Steinberg Co., and Schwarzkopf, said to be an artist in show window work, came here a short time ago from New York.

The front part of the room will be devoted exclusively to handsome show fixtures and display advertising, while the rear will be used for factory purposes and artists' rooms.

The lease was negotiated by George Streiff of the leasing department of the Mercantile Trust Co., on behalf of the Composite Realty Co., composed of clients of the banking establishment.

A notable purchase the past week was that by Funsten Bros. & Co., who thus acquired a site at the southwest corner of Second and Spruce streets for a building, in which will be installed a large dressing and dyeing plant for furs. The Giraldin Bros. Real Estate Co., in connection with Albert A. Ahern, vice president of the Funsten company, negotiated the sale of the site, which is 130 feet on Second street by 150 on Spruce street.

Funsten Bros. recently acquired a lease of a six-story building at Main and Olive streets, which is used as an auction show room. It is proposed to dress and dye annually 10,000 seals in the proposed plant.

The chief sale during the week in the West End was that of the Louise Apartments at the southwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue, to Mrs. Leona E. Rose, for $200,000, the transaction being credited to the Goldman Realty Co., and the A. R. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co.

The building is three stories high, and is divided into 13 apartments, from which is derived an annual rental of $13,000. As part payment, Mrs. Rose transferred the Rosedale farms of 2000 acres, located near Wrightsville, Ark., valued at $75,000.

The Benj. J. Altheimer Jr. Realty Co. negotiated for the Maul-Graham Improvement Co., sale of the 10-room dwelling, 3106-8 Lucas avenue, to Mrs. Maude M. Dow for $20,000. The building will be subdivided into flats and rented to negroes. This deal was a result of the passage of the segregation ordinance.

WRIT FOR TWO CHILDREN

In a habeas corpus action Circuit Judge McElhinney at Clayton yesterday directed the Sheriff to bring into court tomorrow the two children of Frederick J. Honnerkamp, Estelle, 3 years old, and Frederick, 1. A charge had been made that Joseph Knapp, a gardener, was holding the children against the wishes of their father.

The petition, which was drawn by G. W. Kinke of St. Louis, alleged that Knapp was holding the children because of a bill for board and lodging against their father which Honnerkamp had disputed.

DE TONTY ST. FLAT ATTRACTS BUYER BEFORE COMPLETED

Four-Family Structure Being Erected by Jacob E. Rubin Becomes Property of an Investor.

WOMAN BUYS DWELLING

Two South Side Lots Purchased by Parties as Sites for Apartment Houses.

The Borders Realty Co. has sold the four-family flat being completed at 4219-21 Detonty street by Jacob E. Rubin, to E. Blanche Mitchell as an investment.

Each suite in the building consists of four rooms, a sunroom and a large dressing closet. It has tile baths and porches and hardwood floors. The annual rental will be about $1380. The seller was represented by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Co.

The Borders Realty Co. also sold a six-room cottage at 4232 Peck street to Jacob Thuerwachter, for William and Kate Barbier.

A vacant lot with a 35-foot front on Queen's avenue has been sold by the same company to Joseph Gregory, who will improve it with a five-room brick bungalow.

The nine-room dwelling at 5861 De Giverville avenue has been purchased for a home by Mrs. E. Grace Aylin, who gave an eight-room house at 5965 Page boulevard in part payment. The John S. Blake Bro. Realty Co. represented the buyer and the Dyas Realty Co. the seller.

Two building sites for flats on the South Side have been sold by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co., in conjunction with August Gerling. John F. Schnitzer bought a lot fronting 40 feet on De Tonty street, just west of Thurman avenue. He will build a double flat. Nellie C. Morgan bought a 50-foot lot on the south side of Shaw avenue, just west of Thurman avenue. She plans to build a four-family flat.

HANDSOME HOMES STEADILY MULTIPLY IN WEBSTER PARK

Realty Agent Says Improvement and Growth in Beauty by Suburban Community Is Constant.

Charles A. Baker, a realty agent, reports that Lemoine Skinner of the Buxton & Skinner Stationery Co. has broken ground for a colonial residence on the east side of Orchard avenue, opposite Rosemont avenue.

Adjoining this lot on the north is a handsome residence just completed for Mrs. Lockey Chambers as a home.

At the southwest corner of Orchard and Rosemont avenues, half completed, is a cozy seven-room house, which will be the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Jones.

Across Orchard avenue is the attractive colonial residence of Walter K. Hecker, who recently purchased the vacant lot adjoining on the south, which gives him for lawn and landscape gardening a frontage of 200 feet.

Albert Petrasch, who purchased a lot fronting 129 feet on the west side of Bompart avenue, has completed an eight-room brick house and has just moved in.

Lot 11, in block M, was purchased last winter by C. A. Cloud, who expects to improve for a home.

Paul G. Chamberlain, who purchased a lot last autumn, expects to improve for a home.

Webster Park, Baker says, improves steadily each year and grows constantly in beauty.

THEATER MAY BE ERECTED AT KING'S HIGHWAY AND MARYLAND

Sale of Unrestricted Corner Has Been Placed in Hands of Oreon E. & R. G. Scott.

Oreon E. and R. G. Scott have been appointed agents for the sale of the remaining unrestricted corner lot, northeast corner of King's highway and Maryland avenue, and it is understood that they have under negotiation a proposition for the erection of a theater or moving picture playhouse, which, if consummated, will be one of the attractions of the West End. They say that they have very good prospects of concluding the deal at a very early date.

MARSHAL "ARRESTS" A PIG AND WILL ROAST IT TODAY

Troublesome Animal Taken to Jail and Then Butcher's Block When Owner Gives His Consent.

Marshal Ed Maguire of Wood River Friday "arrested" a 30-pound pig that had a propensity for rooting out of its own yard and getting away from its owner, George Y. Henry, a paving contractor.

The pig several times dug up the garden of A. K. Whitelaw, assistant superintendent of the Standard Oil refinery, and finally began attacking Whitelaw's chickens.

Whitelaw asked for the pig's "arrest." It was captured Friday and held several hours in the village jail. Henry said he would not object to the Marshal's having it, and by consent of both Henry and Whitelaw the pig was taken from the jail to the butcher's block and will grace the table of the Marshal for dinner today.

MAN BADLY HURT BY A TRAIN

George Bennett, 80 years old, of Chicago, suffered a fractured skull when struck by a northbound freight train of the C., P. & St. L. Railroad, and knocked over a 20-foot embankment, bedded with cinders, at the foot of Alton street, in Alton, at 8 o'clock last night.

Bennett was walking along the tracks. He was taken to the St. Joseph Hospital. The train did not stop

WIGGINS BUYS PORTLAND PLACE SITE FOR HOME

Construction of a $100,000 Residence to Begin as Soon as Plans Are Completed.

As a site for a home to cost $100,000, Charles Wiggins, a client of Franciscus & Kunz, has bought a lot, 100x200 feet, on the north side of Portland place, west of King's Highway.

The former owners were Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust. The price paid was not made public.

Construction of the residence will begin as soon as the plans are available.

The residence of George D. Barnard at 35 Portland place, has been purchased by John T. Milliken for $90,000. The sale was arranged by Franciscus & Kunz, as agent for the St. Louis Union Trust Co.

DOWLING COMPANY TO CLOSE OUT KATHMAR ACRES LOTS

More Than Half of Home Sites Already Sold, and 20 of Them Contain Bungalows.

As agent the John J. Dowling Real Estate Co. will offer for sale the few remaining lots in Kathmar Acres. The lots are commended particularly to those who desire to build homes on acre sites in a locality where there are excellent street car and railroad facilities.

Twenty bungalows already have been built in Kathmar Acres and more than half of the home sites have been sold. The ratification of the $3,000,000 good road bond issue in St. Louis County will assure excellent highways, and also is increasing general interest in acre sites for homes.

Kathmar Acres is located on the Florissant division of the United Railways. The Wabash Railroad Co. maintains a passenger station on the ground. There is also a new school house, churches are nearby, along with other conveniences, such as electric light, telephones, etc.

Kathmar Acres is just 20 minutes' ride by street car from Wellston via the Kirkwood-Ferguson line.

OFFERS TO SHARE PROFITS IF COTTAGES ARE SOLD PROMPTLY

Tombridge Agency Announces Refund of $50 to Each Purchaser of Germania Av. Homes.

A special profit-sharing offer has been made by the Tombridge Agency, 3318 Meramec street, to stimulate the sale of 15 bright cottages the agency is building on Germania avenue, a short distance south of the end of the Cherokee car line. The offer is that if all the cottages are sold within three months after completion a cash refund of $50 will be paid to each purchaser.

These cottages have four rooms and bath and concrete basements. They are equipped for hot and cold water, gas and electricity, and have cement walks around the house and back to shed in the rear. The lots are 30 feet wide. The houses are numbered from 4807 to 4849 Germania street.

They are being sold for $2300 each on terms of $300 down and the remainder in monthly payments.

LEAHY BUILDING APARTMENTS

Some of Five on Kingsbury Place to Be Ready June 1.

William H. Leahy has under construction on lots 5732 to 5755 Kingsbury place, five six-family apartments, each containing four rooms and sun parlor, and all late improvements, including ironing board and cabinet.

Some of these apartments have already been leased. Some of them will be ready for occupancy June 1.

Quisenberry's Poultry Pointers.

The best mixture for whitewash I know of is the one used by the United States Government. Here it is: Take a half-bushel of unslacked lime, slack with boiling water, cover to keep in steam. Strain through a fine sieve or strainer, add a peck of salt, preferably dissolved beforehand, three pounds of ground rice boiled to a paste, stir in while hot half-pound of Spanish whiting and one pound of glue, previously dissolved. Add about five gallons of hot water to the mixture, stir well, and let it stand for a few days. Apply hot. One pint covers one yard. Will withstand the weather and will not rub off.

People living on rented premises should purchase portable houses or build movable ones. A good cheap house may be constructed from two piano boxes at a cost of about $3. A simple way to make such a house is to remove the boards from the tall side of the boxes, place them on two joists, open sides facing each other, and then spiking them down securely. Use the boards removed to patch up the open gaps between the boxes, and then cover with some good roofing material. Put in the door and window, place your nests and roosts, and you will then have a house to accommodate a dozen hens. A good idea is to raise this house a couple of feet from the ground, inclose the back and two ends with boards, leaving the front open, so that the hens can use this space for a scratching place in bad weather.

If young chicks are left too long without water they will drink too much when they get to it, and bowel trouble will be the result. Plenty of pure water should be kept before them at all times. A shallow pan covered with a light board filled full of augur holes is a good way to give them water as they can drink without getting wet.

NEWS AND FEATURES OF THE POULTRY WORLD

IMITATE NATURE IN REARING CHICKS, QUISENBERRY SAYS

Ancestry, Environment and Feed Chief Considerations for Those With Limited Quarters.

By T. E. QUISENBERRY,
Former Director of the Missouri Poultry Experiment Station, Mountain Grove.

He whom circumstances compel to raise young stock in limited quarters is placed under a severe handicap, yet it can be done, and more are succeeding in this difficult task every year, as the principles of intensive poultry culture become better known. The writer has more than once seen the blue ribbon awarded to a bird that had never been 100 feet away from the spot where it first saw the light of day.

The future of any chick is largely determined by three factors: 1. Ancestry. 2. Environment. 3. Feed. These factors are of vital importance, and the failure of any one of them to exert its proper influence will mean unsatisfactory results.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon right ancestry for the successful rearing of chicks under intensive conditions. It is the foundation upon which the other two factors must rest, and without which they will be utterly useless. The importance of using strong, vigorous, fully mature breeding stock is increased tenfold when their progeny must grow to maturity under artificial surroundings. None but birds with a clean bill of health and which have been carefully selected with the "constitutional vigor" requirement placed first, should have a place in the breeding pen of the intensive poultryman.

The Place of Environment.

For the purposes of this discussion, environment may be briefly defined as the sum total of the conditions and surroundings in which the chick is placed "from shell to showroom." Environment may be said to be of two kinds, natural and artificial. The former is provided by nature, while artificial environment is usually provided by man in spite of nature. Everyone should know that natural environment is ideal for growing poultry. Free range, grassy runs, natural shade, all of these combine to make the growing chicks a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." Stock raised under such conditions rarely presents the perplexing problems which the intensive poultryman daily faces.

Since it is true that satisfactory results are most easily obtained where chicks are raised under natural conditions, those who have only artificial environment should seek to imitate nature as closely as possible. Free range means an abundance of exercise. Plenty of exercise means health, strength and vitality. Chicks raised in restricted quarters must be compelled to exercise. This can best be done by making them scratch for the bulk of their daily food from the time they are three days old until they are mature. It is surprising to see how chicks less than a week old will scratch and exercise if their feed is scattered in a litter of finely cut clover or alfalfa.

Again, free range means freedom from filth, contaminated runs, etc., one of the most important secrets of satisfactory results. To succeed under intensive conditions, we must make cleanliness our watchword. The brooding and roosting quarters, drinking vessels, etc., must not only be kept scrupulously clean, but the yards and runs must be kept spaded up and loose, so that the air and sun, nature's disinfectants, can help keep the soil free from disease germs.

Free range also means freedom from overcrowding. The intensive poultryman must be especially careful to avoid this evil. It gives rise to more troubles than most any other condition met with where the chicks are raised in limited quarters. Better a hundred chicks properly housed and well raised than 200 poorly developed and unprofitable on account of overcrowding.

The Feeding Problem.

Here again we must seek to imitate nature as closely as possible. We must remember that the chick in its natural state has access to quite a large variety of foods. There are not only the seeds and grains, but there are bugs and worms and tender grasses and greens. These three classes of foods must be constantly provided for the intensive chicks if best results are to be secured.

In most of the standard prepared chick foods we have the necessary seeds and grains. The next problem is to provide some sort of meat food in place of the bugs and worms. For this purpose nothing is better than sour milk or buttermilk, which may be kept before them at all times. In the absence of these beef scraps should always form a part of the ration.

Then there is the green food. This they must have from the time they are a week old. Clipped sprouted oats may always be provided without much trouble. Lettuce is also good, and a very small plot of ground will produce an almost endless supply of it. During the growing months the run, no matter how small, should be divided into two parts so that green feed can always be growing in one division while the youngsters are running on the other.

In this brief discussion there has been no attempt to give specific directions, as these may be found in articles which have preceded and in others that will follow. We have simply tried to show that the biggest secret of success with poultry under intensive conditions lies in the imitating of nature just as closely as possible, and in securing the strongest possible parent stock.

Type of Bird That Fills Bill of Fancy or Egg-Production

WHITE WYANDOTTE HEN...

Quisenberry's Answers to Poultry Problems

Hatching Temperature for Duck Eggs.

Please let me know the degree of heat for hatching duck eggs during each week of incubation.—Mrs. U. J. C., East St. Louis, Ill.

The temperature for duck eggs should be about the same as for ordinary chicken eggs. I would rather run the temperature a trifle high than too low. I would keep the thermometer up to about 103 degrees for the first period of incubation and about 104 degrees during the last week. Duck eggs require more moisture than chicken eggs, therefore would advise sprinkling them with water.

Soft-Shelled Eggs.

I have a small flock of Minorca hens I am feeding table scraps, Knoxall, etc. The hens of late are laying eggs without hard shells. What shall I do and what is the matter?—B. B., 903 W. Main street, Denison, Tex.

You failed to state what you were feeding besides table scraps and Knoxall, so I hardly know what to advise. If you will confine your feeding to table scraps cracked or whole grains and mashes, keep plenty of grit, oyster shell and charcoal before your birds, and will provide them with water and green food, you will seldom have trouble with hens laying soft-shelled eggs, providing the hen is not affected with ovarian trouble of some kind. In case that is true, the best thing to do is to market the hen. You might add some bonemeal to your dry mash, and I would give half a teaspoonful of Epsom salts every two weeks during the heavy laying season. Dissolve the salts in water and moisten the mash with it. If you handle your birds in this way I am quite sure that you will not have much trouble such as you mention.

Poor Hatches.

Have had two different hens of different breeds setting and did not get but one chick. Each pen of hens and the male birds were a year old. Using one rooster to five hens in one pen and in the other a rooster to 10 hens. Can you account for the eggs not hatching?—J. W. N., St. Louis, Mo.

The trouble in this case is not due to the number of birds in the pen. It must be due to the method of feeding or to the vitality of the breeding stock. If the hens have been overfed or have been forced for egg-production, this might be responsible for the poor hatch. If the birds have not had sufficient exercise and are low in vitality, this might also be the reason for your failure. If your hens were contented during the period of incubation and looked after the eggs carefully, one or the other of the things mentioned must be the fault. I would advise you to feed principally hard grains, compel the hens to take lots of exercise. Give plenty of green food and keep your birds in comfortable houses and on good soil.

Probably Brain Trouble.

I set a hen on 31st of March and she was due to hatch today. Yesterday she left the nest and something is wrong with her neck. She holds her head between her legs and walks backwards. She has no lice, for I treated her and examined her for same and found none. She has had good feed and water all the time and nice, clean quarters. This is such a strange case. Do not think she has limberneck—F. H. S., 2705 Broadway, Quincy, Ill.

I am of the opinion that it was brain trouble that caused this action on the part of the hen. A rupture of a small blood vessel or pressure on the brain might result in just such as this. There is nothing you could do to relieve a case of this sort, except to keep the hen in comfortable quarters. Use 10 drops of oil of turpentine and an equal amount of sweet oil. Put this in capsules and force down the hen's throat. If this condition is caused by anything bordering on limber-neck or acute indigestion, this may help to relieve the trouble. We examined several hens this year that acted very similar to this case and found that the disease was caused by a certain germ which could be transmitted from one hen to another and produce the same results in every case. Unless you find other hens with your flock similarly affected, I feel that the trouble with your hen is a sort of epileptic disease or brain trouble.

MISSOURI'S NEEDS ARE DISCUSSED IN A CLOSED MEETING

State Officials and Commercial Clubs' Directors Find Improving Tendency in Some Respects.

PLAN RESOURCES SURVEY

Chillicothe Delegate Tells Conference Banking Change Is Needed to Give Farmers a Chance.

"What is the matter with Missouri?" was the question discussed yesterday, in a meeting closed to reporters, by heads of State departments and institutions and directors of the Federation of Missouri Commercial Clubs.

A partial report of the proceedings was given out after the meeting. Allen H. Hinchey of St. Louis, who acted as secretary, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that, according to offcial statistics read at the meeting, Missouri has not been keeping her proper rank among States in some respects. At the same time, he said, an improvement was shown in some particulars over figures collected in the past few years by the Federation of Commercial Clubs.

Among those at the conference were Dr. A. Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri; Jewell Mayes, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture; A. L. McRae, director of the Rollo School of Mines; Richard Dalton of the State Agricultural Commission; A. A. Coult, president of the State Poultry Board; Dean F. B. Mumford of the State Agricultural College; Dr. John R. Kirk, president of the State Normal School at Kirksville; Dr. E. L. Hendricks, president of the State Normal School at Warrensburg; Dr. Ira Richardson, president of the State Normal School at Maryville; Prof. J. H. Scarborough of the Warrensburg Normal; H. A. Buehler, State Geologist; H. L. Marks of Carthage and W. H. Stubblefield Jr. of Cape Girardeau. William H. Bloomer, field secretary of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., presided.

Farmers Need Banking Chance.

W. L. Nelson, asistant secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, told the delegates that within 1900 and 1910, the period covered by the last national census, 450,000 farmers had left Missouri to take up their work in other States. He reported, however, that there has been a distinct advance in Agriculture throughout the State during the last year, and that fruit, farm and dairy products will show an increase for the last year.

In discussing this particular report, T. C. Beasley, president of the Commercial Club of Chillicothe, said that the system of banking in farming districts must be changed so as to give the farmer some chance.

Resolutions were adopted by the delegates as follows:

Resolutions Adopted.

Indorsing a program for a social and economic survey of the resources of Missouri.

Introduction of methods to reduce fire rates and losses throughout the State.

Supporting the efforts of the association to increase the number of county agents throughout the State.

To work for seed-testing methods in each county of the State.

To assist work for pure seed and feed laws.

To formulate plans for a closer cooperation between merchants and farmers.

Indorsing the movement for a revision of the State Constitution.

President Bloomer was authorized to appoint a committee to aid in the carrying out of these resolutions.

The representatives of State departments and institutions each presented one definite suggestion as to aid that might be rendered by the federation, but the suggestions were not made public.

Secretary Hinchey said that reports made by the delegates to the conference showed a great improvement in the condition of rural schools throughout the State. He said that during the last year many of the one-room buildings have been enlarged and that an unusual gain has been shown in the dairy business of the State. He declined to give the figures presented at the conference.

MUNICIPAL UNIVERSITY A NEED OF ST. LOUIS, WITHERS SAYS

Harris Teachers' College Principal, in City Club Address, Points Out National Trend.

The national trend toward the establishment of municipal universities and the need of one in St. Louis, was the theme of an address by Prof. John W. Withers, principal of the Harris Teachers' College, at the City Club yesterday. Besides Prof. Withers, there were present as guests of the club, the principals of the St. Louis high schools and a number of persons interested in the advancement of public education.

Although there are but six municipal universities in the United States, Prof. Withers stated that the idea of establishing them is rapidly spreading through American educational circles. The cities which are sites of such schools are Cincinnati, Toledo and Akron, O., New York, Louisville, Ky., and Charleston, S. C.

The increasing importance of the American city in ratio to that of the smaller towns was attributed as the main reason for the growing need of the schools.

Riddick School Circle.

The Riddick School Mothers' and Teachers' Circle met Friday afternoon at the school, Whittier and Evans avenues. The circle numbers 60 members, 17 being enrolled at the last meeting. It was organized March 24. A school benefit entertainment will be given at West End Hall, Vandeventer avenue and West Belle place, May 12.

LAMM AND MORRIS PROMISE THE STATE A BUSINESS RULE

Rival Republican Candidates Address Tenth Congressional District Convention at Clayton.

TELL OF QUALIFICATIONS

The People, Not Ward Political Committees, Will Name the Candidate, They Say.

Former Supreme Judge Henry Lamm of Sedalia, and Charles D. Morris of St. Joseph, rival candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, delivered speeches before the delegates of the Tenth Congressional District convention at Clayton yesterday. Each speaker outlined his views of the qualifications of a Governor.

Judge Lamm, who spoke first, said that when he went on the Supreme bench he found it involved in partisan politics, and that one of his first duties was to help take it out of politics. He said there was no place for politics on the Supreme bench, and that the highest court of the State should stand for nothing but justice.

He said also that he helped to overturn a long line of decisions which had held that, in the event of fraud in elections, the ballot boxes could not be opened. He said it was one of the proudest days of his life when he helped to hand down a decision providing that the fraud could be pursued into the ballot box and uprooted.

"Remember this," Judge Lamm said, "a man may be a mighty good talker and be able to make a flaming speech, and not make a good Governor. We have an orator as Governor now, and just think what we've got."

"And also a tango artist," suggested former Judge Matt Reynolds, chairman of the convention.

Cannot Dance at All.

"Speaking of tangoing," Judge Lamm continued, "I can't dance at all. My old daddy and mammy never taught me how, and since I have grown to manhood life has been too serious for me to learn."

Judge Lamm warned the Republicans not to get into fights that would make it impossible to win a victory in November. He said that he was a friend of Morris and would never utter an unkind word against him. He made no mention of John E. Swanger of Sedalia, who is the politicians' candidate for Governor. He said that a Governor ought not to be allowed to run for any office while he was in office, and that the State Constitution had purposely limited him to one term to prevent the abuse of power of the office to perpetuate a Governor in office.

He said that questions far above those of patronage and pie ought to occupy the minds of the Republicans in this campaign. The Democratic party in the State, he said, should be arraigned as a failure.

In closing his speech, Judge Lamm said that he did not deny that he was a lawyer and had been a Judge.

"Some people undertake to say that I am not a business man," he said, "but, after having spent a lifetime advising my clients in their business affairs, and 10 years on the Supreme bench going into the intricate problems of business and writing decisions, when you undertake to say that I am not a business man you make the same mistake that some others are making when they say I am 130 years old—which is not true."

Judge Lamm was generously applauded.

Morris, in his speech, paid a high tribute to Judge Lamm. He said he regarded him as the most distinguished lawyer in Missouri, and thought the Republican party make a mistake when it failed to keep him on the Supreme bench for life.

People Going to Name Governor.

Morris, having apparently in mind the movement on foot by the Kiel-Schmoll-Graves faction of the Republican City Committee of St. Louis, to vote an indorsement of Swanger, declared that no ward committees were going to name the next Governor of Missouri, but that the people themselves would exercise that right in the primary election Aug. 1. He said that committees might do well to cut out their "twaddling questioning" and scheming with candidates, because the people were more powerful than committees.

"Do the people of Missouri want a hand-shaker, a jollier or a tangoer for Governor?" he asked. "I think the Republicans will want to know, first, if the candidate is qualified for the job; whether he would be creditable to the party, honest, and a man of his word. Then, what his affiliations are, who the men are behind him, what course he will pursue as Governor, and finally, if he was a Republican."

Morris took another slap at the Swanger movement by declaring that Governors could not be made by drilling candidates in private conferences.

"When I was in the southern part of the State I heard some one say he could not vote for a certain candidate because he was too wet, and another say that he could not vote for another candidate because he was too dry," Morris said.

"I do not think the people are so much interested in those issues, but they will want to know if a candidate is honest and capable. If I am elected Governor, I'll take the police, Excise and Election Boards of the cities out of politics. If you don't want that kind of a Governor, I don't want you to vote for me. We have just elected a Republican Mayor in the Democratic city of St. Joseph because the Democratic administration played politics with these boards. The people want to wear their sovereignty under their own hat bands, and they are not going to stand for it being interfered with by State boards. The people are set against that sort of business."

Morris said the State was suffering now because there has been a political administration in Jefferson City instead of a business administration. He pledged himself to administer the affairs of the State in a business-like manner, if elected.

Candidates for other State offices also made speeches after the other business of the convention was transacted.

Gillette Company Increases Salaries.

The Gillette company announced an increase in the salary of their wage-earners of 10 per cent, effective April 20. This raise affects about 800 operators and involves about $40,000 per year.

1000 EXHIBITS TO BE ADDED TO EDUCATIONAL MUSEUM

They Were Obtained at Panama-Pacific Exposition, as Gifts or by Purchase.

More than 1000 additional exhibits will be added to the 12,800 exhibits at the Educational Museum of the Board of Education, 1606 South Eighteenth street, when collections of these materials, donated by and purchased from exhibitors at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, arrive in St. Louis soon.

Exhibits from six foreign countries and 12 states of the union, including food, clothing and shelter products, minerals, ores and objects illustrating the life and industries of the various nations, are now en route.

A unique feature of the educational facilities afforded by the museum is to be found in the collection of 300 phonograph records, ranging in subject from grand opera to ragtime. The institution fosters the "museum on wheels" idea, an automobile truck visiting each school each week, depositing and collecting exhibits. Last year 77,173 exhibits were ordered by St. Louis schools and there was but $6 actual loss. The museum is maintained at an annual cost of $12,500, a per capita cost of 14¾ cents per pupil.

A Fine Record.

During 1915 the Big Four Route established a record of safe traveling when it transported 8,163,219 paying passengers, or 425,467,914 passengers carried one mile, dent. A similar clear record was made and not one was killed in a train acci- by the Cincinnati Northern Railroad, which handled 513,228 paying passengers without a single fatality in a train accident.

A LOOK AROUND

By Clark McAdams.

ONE wonders if Col. Roosevelt's four sons and two sons-in-law, with whom he reatens to take the field every ree or four days, would really ht if he called them out. Some ble mistakes of that kind have made, and it would not surprise people if the Colonel had been one in assuming that those nen are just as he is and feel he feels. The greater likethat if he attempted to call there would be a bigger usehoid row at Sagamore Hill than hat which rocked the home of Hamlet. A son naturally sees folly in a father to better advantage than anyone else for being constantly associated with him. A son-in-law also occupies a coign not to be despised. No doubt when the Colonel is out things are sometimes said which would make his ears burn if he could but hear them. One can imagine an alert young fellow like Kermit saying that he would much prefer to answer for himself in case trouble began, and that if his father understood just how he felt about it he would not have so much to say about tossing his sons in every time anything is said about men being wanted. Kermit has killed lions and elephants, and it is not seemly in his father to speak of him as if he were an auxiliary to his father, or in any way inferior to him in spirit and courage. He could probably chase his father off the field if the issue between them came by any chance to that pass which so pains one in reading of Saul and David. Maybe the Colonel can speak for Theodore Junior, who never goes bear hunting or anything of that sort, but if that is so Theodore Junior probably would not fight in the first line if the masculine members of the fam- all did fight together. As to the -in-law we don't know, but we would be willing to bet a little something, basing our opinion on what we know of sons-in-law. We are getting tired of hearing the Colonel refer to all these boys as if they were his own little militia, or private posse. Doubtless they are tired of it, too. They are probably all good boys, and dislike having to be made ridiculous every time the Colonel feels that he must make an ass of himself.

Col. Watterson's Drive Against Shakspeare Fails

COL. WATTERSON'S great drive against Shakspeare has also failed. Everybody went right ahead with the celebration of the 300th anniversary of Shakspeare's death, and the incident passed without any appreciable damage to Shakspeare's fame. I have talked with a number of people about it, and they all feel, as I do, that the Colonel hasn't much of a case. His assertion that Mark Twain agreed with him sounded a good deal like the Kaiser's claim to have God on his side, and what he said about the murder and Marlowe's flight from England read like a chapter from our own recent encounter with the Lewis boys. There was, too, undisguised feeling in the Colonel's brief, as if he had already lost the case in a lower court and it were up on appeal. We imagine this could be explained by assuming that no one to whom the Colonel ever told the story, and he has no doubt told it a great many times, ever indicated the least disposition to believe that Marlowe wrote the plays of Shakspeare or thought it entirely professional of Marse Henry and Mark Twain, as men of letters, to attempt a case against Shakspeare when they had so little up their sleeves. It was gratifying to observe that the Shakspeare tercentennial went right ahead all week and Shakspeare seemed still to be holding his stuff all along the line. It is a great mistake, we imagine, to believe that what happened only 300 years ago is something past knowing about or not quite historic. We know Shakspeare about as well as it is necessary to know him. We are interested in what he wrote—not in the rate of interest he charged for money or whether he was close with his wife. Col. Watterson seems to think that because he was close with his wife he could not have written some of the things with which we are familiar, though we can't say we think much of a man's hold upon the family purse as an index to his literary genius. Bill Nye is said to have been the tightest American, but we never knew that to be advanced as an argument against reading his stuff or laughing heartily at some of his absurd conceits. Every man must know his own wife, and Shakspeare probably knew his. It was for him to say when his wife should have money and how much. Ingersoll said Shakspeare's mind was an ocean washing all the shores of thought, so he probably washed this one about right.

Why Workmen Are Lunching at Noonday Club

IT is very interesting to observe the increase of downtown restaurants in St. Louis and to see how generally they succeed. Either the population of the city is rapidly increasing or the old practice of carrying one's dinner has been given up a great deal of late. Probably the latter is the case, for while the population increases, the increase would not account for the hordes of people eating lunch everywhere. After dinner pails began to be elaborated into thermos bottles and warming ovens, workmen probably found it cheaper to join some good lunch organization like the Noonday Club than it was to keep such a dinner pail up. The pity of the thing is that one misses workmen everywhere in exactly the attitude and atmosphere of smart conversation like that of the two Irishmen during the campaign between Taft and Bryan. "Are yez goin' to vote fer Bryan?" asked Pat. "No," said Mike. "I'm fer Taft. I kin vote fer Bryan anny time." One liked to see workmen lounging around piles of brick and boxes of mortar, their lunch spread on a balanced board, and their indifference to passersby as fine as anything there is in human nature. When those men had lunched and lay back with their pipes in their mouths, they gave one a feeling that there was under all the froth of our national life something virile and wholesome, something still in reserve. Maybe the workmen themselves will decide that the change was not for the best. Maybe they will pine for the outdoors, the sea of humanity flowing past, and the spirit of raillery that goes with this sort of thing. If so, we shall gladly welcome them back. Perhaps Mr. Ford could invent a dinner pail of the sort workmen require nowadays that would sell for not more than four or five dollars, or one could be leased, as phonographs are. We believe such a pail is a compact combination of a fireless cooker, thermos bottle, gas range, percolator and warming oven.

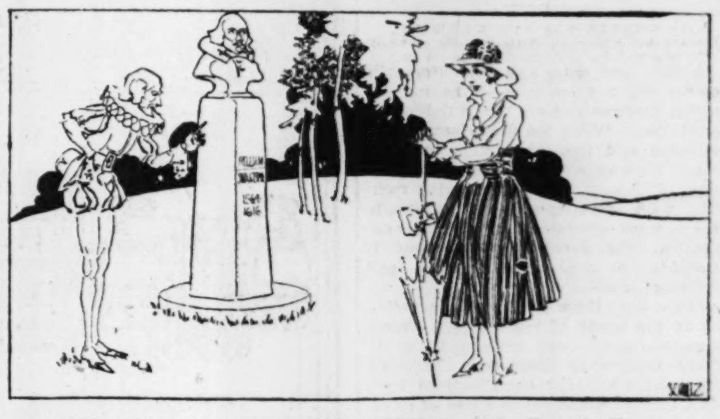
Jests and Jingles

By W. H. JAMES

ARABELLA SOLVES IT.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN met Mr. Francis Bacon
And asked this man of great renown if he did Shakspeare's shakin'.
He cleared the mystery at last and told her all about it,
Revealing all the hidden past, so clear we cannot doubt it:
"Bill Shakspeare's name was Rudolph Spitz; his head was rather bony;
He wasn't fit for social hits, and not the least bit toney.
When he was young he ran away and went to Indiana,
And there he earned a little pay at playing the piano
In Blatz's moving picture show next door to Izzy's beanery
And when he couldn't make this go he took to painting scenery.
He wrote a moving picture plot and vainly tried to sell it
They voted it was silly rot, and though I shouldn't tell it,
I guess 'twas me that saved his life from hoodoos and from fritzes,
For he was burdened with a wife and seven little Spitzes.
I fixed his bum scenarios, for I had been to college,
While he, as higher learning goes, had very little knowledge.
I didn't want to take the blame for any such production,
For if a film should bear my name 'twould cause a family ruction
Spitz told me how for Edwin Booth he once a spear had toted
And then, to tell the solemn truth, right then and there we voted
That Shakspeare was the very name, so dignified and sounding;
And so it's thundered down to fame, through all the ages bounding."
Now that's the story Bacon told to fair Miss Arabella,
And that it's true as any gold we'd bet a new umbrella.

A HOPE.

TWENTY-FOUR turnips and a thin string bean
Sixteen squashes and a tangerine,
One bum carrot and a quart of peas—
May your back yard garden yield you more than these.

Four potatoes and a radish red
One lone gumbo in a ten-foot bed,
Two sugar melons, both soft on top—
May you never, never have such a measly crop.

Three Brussels sprouts with a very short nap,
Six lanky rhubarbs without any snap;
Five heads of cabbage, unfit for kraut—
May you have a lot more than I'm singing about.

ON THE TRAIL.

KOKOMO, Ind., April 27.—The Chief of Police here has wired to Washington to learn if there is any reward for the capture of Villa. He has heard that Villa has been working in a wagon spoke factory near the edge of town for the last three weeks and if there's anything in it he'll go and get him.

SPARTA, Ill., April 28.—The Lewis brothers passed through here last night. They were recognized at once from the fact that they carried golf sticks. The Constable asked them to go to jail with him, but they said they didn't have time.

DEFIANCE, O., April 28.—A mysterious man who has been hanging about this town for several days is believed to be Col. House. It is understood here that he is wanted at Washington, but this has not been verified. Newspaper men tried to get something out of him but he was silent in seven languages.

BATESVILLE, Ark., April 28.—The report that a saw mill blew up here last night was an error. It was discovered that the unusual noise was Col. Bryan passing through. What sounded like an explosion was him telling everybody he was on his way somewhere to see what could be done about something.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., April 28.—The search is ended. The logical Republican presidential candidate has been found here. He admits his identity.

THE JOLLY TROOPER.

A SOLDIER of the legion was lying in the trench
In a way so void of comfort that it gave his back a wrench,
But he sang a jolly ditty, though it took a lot of breath,
While the booming guns were trying for to bring about his death.
For there wasn't any milliner
Besieging of his flat
With a bill for forty dollars
For his daughter's Easter hat.
A bullet came a-whizzing by and nicked him in the ear,
And still he sang that ballad gay in accents loud and clear;
He hadn't had a bite of beef in twenty weeks or so,
But yet he blithely caroled forth: "Down Where the Lilies Grow."
For there wasn't any water man
To catch him by the nose
And make him pay a dollar bill
For using of a hose.
He had a lot of rheumatiz, lumbago and the grip,
But notwithstanding all of that, he stiffened up his lip;
He kept a twinkle in his eye 'twould do you good to see,
And all the perils of the trench could not abate his glee
For there wasn't any Standard Oil
To bump him on the bean
And make him kick in 20 cents
For a stein of gasoline.

FIRED, BUT WORKING.

"Well, I've been fired again."

"That's too bad. What are you going to do now?"

"O, the same old thing."

"I see. You've got another job."

"No, the same old job."

"But I thought you said you'd been fired."

"That's right. You see I couldn't stay on the job without being fired."

"Who are you, anyway?"

"The furnace."

Post-Dispatch Motor Expert Advises on Care, Inspection and Operation of Self-Starter and Car Lighting.

D—Starting motor.
E—Storage battery.
F—Generator.
G—Ignition circuit breaker and distributer.
H—Spark plug wires.
I—Vent and filler caps.
N—Negative terminal of battery.

A very few years ago the automobile owner did not conceive of having his motor cranked and his lamps lighted by electricity. When the first electric self-starting and lighting system appeared many were very skeptical as to its practical efficiency. At first annoying troubles were experienced, but gradually these were eliminated by efficient engineers, who devoted much time to working out a practical starting and lighting device.

For a time there was much discussion as ot the merit of self-starters. Some manufacturers even refused to apply these devices to their cars, believing that the additional complications incident thereto would cause a loss of sales. However, the opposite happened. The great value and conveniences of electric starting and lighting was quickly appreciated by the automobile purchaser and within a very short time he demanded it. Then it was that most every manufacturer overtaxed his engineering departments with plans and problems in working out and building various devices to meet the public demand. In some cases the results were satisfactory and in others disastrous. In fact, it might be stated that at one time the efficient starting and lighting system placed certain cars in the lead, which handicap has been very hard to overcome. On the other hand, some good cars were condemned and set back by employing inefficient and crude methods of starting.

Must Be Abuse Proof.

Undoubtedly the best engineering talent, both electrical and mechanical, has devoted much time during the past few years to perfecting various systems. Much capital has been employed and much wasted. Like any invention, mechanical or otherwise, it may work out well on paper, but prove inefficient in practice. The automobile is subjected to so much abuse in the hands of incompetent operators that to produce a simple and effective method of electric starting has been a severe tax upon the engineering forces of most every manufacturer. Today there is hardly a car without a full electric starting and lighting system. In fact, no one would think of investing more than $500 for an automobile without it.

The subject of electric starters is extensive and cannot be discussed here in detail. It may be said that there are many very efficient methods employed at present on different makes of cars. One may prove more suitable for a particular make of car than another. Then again the engineering departments of factories may differ as to the merits of various systems and accordingly employ the kind they approve.

It is safe to state that with the present advanced development of the various systems the purchaser of an automobile need not permit this factor to necessarily influence his purchase. It is not the purpose of this article to discriminate against or elaborate upon any particular system or any particular method of starting and lighting, but rather to give a simple explanation of how a modern system is employed.

In the above chart are two views of a power plant, one showing the right hand side with electric starting motor attached as shown at "B" and the other the left-hand side with electric generator attached, as shown at "F." This particular method employs two units. In the complete starting and lighting system there are other important factors, such as the storage battery, regulator, ammeter, starting switch, fuse box, starting motor drive, etc.

At "E" is shown a three-cell, six-volt 80-ampere hour storage battery. When the starting switch is pressed down by a pedal or some other device the electric circuit is closed between the battery and the six-volt starting motor located at "D" on the flywheel case. The current from the battery causes the starting motor armature shaft to rotate very rapidly. At "A," "B" and "C" are shown views of this armature shaft with gear "B," which meshes with the gear on the rim of the flywheel. On the extension of the armature shaft is a hollow sleeve, "A," having a coarse screw thread cut on the outside. Gear "B" is screwed onto the sleeve and is free to move forward and backward when the sleeve is turned. The armature shaft drives the sleeve through a heavy coil spring, "C," so the sudden starting of the armature shaft causes the gear to move backward along the threads until it meshes with teeth cut in the rim of the engine flywheel.

When the gear is fully meshed it comes up against a stop and then turns with the sleeve, thus allowing the starting motor to turn the flywheel, which cranks the engine. It may be noted that the coil spring furnishes a very flexible drive which prevents the load being thrown on the starting motor too suddenly when the gear comes up against the stop and starts to rotate with the sleeve. As soon as the motor is started the flywheel then begins driving the gear "B" much faster than the starting motion could possibly drive it. This causes the gear to unscrew and move forward out of mesh with the teeth on the flywheel, permitting the engine to run free. As soon as the foot is taken from the switch, which should be immediately after the engine takes up its cycle, the starting motor comes to rest.

Only two wires are used in this system, one from the starting switch to the battery and the other from switch to the starting motor. The circuit is completed by grounding the starting motor and the battery.

The starting motor needs very little attention except to keep the collector brushes and commutator clean; also the bearings lubricated occasionally. If the commutator becomes corroded or the brushes badly worn poor results will be obtained. Uusually this instrument is so arranged that mud or dirt will not penetrate the vital parts. Proper lubrication is very essential and an occasional inspection should be made for this; likewise for loose terminals, which may be loosened by vibration.

The electric current for the lamps, horn, starting motor and ignition is drawn from the storage battery, which is kept charged by a simple six-volt generator such as shown at "F."

Igniter and Distributer.

The igniter and distributer is shown at "G." Generator "F" is driven by an extension of the fan pulley shaft through a flexible coupling. The duty of this is to generate current for storage battery and maintain it at the maximum point of efficiency at all times. If it were not for the generator the storage battery supply would soon be exhausted due to the amount of current constantly consumed by using the ignition system, the starting motor and the lights.

The generator is so designed that when the engine is running an ample supply of current is generated for the purpose needed, without drawing from the battery. However, since the motor is subjected to great speed variation some regulating device is necessary to control the current output. For this purpose a regulator is attached, which automatically cuts in or cuts out the circuit as needed. This is a simple device, which when once adjusted, seldom needs attention and is usually located behind the dash. Likewise, a current indicator is also provided, which serves to silently inform the operator as to how much, if any, current is being generated while the motor is idle. This instrument is usually located on the dash in plain view of the operator.

Then again the fuse box and lighting switch constitutes another important factor. Switches, of course, control the current to the various lights, similar to any ordinary electric lighting switch. At the fuse box will be found several fuses controlling the various electric circuits, such as for the headlights, the side light, the rear light, the horn, etc. These are installed as a means of safety in the various lines to prevent injury to the battery or instruments should short circuits occur. With a fuse installed a short circuit may take place, but the overload will cause the fuse to "blow out," thereby opening the circuit automatically.

Care of Storage Battery.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the proper care of the storage battery. The efficiency of the electrical system depends upon it. The cells of the battery must be kept filled, or rather, the plates of each cell must be kept covered at all times with electrolyte. Likewise, the battery should be maintained in a fully charged condition at all times.

Many operators use the car more at night than during the day. In ordinary driving the current output of the generating system is sufficient to supply the current needed for starting, ignition and lights, but the current output over and above this is not sufficient to charge the battery. While the car is standing and the lights burning the battery is being exhausted. It may be observed then that in such an instance much more current is being taken from the battery than replaced. The natural result in a short time there must be a discharged condition of the battery. The first evidence of this is failure of the self-starter to work and difficulty in starting the engine due to weak battery current for ignition. In such an instance the battery should be removed and fully charged from an outside source. Where conditions of driving do not insure proper charging by the generator as above outlined care should be taken to remove the battery periodically for charging or else permit the motor to run at a reasonable rate of speed at stated intervals.

Power!!

Few of us have the need or desire for a racing car.

We are quite content to let the "other fellow" take his chances at 70 miles an hour—while we spin along comfortably and safely with the speedometer needle registering 25 or 30.

But every man wants Power in his automobile—and particularly the man who tours.

It is good to sit behind a motor which responds eagerly — bouyantly — to the slightest touch of the throttle.

It is good to know that you need only "step on" the accelerator—and the steepest hills will flatten out like smooth boulevards.

It is good to realize that you command a vast store of reserve power which will easily take you through the heaviest sand roads "on high."

It is good to know that your automobile is a staunch, sturdy, dependable help-mate—not a treacherous weakling that will lay down when the real work begins.

In a word, it is good to own just such a car as the Paige seven passenger "Six-46".

This car is a thoroughbred—every inch of it.

It is just as handsome as an automobile could possibly be, and easily capable of going 60 miles per hour if you desire so much speed. But —first and last—it is made for work —consistent work—day in and day out work.

"Fairfield" owners don't have to make apologies or "offer excuses". Their cars are out of commission at one time only—when they are locked up in the garage at night.

And—best of all—you can readily establish these facts for yourself.

This car is by no means an "experiment". It has been put to the gruelling test of more than a full year's road work by thousands of owners.

All that you need to do is get in touch with the nearest Paige dealer.

Let him prove his case. Let him introduce you to men who have invested their money in the "Fairfield". Listen to their experiences —ask for their honest opinions.

Do this—while the Dealer can still make immediate deliveries.

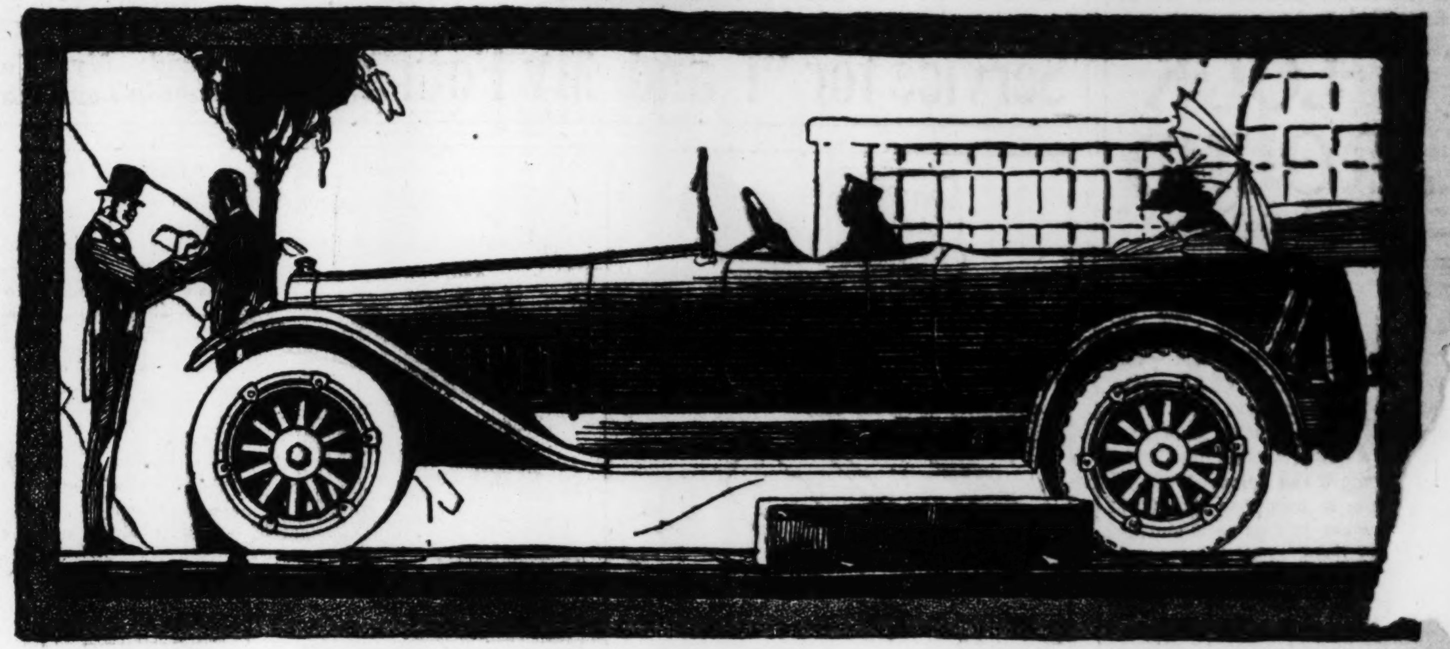
OUR APRIL 15TH MODEL
DESIGNED AFTER THE SHOWS

Mitchell

$1325 F. O. B. RACINE
For 5-Passenger Model



257 Cars in One

We now have the Mid-Year Mitchell, completed after the New York Show. Combining all the best new ideas that were shown there. Designed by experts who first compared 257 of the latest models, to embody their best in one car.

Each great designer, every season, contributes new ideas to cars. The Mitchell designers contribute their share.

At the New York Show—in January—all these new ideas appear.

No one car has all of them. One designer has excelled in one feature, one in another. The ideal car of the season would be a composite car. And that's what we offer in this new-model Mitchell.

The Best-Liked Ideas

Some new ideas were fizzles. Some were immensely attractive. On each one our experts secured the motorists' verdict.

They picked out the lines which were voted the handsomest. They chose the new features which men and women liked best. Then they completed this new model to come out in the spring, and combine every last-minute feature in body and equipment.

This never was done before. This New Mitchell, therefore, is a show in itself. It shows all the approved ideas. You will find it by far the most interesting car on exhibit.

Exclusive Springs

This is the only car which has the Bate cantilever springs. They offer ease of riding which was never known before.

You will never believe what a difference they make until we take you over a stretch of rough road. The car rides ruts as a boat rides waves. This, to women, is the most appealing feature found in any car this year.

30-Year Service

The Mitchell, we believe, holds the record for service. Six Mitchell cars that we know of have averaged 164,372 miles each. That means over 30 years of ordinary service. And all are running daily.

The Mitchell is distinguished as being the choice of the ablest engineers. We have a long list to send—on request—of great engineers who have chosen the Mitchell.

The Mitchell is long, roomy, impressive. Its wheelbase is 127 inches. It has a power tire pump, reversible headlights, ball-bearing steering gear, gasoline primer on instrument board, and many other features which make this car a favorite with men.

26 Extra Features
Because John W. Bate Saves Us 20%

The New Mitchell has 26 extra features —things you want in a car—which other cars don't offer.

Most of these are exclusive to Mitchell. And no car at any price has more than four of them.

We invite you to see these extras. Judge for yourself what each one means. Judge how much you would miss it. When you see 26 of them in a single car, we think you will want that car.

Due to 10,000 Savings

Those extras are paid for out of 10,000 savings made by John W. Bate, the efficiency expert.

Our buildings—covering 45 acres—were designed by him. He has equipped them with 2092 time-saving machines of the most efficient sort.

In this model plant—where every second is saved—we build 98 per cent of this New Mitchell car. We build it for half what it would have cost in our factory of 1910. We build it for 20 per cent less, we believe, than any other factory could build a like car.

Those are the reasons for these 26 extras. They are due to John W. Bate. Any man who sees them will have new respect for factory efficiency, carried to the farthest limit.

Come, let us show them to you.

With high-power high-speed six-cylinder motor; wheelbase, 127 inches; anti-skid tires on rear; complete equipment, including engine-driven tire pump, reversible searchlights, etc.

THE BLACK MYSTERY BOX EXPLAINED

"Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise," but where ignorance produces no bliss, yet costs you money, you'd better wise up. The idea is from the Moerschell Electric and Auto Supply Co. of St. Louis, local representatives of U. S. L. batteries. The U-S-L Corporation has published, at considerable expense, a handsome little book full of good reading that the average motorist will be glad to get hold of. It is no chore to read this book—it is not the usual heavy, dry-as-dust, "hard-to-get" treatment of the subject. Well illustrated, lightened up with a touch of humor here and there, the book is nevertheless a most complete answer to every question. Its keynote is to give the reader the right idea without brain fag. In contrast with the ordinary instruction book, this volume is almost a means of pleasure. And it is the only book extant which explains fully how a storage battery is affected by the rest of the starting and lighting equipment of which it is a part, just as your stomach is affected by your teeth.

Finally, this book shows a broad gauge policy, for it is of value to every owner of a battery or equipment, of whatever make. Its aim is to increase the common knowledge of storage batteries so that the public will secure greater satisfaction from the storage battery as an institution. While the book will incidently aid competitors of the U-S-L, it will certainly aid the U-S-L people; so the latter are content that the publication is a good move.

CO-OPERATE TO PROTECT FROM FRAUD SCHEMES

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 28.—With a view of helping to eliminate fraudulent schemes devised to mulct owners of automobiles through misleading direct-by-mail advertising, the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World has announced at national headquarters here that it will co-operate with the American Automobile Association, which has started a crusade against such practices.

Investigations by Richard H. Lee of Cleveland, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Automobile Association, have disclosed a number of "co-operative" organizations which offer members automobile accessories, supplies and tires at ridiculously low prices. Evasion is one of the principal assets of these organizations, according to the information given Mr. Lee.

The National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs will be aided in this work by the vigilance committees of approximately 140 local advertising clubs in all parts of the United States and Canada.

"The National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World," said Merle Sidener, chairman of the committee, "is interested in building greater confidence in all advertising. Now that the fraud and the faker have been barred from the columns of respectable newspapers and other periodicals, these schemers are using the accommodating postage stamp to circulate their misleading literature. This is an abuse of advertising and an abuse of public confidence which cannot be tolerated. Our committee is glad to join hands with the American Automobile Association in the suppression of frauds practiced on automobile owners which have their inception in false and deceptive advertising."

FEDERAL AID FOR HIGHWAYS IN BALANCE

Passage of Law Is Dependent on Quick Work of Friends of the Measure.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Federal aid in roads, insofar as the first session of the Sixty-fourth Congress is concerned, hangs in the balance, to be decided by the ability of the friends of the measure to bring it to a vote.

If the good roads bill can secure a yea-and-nay test, the prediction is made that it will pass by a standard majority, for there are those who would hesitate to go on record against Federal co-operation, though not inclined to accelerate progress to a vote.

Naturally the A. A. A. clubs and members throughout the country are much concerned with the situation, as they have lent consistent support to the bill put forward by the American Association of State Highway Officials and believe that the Bankhead bill is legislation which should be approved and then in conference merged with the Shackelford bill, which passed in the house.

In the debate in the Senate pronounced evidence has been given of the great growth of opinion for a logical Federal help in the road transportation of passengers and farm and manufactured products.

Senator Underwood of Alabama summarized this concisely:

"It has been said here in debate that the states themselves are building good roads; that there is no necessity for the Federal Government to intervene; that there is no requirement for Federal aid. Well, that may be true in some of the great, rich states in America; but even in those states it has been found that the state must grant aid, because there are poor communities in those states that cannot bear the burden of carrying the roads through those communities and they must have the aid of the state in order that the roads may reach the marts to which commerce is going. The same is true as to the nation. There are many States and many communities in which, without aid from the National Government or the State governments, it would be impossible for them to construct roads. If your roads are not going to be continuous and go through poor communities as well as rich ones, they will be of little value."

GOODYEAR TO DOUBLE

Discussing the announcement made Thursday that the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. will issue $10,000,000 of new preferred stock, the sale of which has already been underwritten, President F. A. Seiberling of the Goodyear company says:

"It is all the natural result of Goodyear growth, and the growth of the automobile industry. For the past year or more we have been straining our capacity, working day and night, to keep up with the demand for Goodyear products. We have been making factory enlargements for some time past, but even then have not kept pace with business growth. In fact, we expect to practically double our production facilities within the next 10 months. For a long time in the automobile tire department we have been turning out practically capacity—17,000 tires a day. Within a year our capacity will be 25,000 tires a day.

"Greater business requires greater sums for its transaction, hence the plan that has just been announced.

"The new facilities will make way for a much greater cord tire production than heretofore. Goodyear cord tires have more than made their place in tiredom. Our greatest difficulty has been to make enough of them. Now we will soon have factory room to enable us to keep up with the demand."

MEETING OF ENGINEERS

DETROIT, Mich., April 29.—Reservations have been made to date for 322 S. A. E. members and friends for the summer cruise, June 12-16. There are included in these reservations for 93 ladies. Treasurer W. H. Conant of the 1916 Meetings Committee reports daily increasing receipts, and it is now certain that the total accommodation of 550 on the steamship Noronic will be taken by June 1, if not earlier. At the present rate the ship will be sold out before June 1.

Attendance this year promises to eclipse all former years from the viewpoint of wide representation. Already nearly all of the past presidents have made reservations. The broad gauge and high-caliber papers that have already been arranged for have had much to do with many of the early decisions to go on the cruise.

In addition to the papers already announced the following have been included in the tentative schedule: W. H. Allen, "Single vs. Dual Tires for Truck Wheels;" A. P. Brush, "High-Speed Motors;" Benjamin Liebowitz, "Dynamics of Vehicle Suspension;" H. L. Horning, "Motors for Trucks and Tractors;" A. J. Slade, "Motor Truck Transport Preparations," and B. B. Bachman on a motor truck subject.

OLDFIELD DRIVES KING

Barney Oldfield, veteran race pilot, the world's most famous American speed demon, likes the multiple cylinder motor car. He specifies that he likes the eight-cylinder King. His indorsement is highly prized by this manufacturer—the builder of the world's famous popular priced eight cylinder motor car.

Oldfield, during the recent race meets in Southern California, jumped into an eight-cylinder King one day, and was so favorably impressed with the performance of this make of motor car that he wrote the following letter:

"I have just been wheeling one of your new Kings. It is some job. No wonder King has made so big an impression—it's a good product. See you are using Firestones. That 'a boy. You know me."

PAIGE STOCK SIX MAKES NEW RECORD

A stock car in a 300-mile drive, no special preparation, an amateur driver, quite innocent of any intention to make records, yet the best previous performance for the same route beaten by four hours and 20 minutes—that, in brief, is the achievement of a Paige "6-46" in a recent run from San Francisco to Eureka. The peculiar circumstances under which this exceptional record was made seem to make it worth singling out for special mention.

Harry M. Groff, district manager for the Paige at San Francisco, was the man who turned the trick. Mr. Groff is neither a professional driver nor a mechanic. He simply wished to run up from the Golden Gate City to Eureka, 300 miles away on the northwest coast in Humboldt County, for business purposes and he drove an ordinary Paige Six out of stock, starting out without any "tuning up," or other special preparation.

Nevertheless, when he arrived at Eureka, a town of 14,000, at 10:15 o'clock at night, he had covered the distance in 24 hours flat. The best previous record was 28 hours and 20 minutes.

WINS AT BUENOS AIRES

A dispatch just received from Buenos Aires, Argentina, reports that the 100-kilometer championship race held in that city has been won by the four-cylinder Henderson motorcycle, an American machine, which is represented in this city by the Knight Motor Co., 3327 Locust street.

Twelve machines and riders faced the starter for the big event, the pick of the speed men of the country. Some of the machines were of American makes, while a few were English. There were four Indian machines, two Harley-Davidsons, two Flying Merkels one Excelsior and one Henderson, of American makes, while two English machines were in line.

With the exception of the four-cylinder Henderson, which was a stock machine, all were big twins, some of special short-coupled racing design.

Vacuum System

$10

Cut Your Gas Bills

A Stewart Vacuum System on your car will cut your gas bills from 10% to 20%. That's an item of considerable importance nowadays.

Any car lacking this system is a waster of gasoline, out of date and cannot be depended on to supply gasoline to your carburetor under all conditions.

The Stewart Vacuum System is a small tank, about 4" x 10", located under the hood, connected to the carburetor, manifold and to the gas reservoir in the rear of the car. The suction from the engine through the manifold sucks the gas into the Stewart Tank and it flows from tank to carburetor.

This means no more forcing of gas through the carburetor causing a waste of from 10% to 20%.

Above all, if you are buying a new car be sure that it is equipped with the Stewart Vacuum System. It will cost you nothing extra.

Over 60% of all automobile manufacturers have adopted it as regular equipment.

If you are not going to buy a new car this spring bring your old car up to date and cut down unnecessary gasoline expense.

Can be readily installed on any car now in use.

Price $10—complete.

Stewart Products on a car are the safest guide as to the quality of the car as a whole. In selecting your next car be sure it is fully equipped with a Stewart Speedometer; Stewart Tire Pump; Stewart Warning Signal and Stewart Vacuum System. It will cost you nothing extra, for most cars are so equipped.

DEMAND FOR ALLEN CARS INCREASES

"In spite of the fact that the Allen factory worked full capacity all winter and thousands of Allen cars were stored throughout the country, the Allen buyer who comes late in the season may have to wait a while for delivery." This is the way J. E. Wright, vice president of the Allen Motor Co., feels about the coming spring business.

"There was a time not many years ago when it was almost impossible to sell a car in the winter, and the owner who did not store his car during the winter months was either a hero or a maniac. Now it is not only common, but actually customary to run a car all year around.

"The Allen factories are running night and day and will make every possible effort to meet the demand for cars which unquestionably will be far greater than ever before.

"The Allen organization showed remarkable foresight in arranging for a big supply of materials, and the success of their efforts is evidenced by the fact that at the present time they have stock in their storerooms that figures over a million dollars."

KING OF SPAIN BUYS AN AMERICAN CAR

For the second time within a period of three months, King Alfonso XIII of Spain has shown his preference for American built automobiles by purchasing his second Willys-Knight touring car from the Willys-Overland Co. of Toledo, O. This latest order from His Majesty is significant in view of the fact that only a few days elapsed between the arrival of his first Willys-Knight and the issuing of instructions to duplicate the shipment at the earliest possible moment.

HUDSON DRIVER IN INDIANAPOLIS RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, April 29.—Ralph Mulford, who has recently been making speed trials with Hudson cars, has entered the Sixth International Sweepstakes race on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30. Ralph's infallible smile has made him popular among all race drivers and famous the world over. His smile did not even fail him when, in 1912, in order to finish in tenth place and in the money, he kept his car going long after the other nine had finished, much to the discomfort of the officials, who were forced to remain at the track until dark.

Charlie Merz, Indianapolis race driver, has gotten a divorce and come back into the hazardous racing sport. He will drive a Peugeot car at Indianapolis, May 30, in the sixth annual International Sweepstakes race. This car is owned by the Indianapolis Speedway Team Racing Co., said owners having a rule that married men cannot drive. There is something decidedly unique about the circumstances surrounding these Peugeot cars of Merz and his teammate, John Aiken. Both drivers were "raised on gasoline" at the factorf where National cars are built. Both got married and were forced to quit the sport. Both are divorced and both have come back into the game after having retired.

M'KEE WITH PREMIER

Homer McKee, who several years ago was well known to every newspaper reader as an exceedingly clever cartoonist and writer, but who for the last five years has concentrated his efforts on automobile advertising, has accepted the position of director of advertising for the Premier Motor Corporation of Indianapolis, who recently incorporated with a capitalization of $2,500,000.

FORD TRACTOR PLANT LOCATES AT NEWARK

Henry Ford, after months of negotiations and investigation of practically every industrial section within the bounds of the Metropolitan district of the City of New York, has decided to locate an eastern automobile manufacturing plant to manufacture and assemble his latest invention, the "Ford Tractor," on the property of the Newark Factory Sites Incorporated.

Definite announcement of the consummation of Mr. Ford's negotiations and of the details of his huge project was made yesterday by Joseph P. Day of New York, the broker in the transaction.

The property purchased by Mr. Ford consisted of 80 acres located at the head of Newark Bay at the confluence of the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers, midway between Newark and New York City, within a radius of five miles of the city hall of Manhattan. The tract selected by Mr. Ford has a frontage of approximately 2300 feet in Lincoln highway (formerly the Plank road), where it crosses the Passaic River; also 1900 feet along the Passaic River and the same frontage in Central avenue, and is located in the township of Kearney.

REO DEALERS WILL HOLD OPEN WEEK

In line with every other dealer in Reo cars in the United States the Kardell Motor Car Co. will hold open week the first week in May. The salesrooms at 4150-54 Olive street will be kept open until 9 o'clock each night and will be elaborately decorated with plants and flowers. All of the Reo dealers in the territory surrounding St. Louis have been invited in and practically all of them will come.

The Kardell Co. has just closed a contract for its new building at Thirty-second and Locust streets, adjoining the United States Tire Co. The building, 80x130 feet, will be of concrete and handsomely finished with plate glass windows on the first and second floors. Used cars and trucks will be shown on the second floor. The service department will be in the rear of the first floor. This company has been handling the Reo car since 1908 when the Reo one-cylinder sold for $650 and the two-cylinder for $1250. Prior to that time farming implements were handled. The company was incorporated in 1911 by H. W. Kardell, J. C. Kardell and H. F. Fahrenkrog, who are the sole owners.

USED AS STAGE COACHES

Four Overland cars—model 86s—are now plying as up-to-date stage coaches between Phoenix, Roosevelt Dam and Globe, Ariz., over what is known as the "Apache Trail." Two railroad companies have a traffic agreement with this stage line to route transcontinental travelers whenever desired over this road.

After careful consideration and exhaustive investigation, Overland "sixes" were chosen as the cars best available for this country. The route is 120 miles long and in very poor condition, as it was originally constructed for the hauling of material by eight and 10 horse teams. During the construction of the Roosevelt Dam this heavy freight work wore the top surface off the road and it has never been repaired since.

In Fish Creek Canyon the severest service is required of these "sixes," as they usually carry a full complement of passengers and driver and hardly less than 1000 pounds of hand baggage tied on the running boards. The running time is eight hours. The peak of excursion traffic frequently calls for the doubling back of the cars at night from one end of the route to the other.

SCHOOL FOR SERVICE MEN

An epochal step forward in improving automobile service throughout the United States has been registered by the Olds Motor Works, of Lansing, Mich., in the establishment of a permanent school for Oldsmobile service men at its plant.

The first meeting of the school was attended by more than two hundred service men from all parts of the country. Meetings with an equal attendance are promised regularly in the future.

Service men to date have worked under the handicap of being more or less isolated in their work, with experience in the main their only text book. The result has been much lost effort, both in motor car diagnosis, as well as in furnishing prompt, effective, remedy.

The purpose of the Olds Motor Works is to make each service man wearing its monogram as thoroughly familiar with car theory and construction as the factory engineer himself. They are to be expert diagnosticians, men who can probe quickly and surely to the seat of any trouble, and in most cases avert damage before it is done.

CAR SAVES TWO LIVES

Hundreds of stories have been written about lives saved by the speed and endurance of an automobile. It is not often, however, that an automobile owner twice on the same day has the opportunity of saving lives, and that in the face of a terrific blizzard. The car was a Hudson and the driver, its owner, Guy Roberts of New Hartford, Conn.

The feat was accomplished recently at the height of a big snowstorm that swept the Atlantic seacoast. The first trip was made shortly after 6 o'clock in the afternoon, when Mrs. Alex Cadoret was taken to a sanitarium, seriously ill. It was three and a half miles out and as far back. The car had to break a trail throughout the entire distance, but did so with never-failing energy.

Shortly after Mr. Roberts had returned to his home, he was again called upon to rush Miss Ollie Root to the county hospital. She was critically ill with acute appendicitis and it was necessary that she undergo an operation at once. Miss Root was carried into the Hudson by her father. Two young men of the village were taken on to act as ballast. It took one hour and 20 minutes for the Hudson to arrive at Winsted, where the hospital is located.

The Post-Dispatch printed 647,017 Wants last year, a gain of 4096 over 1914, and was the only St. Louis newspaper showing a gain for the year. During this period the Post-Dispatch printed 18,111 more wants than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers COMBINED.

ST. LOUIS DEPOT SHOWS SUBMARINE BATTERY

Few people realize that the marked advance which has been made in the construction of starting and lighting batteries for automobile use has been reflected in the construction of the submarines as used in the United States Navy. The submarine of today is operated entirely while under the surface by energy furnished by a storage battery. While the cells of this battery are of course very much larger than the cells used in a starting and lighting battery, the general construction follows the same lines in the batteries of the exide type made by the Electric Storage Battery Company of Philadelphia.

One of the cells used in the latest types of submarines designed for the United States Navy is on exhibition at the St. Louis Exide Depot, Twenty-first and Walnut streets, and can be seen at that point by any automobile users. The usual submarine contains 120 of these cells and some idea of their size can be gathered from the fact that the total weight of one of these equipments is approximately 68 tons.

The majority of the battery equipments in use in the United States Navy today are one of the Exide types.

MANY DEALERS VISIT LOCAL AUTO PLANT

Interest in the Moon car on the part of dealers is indicated by the large number of dealers that are constantly coming to the factory of the Moon Motor Car Co., to see the car in making.

The number of dealers at the factory the last week was especially large, 14 dealers from various parts of the country having run in to pay their respects.

The recent visitors include F. G. Strobel, salesmanager of the Moon Auto Sales Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.; H. A. Roberts, president of the Rubber City Auto Co., Akron, O.; J. B. Van Wagener, president of the Van Wagener & Trimble Auto Sales Agency, Pittsburg, Pa.; Lester C. Bailey, salesmanager of the Toledo Mercer Co., Toledo, O.; John E. TIRE CHANGE CONTEST

At the recent conference of district managers held at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.'s plant at Akron, O., a tire-changing contest was staged. Under the rules drawn up each contestant was required to remove the side ring of a No-Rim-Cut rim, dismount the casing, reverse and replace it, and put back the side ring. Honors were awarded to James B. Atkins, manager of Goodyear's rim department, who performed the operation in just 13 seconds.

AUTOMOBILE Time Payments

A National System for Automobile Credits

Largely because the automobile industry is so prosperous and so tremendously absorbed in the gigantic task of keeping pace with the demand for cars, there has been no organized system of credit applicable to the purchase of an automobile.

Universal systems of credit are available for the purchase of farm implements, talking machines and other musical instruments, typewriters, sewing machines and innumerable other articles.

But the purchaser of an automobile has been confronted with the necessity of paying cash or else of arranging for credit on some improvised plan.

Local automobile dealers and local banks have coped with this situation as best they could.

But the legitimate demand long since outgrew such limited credit facilities.

The Guaranty Securities Corporation was formed for the purpose of establishing nationally a sound, conservative system for the standardization of automobile credit.

The Corporation is controlled by men of large means and broad experience.

The Guaranty Plan does not encourage the buying of automobiles by persons for whom such a purchase would be an extravagance.

It aims to make credit available anywhere and at any time for firms and individuals who are properly entitled to buy an automobile on credit.

The Guaranty Plan is applicable only in the purchase of cars of recognized reliability which are produced by permanently established responsible concerns, with wide and adequate service facilities to insure that the merchandise value in the car will be maintained.

The purchase can be made through responsible dealers in such cars.

Dealers in approved cars who are authorized to sell under the Guaranty Plan display the emblem of this corporation prominently in their places of business.

Go to your local dealer and ask him to show you the Guaranty Plan Purchase Contract which you would be required to sign.

The contract is a simple, straightforward purchase agreement

Its requirements and provisions are clearly stated, are as simple as those of an ordinary real estate purchase agreement and very similar.

It makes credit available for those who are properly entitled to it, but for those only.

It enables the dealer to sell cars on time payments without any extra expense, without sacrificing any part of his profit and without tying up any part of his capital.

It removes the demand upon local banks for discounts for this form of loans when their funds are more urgently needed in other channels.

But it enables the banks to participate in these discounts to the extent they desire and at such times as they desire, by purchasing debenture bonds secured by the purchasers' notes.

These debentures are issued by this corporation in several convenient denominations, are protected by ample collateral, by the entire capital of this corporation and by other safeguards so that they are short time investments approved by the largest banks of the country.

The plan is operating successfully, and its operation will be extended conservatively to meet the requirements of the public, recognized dealers, and co-operating financial institutions.

Inquiry is invited from those who desire to purchase automobiles, from responsible dealers and from banks who desire further information.

THE
"America's Greatest "Light Six"

The car that just about makes its own roads—

Next in importance only to its marvelously flexible motor is the entire lack of vibration in the Haynes "Light Six."

A scientifically balanced chassis is put on springs of a quality and strength that even cars costing 50 per cent more do not surpass.

The body seats of the Haynes are suspended on springs that yield automatically to every pound of body pressure. The upholstery that covers them is of genuine leather, deeply padded, comfortable and rich in appearance. The motor is so delicately adjusted that a lead pencil can stand on end on the motor block while the engine races at full speed.

An actual test will prove to you that the Haynes smoothes out the bumps in the roughest roads—it really creates its own road-way as actually as is humanely possible.

Telephone or drop us a postal—we will be glad to show you the Haynes in action.

Valspar Resists Texas Hurricane

Mrs. Reyband of Galveston, Tex., tried Valspar on some porch chairs. A few days later a hurricane blew up from the Gulf and the chairs were mercilessly buffeted by the wind and drenched in the rain and salt spray.

Mrs. Reyband expected to find the finish of the chairs ruined. But when the sun came out after many hours of storm the varnish was in exactly as good condition as before.

Mrs. Reyband stated these facts in a letter to Valentine & Company and added: "I believe in recognizing merit when I find it, so I am sending you this letter."

VALENTINE'S VALSPAR
The Varnish That Won't Turn White

This is but an added proof of the satisfaction Valspar gives out-of-doors—on window casings, doors, porch ceilings, furniture and natural wood columns, which should always be Valsparred.

Valspar is also suitable for use on all varnishable woodwork indoors—because it is durable, beautiful and absolutely waterproof.

ENTRIES FOR SHEEPSHEAD NUMBER TWENTY-ONE

The official opening of the automobile racing season for 1916 promises to bring together for a test of supremacy one of the largest fields of cars ever to face a starter, as Everard Thompson, manager of the Sheepshead Bay Speedway, has 21 entries now on file, for the opening events scheduled for May 13.

The Metropolitan Trophy Race, the new classic, asks the pilots to go 150 miles, and has such names as Eddie O'Donnell, who won his first big contest at Corona, defeating celebrated drivers, with a speed averaging 86.5 miles an hour on a road-track.

O'Donnell will be a contender against Rickenbacker, who is coming from Indianapolis with a team of Maxwells, calculated to stand the high speed of the Bay bowl.

Dario Resta, the winner of the Harkness trophy in 1915, is another star who will be a contender. He is entered with his blue Peugeot, which won two championships last year.

Johnnie Aiken is a speed demon who will pilot a Peugeot time destroyer in the classic with Ralph Mulford pitting the same make of car against it.

Billy Chandler and Dave Lewis, with a team of Crawfords, are entered for the big events, and promise to be dangerous contenders.

Entries so far are two Erwin 40's; three Peugeots, three Crawfords, two Dusenbergs, two Maxwells, four Delages, two Sunbeam Sixes, Mulford Special, Mulford-Olsen Special and J. J. R. Special.

LONG DISTANCE TIRES

A tire which will reduce car-upkeep expense and at the same time give increased mileage is what automobile owners have been looking for and is exactly what they get in Quaker Tempered rubber tires.

For more than four years, users of Quaker tires have been reporting to the factory in Philadelphia wonderful results from the use of these tires. These reports, while very gratifying, were not surprising to the factory for in the making of Quaker tires, every effort had been made to manufacture a tire which would withstand the hardest kind of usage, the worst roads and all kinds of climatic conditions. To acomplish these results, the highest quality of rubber and the finest Sea Island duck were used in their manufacture. To these high class products the company added its exclusive and secret process of tempering the rubber.

It is in the treatment of the rubber used that Quakers give such mileage. More than that, tempered rubber, by its shock-absorbing qualities reduces the wear and tear upon the car and gives much additional comfort in riding. It does not take a Quaker user long to determine these facts for himself; nor is it difficult in such cases to explain the reason why a user of such tires refuses to give up Quakers.

Quaker Tires, or as they are better known by tourists all over the country, the "Miles Cheaper" Tires, are noted for their toughness, elasticity, resiliency and shock-absorbing powers. It is in the treatment of the tire rubber used, together with the way these tires are built up—layer upon layer—that they give such wonderful results. The tempering of the rubber is a feature not to be found in other tires, saving the tire so that it gives excessive mileage. Frequently, car-users report mileages of 8000, 10,000 and 12,000 from Quakers and were unable to ascribe any particular reasons for such good results.

CHARACTER IN A CAR

"The character of a motor car and the character of a man are very much alike," said L. H. Bill, general manager of the Thomas B. Jeffery Co., in an interview. "A man's character can only be developed by the experiences of the man and a car's character can only be developed by the experience of the manufacturers. Nobody can hope to produce a car of character offhand.

"We have a striking example of this rather homely truth in our own production—the Jeffery Four. The motor is the refined and perfected descendant of the one with which, two years ago, the Jeffery engineers introduced the high-speed, long-stroke, high-efficiency motor to America. They got their idea for it from the experience of French aviators. The character of the motor was further developed by two years of automobile experience until it has become a highly individualized product.

"The chassis is the result of 12 years of work, according to the men in the factory. Some even say that 20 is nearer the mark, because they learned a great many principles employed in its construction in the old days when we manufactured bicycles. The plainest thing about it, however, is that it represents three years of constant work at the same model; refinements and simplifications were made each year until today it is the simplest chassis in its class."

HOW TO SAVE TIRES

"It is really surprising the difference in service people get out of their tires and inner tubes," commented J. E. Newell, local distributor of the Dort car, today. "Of course the Dort being a light car and well overtired, we get a good many reports of big tire mileages. Some of them you would hardly believe; but it is not at all unusual to have owners record mileages of seven and eight thousand miles, and the factory has cases where this has been almost doubled.

"The owner who wants a big tire mileage can get it, and big gasoline mileage along with it, if he will observe a few simple rules, and one of the most important of these lies in the way he stops and starts his car. Just note that man pulling up in front. See how he shut off his power almost a rod away and just coasted up to the curb. He saved gas, his tires and his car all at once. Now note that fellow. See how he has driven right up to the curb and then jammed on his brakes. His car slid a foot or more, and in that one time he puts more wear and strain on his rear tires than a [illegible] ordinary driving."

DUMA TOLD CZAR HAS BEEN ASSURED THE DARDANELLES

Allies Said to Have Agreed to Russian Demand Last Month.

PETROGRAD, April 10.—Correspondence of the Associated Press).—There is no longer any doubt in the public mind here that the Allies reached a complete agreement some time ago to the effect that in case the entente Powers are victorious Russia is to have possession of the Dardanelles after the war. Prof. Miliukoff, the Liberal leader, speaking in the Duma, made the assurance of such an agreement definite when he said:

"The end of March, 1915, is a date which is well worth the remembrance by the Russian people. That is the date when a definite agreement was reached between us and our allies regarding the future of the Dardanelles."

Miliukoff is the creator of the "progressive bloc," the greatest force in Russian politics today, and is closely affiliated with the foreign office. In the course of his speech, which was reported verbatim in all the Petrograd newspapers, he said:

"The annexation of the Dardanelles is in no way an attempt to enlarge the Russian frontiers. Russia is big enough, and has no need for new territories. But her complete development without an outlet to a free sea cannot possibly be realized. In our time, when the old idea of continentalism is dead, when international relations demanding a sea way have become the order of the day, the State without such communications is an organism without the necessary organs.

"You can say to me, 'If Turkey had been wiser we could not possibly then have realized this aim. We would have had to wait.' But when Liman von Sanders entered Constantinople, when the Turkish War Minister become the servant of Germany and the Turkish fleet became controlled by the Germans, the while situation changed. We fully realize what is the plan of Germany, and for what she is carrying on this whole war. It is clear to everybody that in the case of victory Germany would create in Europe a central state, and would capture or subjugate Turkey economically, and then politically. 'Berlin to Bagdad,' that is the German idea; and since it has been created we have no other choice. The question now is not whether the Straits will become Russian or remain Turkish; the question is whether they will become Russian or will remain German."

MISSOURI SUFFRAGISTS WILL MEET FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

New Form of State Organization to Be Discussed at Springfield Gathering.

The Missouri Equal Suffrage Association will hold its anual convention at Springfield, Mo., next Friday and Saturday.

Besides prominent suffragists of the State there will be present the recording secretary of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association, Mrs. James Morrison of Chicago, and Miss Harriet Vittum of Chicago.

The Springfield Business Men's League has invited the official board and the speakers of the convention to a luncheon Friday, at which time Miss Vittum will speak on "Woman's Citizenship of Chicago." Friday evening the delegates and guests to the convention will be entertained at a banquet at which there will be short talks. Saturday will be devoted to the business of the convention. A new form of state organization will be discussed, as well as the initiative campaign.

The officers of the Missouri Equal Suffrage Association are: President, Mrs. Walter McNab Miller, Columbia; vice president-at-large, Mrs. Henry N. Ess, Kansas City; vice president, Mrs. Charles Passmore, St. Louis; corresponding secretary, Mrs. William R. Haight, Brandsville; recording secretary, Mrs. J. W. Million, Mexico; treasurer, Miss Mary Bulkley, St. Louis; auditor, Mrs. Richard Taaffe, Carthage.

HOMELESS WOMAN FINDS SON BY LETTER IN POST-DISPATCH

He Is Well-to-Do Ranchman Near Los Angeles, and She Will Go from Here to His Home.

A letter from Mrs. Louise Hindman, a homeless woman, published last month in the Post-Dispatch, has resulted in her finding her son, James G. E. Wright, a well-to-do ranchman, living near Los Angeles.

Mrs. Hindman is 63 years old and in her letter she said that, thrown upon her own resources, she had been unable to find a way to make a living. She was then being cared for by a friend who was herself in poor circumstances.

The publication of the letter caused a visitor from the Provident Association to see Mrs. Hindman. The visitor learned her son and other relatives formerly had lived in Iowa. A letter was sent to the Secretary and Overseer of the Poor at Ottumwa, Io. A reply came almost immediately inclosing a letter that had been received by Z. T. Earle of that city from Wright inquiring about his mother. Investigation showed that Wright is Mrs. Hindman's son. She is now preparing to go to live with him.

Press Club Night at Library.

A special visitors' night, arranged for the Press Club, will be held at Central Library Tuesday evening, 7:30 to 9:30. A collection of books, prints and other material relating to Shakspeare, partly the property of the Library and partly loaned through the Franklin Club, will be displayed in the art room.

Will Give Minstrel Show.

A minstrel and dance will be given at the Army and Navy Club, 3621 Washington avenue, Monday night.

EMPEROR PERPETUATES VOICE

Frand Joseph Tells Talking Machine His Ideas as to War.

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 29.—Emperor Francis-Joseph of Austria was recently persuaded to hand his personal ideas about the war down to posterity through talking machine records in German and Hungarian, according to a report in Swiss newspapers.

It is added that the records will not be made public until after the Emperor's death.

Convention of Drummers.

The Missouri Drummers' Association will hold a three-day convention at Moberly, Mo., beginning May 11. Business sessions, baseball games, barbecues, receptions and dances are features of the program.

Thoroughly Tested and APPROVED by the Council of the American Home 44 Years of Endorsement

A Proud Record of Satisfaction

The discriminating buyers of the American homes determine the fate of any article offered them. If it fulfils the claims made for it, its sale is continuous and growing. If it has real usefulness and reliability the public regards it as a friend, and no amount of deformation can prevent its success.

Peruna Has Stood the Test

Its use has been beneficial everywhere. It numbers its friends among thousands upon thousands who have used it for any and all catarrhal conditions and as a good tonic. It has more than made good for it fully supplies the demand for an ever-ready-to-take family medicine, reliable and helpful in colds, coughs, impaired digestion, catarrh and weakened and depressed health.

Mrs. Elizabeth Reuther, No. 508 Twelfth Street, N. W., Washington, D.C. writes: "I am pleased to endorse Peruna as a splendid medicine for catarrh and stomach trouble, from which I suffered for several years I took it for several months and at the end of that time found my health was restored and have felt splendidly ever since."

"I would not be without Peruna. Although it was over ten years ago that I first gave you my testimonial, I am of the same opinion as when I wrote it and give you the privilege to use it as you may see fit. I still use Peruna when necessary."

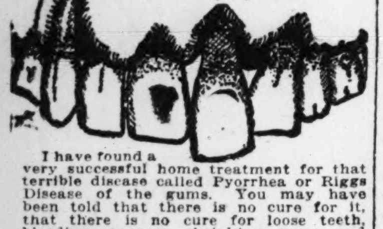
Loose Teeth Sore Gums

(PYORRHEA)

I am a Dentist of 25 years' Experience. I Have Perfected a Most Successful Home Treatment for Pyorrhea, the Terrible Tooth and Gum Disease, and All Its Symptoms.



I have found a very successful home treatment for that terrible disease called Pyorrhea or Riggs Disease of the gums. You may have been told that there is no cure for it, that there is no cure for loose teeth, bleeding, spongy, shrinking gums and dropping out of teeth; but many who have used my home treatment say there is, AND PROVE IT.

Don't have good teeth pulled. You may save every one of them—make them firm, healthy, sound teeth again.

Hundreds of patients say Dr. Willard's home treatment stops the teeth from being loose or wobbly and that it has done so in cases where the patient could almost pull his teeth out with his fingers, where the gums were soft and spongy, bleeding and shrinking away from the teeth. You may make these conditions positively and absolutely disappear and end your Pyorrhea. There is no pain, no fussing, no waste of time.

The letters I will send you from people in all parts of the country will tell you that they now enjoy good teeth, good chewing and a good stomach once more. If you have any of the symptoms mentioned, then Pyorrhea, sometimes called Riggs Disease, is on the way—you are bound to lose your teeth and have to wear those awful false teeth, if you don't find a cure for it now. Simply send your name and address on coupon below and I will tell you all about this dreadful disease and how my simple home treatment may save your teeth, without pain and at small expense.

JEAN DE ARCS IN RUSSIAN ARMIES WIN DECORATIONS

Vera ——— Wears Same Uniform as Men Companions, and Shares Difficulties of Campaign

TANJA CHARMING AMAZON

Sister of Charity Captures Hostile French When Masculine Troops Hesitate to Attack.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

IN RUSSIA, March 29.—It was near Novasiolky. The Russian troops were streaming up to the forests to the south of Styr, in order to drive home the victory that had been gained. The Russians had taken Novasiolky by assault from the Germans, turned the Austrian trench and captured 2000 prisoners. The defeated Germans were bombarding the village, which was soon in flames. They were about to counter attack, in an attempt to regain the lost positions.

For the Russians it was a question of holding what had been won, repulsing the enemy, breaking his lines and occupying to as great a depth as possible the forests into which he hoped to be able to retire in case of danger.

The reserve regiments were concealed in the woods. The men were smoking and eating around the camp fires, and, with eyes that had become indifferent to misfortune, watching the long processions of prisoners and wounded. Slowly the new regiments marched in the direction of the enemy, to continue the attacks or replace the exhausted troops. An interminable line of gray forms issued from the forest, and entered the plain to the south of the Styr.

Eyes of a Woman.

Suddenly a soldier quit the ranks and slipped ahead, in front of the others. The soldier had hair falling over his shoulders and the eyes of a woman.

A British correspondent questioned his companions. They replied:

"Yes, it is a woman. Have you never heard of this Vera ——, a good and brave soldier, who has been decorated?"

The correspondent expressed astonishment, and his companions continued:

"Certainly, there is a rule against women entering the ranks; but the authorities shut their eyes to a few exceptions, which they seem to think are quite innocent. At the beginning of the war some women managed to get on the register under men's names. There were at first some who wanted to follow a husband, fiance, or father. And as their conduct left nothing to be desired—you will understand that the least weakness would easily have been discovered—there seemed to be no reason for refusing to the wife or sweetheart of a deserving soldier the sweet comfort of a companionship which did no injury to the service. There was no need for special measures for removing these elements if they proved to be hurtful to discipline; one had only to apply the rule which had been previously ignored. On the other hand, the women who are inspired only by martial idealism and patriotic sentiments are rare. Vera is one of them."

No Timidity, No Coquetry.

Vera, strongly built, has a high color and large eyes that betray no timidity or coquetry. She wears precisely the same uniform as her comrades, with whom she shares all the difficulties of the campaign. She had been wounded, and so the authorities became cognizant of her sex.

In Volhynia the Russian troops had been camped in the forests for weeks and weeks. They had been subject to all the inclemency and harshness of the weather and life in the open air—wind and rain and intolerable cold during the long nights when no fires were allowed. None of this had had any effect on the spirit of the men. But there is a factor which must be taken into account in explaining certain phenomena among all the armies in the field. It is the absence of female society.

Thus for several weeks these soldiers had not seen even the shadow of a woman. On the day when they took the few villages on the other bank of the Styr the inhabitants returned in a long procession to see what had remained of their homes after all the disasters. There were a few girls who had come back with their parents sitting near the soldiers on the wooden beams that had been collected together for the purpose of strengthening the bridges, hastily built during the night. But the soldiers, all young men, chatted among themselves and took no notice of the women, who, it may be remarked, were not without pretentions to freshness and beauty. Nothing that the correspondent had seen in Russia during the war had made such an impresion on him as this curious indifference to female society.

Under a Masculine Name.

In one of the regiments serving in Galicia was another woman soldier. An officer said that the men had concealed the sex of one of their comrades from the authorities. The officer himself had discovered the truth accidentally. He wished to take the soldier as his orderly on account of "his" good conduct and youth, and had summoned "him" to his quarters. He was struck by the face and eyes; he asked questions, and the girl began by denying, but, on being pressed, she burst into tears and confessed. She had been enrolled under a masculine name, that of Tanja Kakourine. She was 16 years of age, and her long cloak helped to conceal her juvenile figure.

If her companions suspected anything they hid their suspicions from each other, and thus she shared all the difficulties of the service and all the dangers of battle with the others. For she is brave and feels happy in this terrible life.

Mother Once a Soldier.

In identical circumstances and the same disguise Tanja's mother joined a Russian regiment in the war against Turkey in 1877. She fought like the other soldiers, and if she is still living her Amazon's spirit must be deeply moved by the bravery of her daughter. Tanja herself has just been proposed for the cross and medal of St. George. The conduct of this girl is irreproachable. She has a pleasing appearance, a round face, shining with health, and looks well in her cloak. She has preferences for nobody, and the men, protecting her by common accord, act towards her with touching solicitude.

This little Jeanne d'Arc talks and laughs like a child, but at the same time she has a charming seriousness and a very strict sense of her personal worth. These qualities protect her like an invisible armor. If a soldier dared to touch little Tanja he would most likely be punished by the whole regiment.

A Russian sister of charity finding herself close to a company which had lost all its officers, placed herself at its head and captured a hostile trench before which the troops were hesitating. Mortally wounded, she was, by Imperial command, decorated with the Cross of St. George in enamel—a distinction to which only officers are entitled.

SCORES OF BRITISH SOLDIERS HAVE MARRIED FRENCH GIRLS

Many Plan to Settle Down in Republic When War Ends; Others to Take Brides to England.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT, April 29.—Army officers along this front say that scores of British soldiers have married French girls since the expeditionary force landed in France, and hundreds of others have become engaged.

Some plan to take their wives back to England, but the majority have declared their intention of settling in France when the war is over.

The love affairs of Tommy cause his superiors considerable amusement, for he knows no French, excepting the little that he has picked up since he came to France, and his sweetheart knows no English, save what Tommy has taught her.

When a Physician Prescribes Whiskey

Duffy's
Pure
Malt

you should have in mind the true medicinal whiskey—Duffy's. Because every day experience proves that a good stimulant like Duffy's properly used will accomplish much to keep the old young and the young strong and vigorous. Physicians of wide repute advocate the moderate use of alcoholic stimulants because, "in disease whiskey is a rapid and trustworthy restorative. In many cases it may be truly described as life-saving, owing to its power to sustain cardiac and nervous energy, while protecting the wasting nitrogenous tissues."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

taken in tablespoonful doses before meals and on retiring as directed, stimulates the mucous surfaces of the stomach and activates the natural digestive juices so that full nutriment from the food eaten is assimilated into the blood. The body thus given its full proportion of nourishment is assured abundant strength.

A Suggestion for Mothers of Growing Children

A Mild Laxative at Regular Intervals Will Prevent Constipation.

A vital point upon which all schools of medicine seem to agree is that normal regularity of the bowels is an essential to good health. The importance of this is impressed particularly on mothers of growing children.

A very valuable remedy that should be kept in every home for use as occasion arises is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a compound of simple laxative herbs that has been prescribed by Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., for more than twenty-five years, and which can now be obtained in any well-stocked drug store for fifty cents a bottle.

In a recent letter to Dr. Caldwell, Mrs. H. C. Turner, 844 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I bought a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for my baby, Roland Lee Turner, and find it works just like you said it would. It is fine for the stomach and bowels."

ROLAND LEE TURNER

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should be in every home. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

BRITISH TURNING OUT 50,000 STEEL HELMETS EACH MONTH

It Is Considered by the English to Be Superior to the One Worn by the French.

LONDON, April 29.—The steel helmet manufactured for the British soldiers at the rate of 50,000 a month is believed by the British authorities to be the best designed and most serviceable headpiece that can be found. Advantage was taken by the designers of the experience gained from the use of the French helmet or casque, and faults which had developed in those were remedied.

The British helmet is a round cap of the hardest steel, with a narrow "lip" back and front, and designed with a much lower pitch than the French type. It is moreover perfectly smooth, having no flutings or projections for bullets or fragments of shrapnel to strike, while its low pitch presents the smallest possible target for a direct hit from any direction.

Inside the dome of the helmet are rubber studs, placed to take the shock of a blow struck from any direction. They come between the helmet and its double lining of felt and wadding. The wadding comes next to the head and covers it closely, so that if a bullet should penetrate the steel cap and inflict a scalp wound, the wadding would act as dressing. The helmet is secured on the head by a stout chin strap.

STUDENTS DISLIKE MILITARY TRAINING BUT DON'T SHIRK IT

Few Attempt to Be Excused from Requirements at University of Illinois.

2160 ARE BEING DRILLED

Estimated That School Would Furnish 2000 Volunteers in Case of War.

Dr. Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois, told a Post-Dispatch reporter, when he was in St. Louis Wednesday, of the work for national defense being done in the university, where 2160 men are under military training, three hours a week.

Dr. James is advocating military training in colleges and universities as the best means of providing qualified officers for a volunteer army. He went before the House committee on Military Affairs a few weeks ago and complained that only one officer had been sent to the University of Illinois to attend to the military training of more than 2000 young men.

By this complaint, Dr. James said, he did not get any more officers, but he did get a Major instead of a Second Lieutenant. He holds that at least four officers are needed, and that five would find enough to do.

The "land grant colleges," which include most of the state universities and some state colleges of agriculture, are all under obligation to give military training. This obligation is carried out in different ways at different schools, but the University of Illinois has the largest number of men under military training, unless its number is exceeded by that of the University of California. The total number of students now taking military instruction in these schools he estimates at 30,000.

What Illinois U. Has Done.

"The State of Illinois has done its part," said Dr. James. "The university has spent more on military instruction than its whole original endowment, which was $635,000 for all purposes. It has built an armory which has the largest drill hall in the world, so far as I know.

"All the members of the freshman and sophomore classes are required to give three hours a week to military training. The whole schedule of the university, for these two classes, is arranged around the military instruction. There is no classroom work for freshmen or sophomores between 4 and 6 p. m.

"Some of the faculty consider this an interference with the instruction, but we consider that it is what we owe to the nation.

"I cannot say that military instruction is popular with the students. It is compulsory, and nothing that is compulsory is very likely to be popular. But the requests for excuses are very few. Excuses are obtainable on two grounds—physical disability and religious beliefs which are opposed to military service.

"In the last year only one man offered the excuse of religious belief. He admitted that his own religious beliefs were not opposed to war, but said his parents held such beliefs. As he was 21 years old we decided that his own beliefs were what counted, and he was directed to report for drill.

"Our students furnish their own uniforms, at a cost of $17 to each man. These uniforms are worn, as a rule, only at drill time. Last summer the university sent a larger number of recruits than went from any other university to the training camp at Ludington, Mich.

Commendation from Gen. Wood.

"I had been in some doubt as to the military value of our training, and when Gen. Leonard Wood visited the university I asked his candid opinion. He told me the work was of the highest value. Gen. William H. Carter later gave a similar opinion, and said that the men trained in the university course of drill would be inestimably more valuable as volunteer soldiers than untrained men.

"In the event of a call for volunteers there is no doubt that hundreds of our students would enlist. Some have estimated that 2000 of our 4200 men would volunteer. This would include a large number of men trained for the duties of commissioned officers. Besides, there are outside the university thousands of graduates who have had the same training, many of whom would be available.

Dr. James believes military service in colleges and universities to be of the fullest value, must be universal and compulsory. Voluntary military organizations tend to fall to pieces, because of athletics and the other demands of student life, he said. This was the case at the University of Chicago, where a thriving military organization was formed after the Spanish-American War. The organization gradually disintegrated and the training was finally abandoned.

Harvard, Yale and Princeton Universities are trying the plan of teaching military history, military science and strategy, and encouraging students in these branches to enter summer training camps. Dr. James is interested in this plan, but says it is not certain how effective it will be. At the University of Michigan the students and faculty voted for compulsory military training, but the regents have not seen fit to install such a system.

Military service does not take the place, or the time, of athletics at the University of Illinois. If a student is on the football team in the fall he may be excused from military training then, but must make up, in the winter or spring, all the hours he has lost.

In his talk before the Business Men's League at luncheon Wednesday, Dr. James branded as "criminal bunk" the idea that the country could rely for its defense on a voluntary system of service. He said universal military service was demanded by the necessity of the times and the spirit of democracy, but he said he did not think the people realized this as yet, or that Congress was ready to do anything about it.

LONDON PAPER WANTS TARIFF PUT ON STYLES FROM AMERICA

Finds This Country Is Superceding Paris as Maker of Modes for Women.

LONDON, April 29.—England has at last awakened to the fact that America has become a great power in the world of fashion, and that many of the ideas for women's apparel which formerly came from France now emanate from New York.

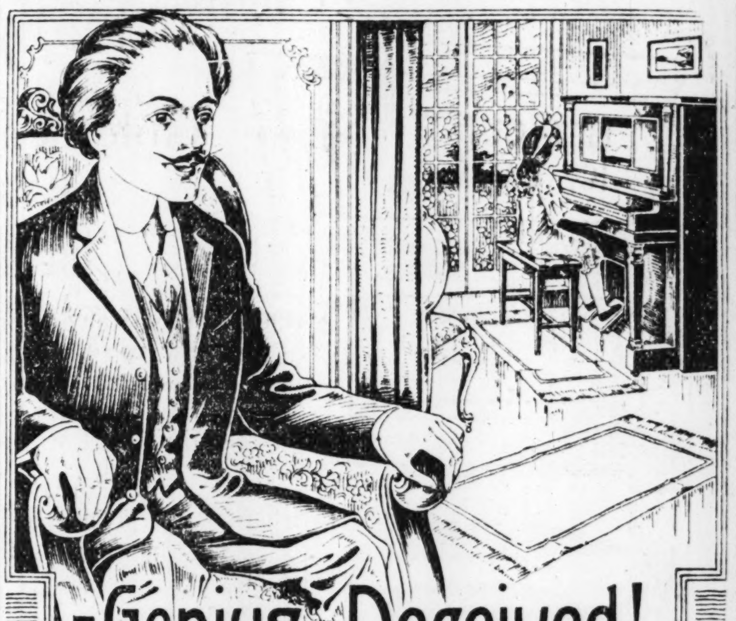
A London morning paper publishes a long editorial appealing to the Government to protect home industries by clapping a heavy duty on styles imported from New York. It says, in part:

"Our French allies are concentrating their energies on the war so closely that Paris fashions have almost ceased to exist," it says, "and America is making frantic efforts to establish herself as the maker of the mode. She may very well be made to pay for her opportunity.

"It is hardly decent in war time for women to wear fashionable dresses at all, yet if the fashions came from Paris we should find it difficult to place an embargo on them. Luckily we are not faced with that dilemma, and can impose a trifling duty on dresses from Paris and a very heavy one on dresses from America. Every imported model for fashionable wear should be made to bear a Government stamp."

Woman's Auxiliary Election.

At the annual election of officers of the St. Louis Woman's Organization of the National Association of Retail Druggists at the Planters Hotel last week, the following were elected: Mrs. A. J. Hoenny, president; Mrs. Fred Fricke, vice president; Mrs. F. Uhlich, secretary; Mmes. Rich and Kring, corresponding secretaries; Mrs. Louis Fischer, treasurer.



-Genius Deceived!

The picture above illustrates an incident which occurred while a well-known pianist was visiting a musical friend. In an adjoining room was a HADDORFF Style "L" Player Piano, and while the genius was waiting for his friend to come in the host's little ten-year-old daughter, ignorant of the great pianist's presence, went to the piano and played a roll which was already on. As it happened, this roll was Wagner's Pilgrim's Chorus from Tannhauser, a very difficult composition and a favorite with the great genius. So perfect was the rendition of this difficult piece that this wonderful pianist was dazed when told it was played on the HADDORFF PLAYER by his friend's little girl.

It is a common occurrence for local musicians to be deceived in this way while in the House of Thiebes—it happens every day.

When great musicians are amazed at the "Human Touch" of the HADDORFF, doesn't it seem reasonable that YOU, too, will be pleasantly surprised? With a HADDORFF YOU can be a great pianist.

We cordially invite your inspection. Our salesmen will gladly demonstrate this Player even if you are not quite ready to buy. Will you call?

How Nuxated Iron Helped Me To Whip Frank Moran

Jess Willard Tells Secret of His Easy Victory. Also reveals hitherto untold secret of his great triumph over Jack Johnson; Says

IRON IS GREATEST OF ALL STRENGTH BUILDERS

Ordinary Nuxated Iron will often increase the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent, in two weeks' time.

consider having plenty of iron in my blood is the secret of my great strength, power and endurance.

Jess Willard

SPECIAL NOTE.—Dr. E. Sauer, a well-known physician who has studied widely in both this country and Europe, has been specially employed to make a thorough investigation into the real secret of the great strength, power and endurance of Jess Willard, and the marvelous value of nuxated iron as a strength-builder.

NEW YORK.—Upon being interviewed at his apartment in the Colonial Hotel, Mr. Willard said: "Yes, I have a chemist with me to study the value of different foods and products as to their power to produce great strength and endurance, both of which are so necessary in the prize ring. On his recommendation I have often taken nuxated iron and I have particularly advocated the free use of iron by all those who wish to obtain great physical and mental power. Without it I am sure that I should never have been able to whip Jack Johnson so completely and easily as I did, and while training for my bout with Frank Moran, I regularly took nuxated iron, and I am certain that it was a most important factor in my winning so easily." Continuing Dr. Sauer said: "Mr. Willard's case is only one of hundreds which I could cite from my own personal experience, which proves conclusively the astonishing power of nuxated iron to restore strength and vitality even in most complicated chronic conditions.

"Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength-builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

"Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."—E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE.—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Paule Drug Co. and all other druggists.—ADV.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear brother, William E. Fischer, who died May 2, 1915.

Just one year ago you left me,
How I miss you, Willie dear;
You are gone, but not forgotten
By the one who loved you dear.
Sadly missed by his SISTER.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mary Schweiss, who passed away April 26, 1915.

A loving mother, true and kind,
No friend like her on earth we'll find.
God called her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.

In Memoriam.

In memory of Louisa Schuttenhelm, who died April 28, 1915.

We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest ways,
Loving hearts will often linger
Round the grave where you are laid.

Sadly missed by
BROTHER, SISTERS-IN-LAW, NIECES AND NEPHEWS.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our mother, Henrietta Swanson (nee Sager), who passed away on April 28, 1914, beloved of her children and greatly missed by them.

TO MOTHER.
To the one who loved us
When fortune was bright,
But more when the sky
Was o'ercast;
Whose heart revealed,
Yet more concealed,
Our mother, first and last.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother, Katherine Rollberg, who departed this life May 3, 1915.

A loving mother, true and kind,
No friend like her on earth we'll find.
God called her home, it was His will,
But in our heart she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.
Sadly missed by her

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving remembrance of our dearest beloved mother, Henrietta Kompit, who died April 28, 1913.

Peaceful be your sleep, dear mother,
A loving mother, true and kind,
No friend like her on earth we'll find.
Those who saw you in your casket,
Pure and white and oh, so fair,
Thought you were the light of heaven
As you lay so sweetly there.
Rest in peace, our dear mother.
Sadly missed by

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Fred Lebermann, who passed away two years ago, April 29, 1914.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
And while he lies in peaceful sleep
His memory we shall always keep.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, SISTERS, BROTHERS, AND ALL THOSE WHO LOVED HIM. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of my husband, John Bluedorn, who passed away May 3, 1914.

Two years it will be since we laid you to rest,
And placed your cold, hands upon your breast.
In silence you suffered, with patience you bore,
Until God called you home to suffer no more.
Sadly missed by his wife, relatives and friends.
MRS. LOUISE BLUEDORN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear son and brother, Frank Buehler, who passed away April 29, 1915.

'Tis just a year ago today
Since you from us passed away,
We hope some day again to meet
And with God's blessing may we greet.
We think of you each night and morn
And oftentimes we feel forlorn,
Since you, dear Frank, to heaven have flown,
But it was God's wish to take you home.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS AND BROTHER.

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear baby, Margaret Agnes Stewart, who passed away one year ago, May 1, 1915.

Just one year ago today
Since our dear baby passed away,
We saw her suffer, heard her sigh,
With aching hearts and weeping eyes.
We saw her sinking, hour by hour,
Yet could not stay death's awful power.
But now she calmly sleeps at last,
All pain, all aches, all sufferings past.
Sadly missed by her
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTER AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

Have You Wondered How Some Persons "Get Things Done?"

In almost any office in St. Louis you will see a valuable clerk, stenographer, bookkeeper or other employe who came to the house through a Post-Dispatch Want Ad. In the home you will see a servant—whose history in that house dates back to a want advertisement—and a musical instrument, or an odd piece of bric-a-brac or furniture, or a set of books—there as a result of want advertisements.

Post-Dispatch Want Ads are busy in St. Louis. They have accomplished things—brought about things—initiated enterprises, and consummated them. And what they HAVE DONE is but a slight hint of what they ARE TO DO.

How can these effective little messengers be of service to you?

Phone your want ad—call 6600, Olive or Central—or leave the ad with your nearest druggist.

Due to our factory being in St. Louis, we are in a position to rebuild and fix up our used cars better than if we were just an agency. Should you be in the market for a used car and fail to see our bargains, you are only cheating yourself. We give terms and service and same treatment with used cars as with new ones. There is a new manager in the office, and he is anxious to make a good start. Get the tip.

MILLS, HOME BUILDERS,

Other people build good houses, of course, but for beauty of design and charming interior our houses stand alone. The most modern apartment could offer you no more and there is something in that vine and fig tree business after all; something money cannot buy, but it is here for you in these little houses, along with our good wishes. Come out and see them, they will stand inspection. Mills Home Builders, Overland, Mo. No. 28. (c)

NOT SO BAD

HAYDEN'S BOULEVARD HEIGHTS on S. King's highway, served by the Cherokee and Chouteau Southampton cars, 40 minutes' ride from downtown; 5-cent car fare; is doing something all the time; contract has been let for two more of these dandy 4-family 3-room modern flats; another party expects to close for ground on which he will erect a 4-family building and two small cottages. In the past 10 days 2 California bungalows have been disposed of, making a total of six since January, which is not bad for dull times. There are 10 more of these bungalows about ready, located on South King's highway and Neosho st.; come out and see them today; you can buy them on easy terms, and a part in trade. They are 4 and 6 rooms and are the last word in a nobby, up-to-date house. Builders are invited to look at the vacant ground suited for flats or small homes; we can use some trade, small monthly payment notes, and can help finance building. See

This Is May Day

The feast of wild flowers, when custom and tradition bid us spend the day in the open, close to Nature. Gather the beauty spread before us so bountifully by Nature's lavish hand. Breathe the pure air of the country and store up new energy and new courage for next week's business battles.

Come Out Today

to Kathmar Acres, for bounteous Nature has been partial to this section and has lavished her rich gifts more freely here than in any other part of the county. Blossoming fruit trees make the hills of the Florissant valley white, while the modest violet and other wild flowers in the dells are not too modest nor retiring to be found by the children. You can buy an acre in for the rent money you are now paying and have beautiful surroundings all the year.

To go to Kathmar Acres on the car line take the Kirkwood-Ferguson car at Wellston, change to the Florissant division at the transfer point just beyond Ramona Park—get off at Genevieve avenue. Fare five cents. Natural Bridge road is the direct automobile road to Kathmar Acres. Come out today—salesmen on the grounds.

The Finest Brick Cottages in South St Louis

On Germania st., one-half block east of the southern terminus of the Cherokee car line.

We have just completed 15 brick cottages, with 4 rooms and bath, hot and cold water, wired for electric lights, piped for gas, cemented cellar throughout, fine cement walks around each house and back to alley.

If one of these houses were built today at the present prevailing prices of building material it would cost every cent of $2700; however, we have built them at the prices prevailing last fall, and can sell you one of them at the extremely low price of $2300.

Take a trip to the end of Cherokee car line and inspect them. They are extra well built and well arranged. You will be surprised what a big bargain is being offered you here. We will take several hundred dollars cash down and the balance on easy monthly payments.

Don't miss to look at these bargains today and make your selection.

BEAUTIFUL

SOUTHMOOR

—BRENTMOOR DISTRICT

Offers Exclusive Home Sites at Moderate Prices

LOCATION Southmoor is on Pennsylvania Avenue—300 yards south of Wydown Avenue—immediately south of Brentmoor and Forest Ridge. It overlooks Forest Park, Washington University and Hillcrest on the east and the broad valley of Webster Groves and Kirkwood on the west. It is from 60 to 80 feet higher than Lindell Boulevard at Skinker Road. Southmoor is convenient to schools and churches.

EXCLUSIVENESS Southmoor's restrictions and improvements are practically the same as Brentmoor's. The owners either live in Southmoor or Brentmoor or expect to build homes there. Naturally they are interested in securing the best conditions, and not being forced to sell, purchasers are assured of protection, and that lots will be disposed of only to desirable home builders. Under no circumstances will Southmoor lots be auctioned. Streets, sidewalks, gutters, sewers and gas are all in and paid for, and are of the best—the lasting kind.

EXCEPTIONAL VALUE Lots are of generous width, with an average depth of about 200 feet, but not large enough to be burdensome. As a special inducement to early buyers, we are authorized to make very low prices.

Go out to Southmoor and see for yourself what an attractive homesite it is. Take the Clayton car to Pennsylvania Avenue and walk 300 yards south to the entrance, or drive out Lindell Boulevard and Wydown Avenue.

YOUR LAST CHANCE!

1916 will see all Little River Drainage District lands in firm hands and most of it permanently held; I believe unimproved land now selling from $30 to $65 will not be obtainable below $100 before the close of 1917; I and my correspondents have listed over 50,000 acres for cut-over unimproved land, which we will sell at $35 to $55; some of this land is as fine as there is in the entire district and is today well worth double what we are selling it for; terms, one-fourth to one-half cash, balance to suit. Box H-276, Post-Dispatch.

IT IS FORESIGHT!

Not hindsight that lays the foundation of great fortunes; the undeveloped lands in the Little River Drainage District, Southeast Missouri, present a rare opportunity for investment at present prices, which are ridiculously low. I can sell you as good unimproved land as can be found in the district at $40 to $65. The drainage tax will average under $15. It can be cleared for $20 and much of it is $300 land; I have inspected every tract listed with me and none of the soil looks under the $200 class. I have 28 tracts aggregating nearly 12,000 acres to offer and am satisfied I will sell them all before snow flies. Are you to be one of the lucky purchasers? Box H-270, Post-Dispatch.

MINING

NEW OIL FIELDS

It is predicted by oil experts that one of the greatest oil fields in America has been discovered near St. Louis in the great American Bottoms, within 45 minutes by automobile from Broadway.

Two flowing wells have been brought in on this property, showing a very strong flow of high-grade oil. Other wells will be drilled as rapidly as possible, and if the most conservative experts are not very much in error in their opinion, this will prove one of the great oil fields.

A limited number of lots will be sold on this property in order to rapidly increase the number of wells.

Making the First American Flag

THE Post-Dispatch herewith presents another of the 50 paintings by J. L. G. Ferris, depicting stirring events in American history or legend. It is a scene attending the birth of the American flag and shows Betsy Ross at work on the original American emblem. This picture has added interest in the fact that Flag day this year, June 14, is to be made the occasion of special ceremonies and observances in many parts of the country.

100 Years of Printing Bibles in 164 Different Languages for Distribution All Over the World

Nation-wide observance is to be held next Sunday of the Centennial of the American Bible Society, which had its origin in the Scriptural needs of early American settlers—Since then it has issued more than enough literature to place one copy of a sacred book or tract in the hands of every man, woman and child in America today :: ::

ONE HUNDRED YEARS ago May 8, a little band of men from some of the states which comprised the original colonies of America, met in New York City and formed an organization "of which the sole object shall be to encourage a wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures." They decided to call it the American Bible Society.

In the beginning neither men, money nor a printing press were available to carry on the work. It was not until six months later, in November, that the society was able, through a gift of stereotype plates from the New York Bible Society and its auxiliary, to print its first issue of 10,000 copies of the Book.

From this humble beginning the society has grown until now it controls one of the largest publishing houses in the world. In its hundred years of existence it has published and circulated enough sacred literature—Bibles, New Testaments and pamphlets—to place one copy in the hands of every man, woman and child in this country today and still have some left over for circulation in foreign countries. The exact figures are 109,926,214 volumes for 99 years, and the society estimates that with the close of the century they will have reached 115,000,000. Last year it distributed more than 400,000 volumes to the soldiers in the trenches in Europe.

The society has had these Bibles, Testaments and tracts translated into 164 languages and distributed to the uttermost parts of the world. In addition they have been embossed into 14 different languages and systems for the use of the blind. The countless tons of paper and gallons of ink which have been used within the century to print this enormous mass of reading matter is impossible to compute, but some idea of the proportions of the publishing business of the society today is contained in a pamphlet which it recently issued apologizing for its inability to fill orders because six carloads of paper which it had ordered within a period of six weeks had remained undelivered.

The present head of the society is James Wood. Among his predecessors were John Jay, the Hon. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen and the Hon. Richard Varick, a member of Washington's staff. In the list of vice presidents are the names of three former Presidents of the United States—John Quincy Adams, Benjamin Harrison and Rutherford B. Hayes—and in addition this position has been held by such men as the late Francis M. Cockrell of Missouri, the late David J. Brewer, former Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court; Salmon P. Chase, Charles W. Fairbanks, Supreme Justice Charles E. Hughes, Francis M. Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," and many others of equal distinction.

On next Sunday, May 7, the centenary of the society is to be observed with appropriate ceremonies by churches of all denominations in all parts of the country, the society itself being strictly interdenominational. One of them, that of the society itself, is to be held in the same room in which the organization was ratified 100 years ago—now the Board of Estimates' Room in the New York City Hall. In the Memorial Hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington a meeting is to be addressed by President Wilson and other distinguished speakers, and a gathering also is to be held on the Capitol steps.

The society, which has its publishing house in Astor place, New York, is maintained largely through subscriptions and bequests, for any of its publications may be had by churches or religious organizations at cost. Throughout its history also, it has in many instances sent Bibles free to communities both here and abroad where the inhabitants thirsted for them but were too poor to purchase them.

The inception of the society and the obstacles which its founders met and overcame is interestingly told by the Rev. Henry Otis Dwight, Recording Secretary, to whom was assigned the task of writing "The Centennial History of the American Bible Society," just issued. He relates that prior to the Revolutionary War the American colonists obtained their supply of Bibles from England, the Book in English then being a monopoly of the King's printers in England and Scotland. They sold for only a shilling, or a shilling and six pence, and American printers were unable to compete with these prices.

The Revolution, however, stopped Bible sales and in 1777 the famine had become so great that Congress was petitioned to order the printing of at least 20,000 Bibles, but the lack of suitable paper and even of sufficient type in all the 13 colonies negatived the scheme. However, Congress voted to import 20,000 Bibles from Holland. Later Robert Aitken of Philadelphia, printed the first English Bible which came from an American press. The enterprise nearly ruined him, for almost as soon as the Book was ready peace with England was declared and cheap Bibles from England appeared in the book shops again.

Following the Revolution immigration and expansion of United States territory became so great that it was impossible to import or to print enough Bibles to supply even a small percentage of the families in the new country. Providentially, it seems, about this time a missionary impulse began to be felt throughout the Eastern States and to a plain, rather bashful dreamer, Samuel J. Mills, a student in Williams College, is given the credit of furnishing the initial incentive which was to supply the need of these frontiersmen.

Mills and some like-minded students of Andover Theological Seminary, went to some leading clergymen and announced that they were ready to give their lives to work as foreign missionaries. Five of these volunteers were selected to go to India. Mills was not one of them, but he was instrumental in the appointment of two explorers, including himself, who were to investigate the needs of Western and Southwestern America.

In five months, and after suffering innumerable hardships, these men returned and reported that as soon as they had passed Pittsburg they found that the settlements were without religious privileges. They found whole communities of 50,000 or more persons, that were without opportunities to hear preaching and almost entirely without the Bible. In 1814 Mr. Mills made another tour over the same ground and returned on fire with the tremendous needs of the South and West. He found one man who had been trying for 10 years to find a Bible.

The man who was destined to obtain tangible results from Mills' aspirations and discoveries was the Hon. Elias Boudinot, president of the New Jersey Bible Society. In the fall of 1814 he sent to all the Bible societies in the United States a statement that the New Jersey society had adopted a resolution to appoint a committee of three to determine the best means of uniting all denominations in the United States for the purpose of disseminating the gospel throughout the world, and particularly the United States. This committee, of which Dr. Boudinot was a member, requested each Bible society to appoint two members to meet in Philadelphia for the purpose of forming an organization.

Fewer than 20 of the societies approved the plan and a year had passed since Mills and his associate had reported on the needs of the country without anything having been done. But Dr. Boudinot inherited Huguenot devotion from his father and Welsh tenacity from his mother. Soon he had won the support of the Connecticut Bible Society and after extended communication with other societies a new proposal of the New Jersey organization was favorably received. On Jan. 31, 1816, Dr. Boudinot called a convention of the representatives of the Bible societies in New York.

On May 8, 60 delegates met in the Consistory room of the Dutch Reformed Church in New York City. Among them were Dr. Lyman Beecher, "father of all the Beechers," then a young man and pastor of the Congregational Church at Litchfield, Conn.; James Fenimore Cooper, the novelist, and William Jay, son of James Jay, the great American statesman. Behind the crowd of spectators, in a far corner of the room, stood Samuel J. Mills, ardent believer in Bible societies as missionary agencies, full of hope but weighed down with fear when he realized that the gathering would be composed of representatives of different sects.

The situation was tense. Discussions which followed a prayer by the Rev. Eliphalet Nott, president of Union College, revealed many divergences of views. "There was one moment in our proceedings," wrote Dr. Beecher many years later, "when things seemed to tangle and some feeling began to rise. At that moment Dr. Mason (Rev. Dr. John M. Mason of New York) rose hastily and said: 'Mr. President, the Lord Jesus never built a church but what the devil built a chapel close to it; and he is here now, this moment, in this room, with his finger in the ink horn, not to write your constitution, but to blot it out.' "

"The laughter caused by this sally," says the Rev. Mr. Dwight, "dispelled the storm and the clear sun appeared again. To the amazement of all present, these champions of denominational competition stood at one point of view. In the afternoon, when a resolution was presented that 'it is expedient to establish without delay a general Bible institution for the circulation of the Holy Scriptures' it was adopted without a dissenting vote." Dr. Boudinot was made the first president of the society.

American Savants Discover Original Story of the Deluge

Translation of Babylonian Tablet Yields Version 1500 Years Older than Genesis

SAVANTS of the University of Pennsylvania have recently completed the task of deciphering a large tablet, containing six columns of cuneiform writing, which was unearthed on the site of the sacred Babylonian city, Nippur, and which proves to contain the earliest known version of the story of the Deluge. This story, it is believed, was the original source from which was drawn the version in the Book of Genesis, as well as that related upon Babylonian tablets of a later date, which have previously been translated.

The new tablet is estimated to date from at least the year 2100 B. C., and to record a legend which had been in circulation many centuries previously. It is thus about 1500 years older than the Book of Genesis, which modern criticism declares to have been written no earlier than the seventh century B. C.

The most important fact about the tablet is that it was written not in the Babylonian tongue, but the Sumerian; thus proving to the satisfaction to the translators that the story of the Deluge was neither Jewish nor even Semitic in its origin; but had its source among the non-Semitic race of the Sumerians, who founded the Mesopotamian civilization and were conquered and destroyed or assimilated by the Semitic Babylonians, but not before the latter had absorbed the Sumerian culture. It is held that the Babylonians acquired the legend from the Sumerians, and passed it on to the Hebrews during the Captivity.

Unfortunately, only the lower half of the tablet was recovered, so that there are considerable gaps in the text. There are fragments telling how the gods created mankind and called the animals into existence, and how, under divine guidance, men built five sacred cities. Dr. L. W. King, professor of Assyriology at King's College, London, continues the story of the translation:

"In the lower part of the third column, it is clear that the gods had already decided to send a Deluge, for two of the great goddesses, Nintu and Ishtar, wail aloud for the intended destruction of their people. At that time, we read, a certain Ziugiddu, or, as the name should more probably be read, Ziusuddu or Ziudsuddu, was King. He was one of the early priest-kings of Sumer, holding the office of priest of Enki. His piety is described; daily he occupied himself in the god's service, prostrating himself in humility and constant in his observance of the shrine. He is the prototype of the Babylonian Ut-napishtim and the Hebrew Noah.

"Only a fragment from the beginning of the fourth column is preserved, but it suffices to continue the story. Ziudsuddu is warned that a rainstorm is to be sent, which will 'destroy the seed of mankind.' His divine adviser says:

" 'Stand on the wall on my left side • • •
At the wall I will speak a word with thee.'

"The missing portion of the fourth column must have described Ziudsuddu's building of a boat in order to escape the Deluge with his family and domestic animals, for at the beginning of the fifth column we are in the middle of the Deluge itself.

"All the windstorms, of immense force, are described as coming together, and in the rainstorm as raging with them. The text continues:

" 'When for seven days, for seven nights,
The rainstorm had raged in the land,
When the great boat had been carried away by the windstorms on the mighty waters,
The Sun-god came forth, shedding light on heaven and earth.'

When the light shines into the boat, Ziudsuddu prostrates himself before the Sun-god and sacrifices an ox and a sheep. The text of this column then breaks off.

"In the last column of the text, we find Ziudsuddu prostrating himself before the gods Anu and Enlil. The latter bestows immortality upon him, and he is further given the title of 'Preserver of the seed of mankind.' The close of the text is wanting."

"We are now enabled," Dr. King sums up, "to trace the legend back to the dawn of history, and note the changes it underwent as it passed from the hands of one race to another. The result of this literary analysis and comparison, so far from discrediting the narrative in Genesis, throws into still higher relief the moral grandeur of the Hebrew text."

The Six Gates

inserted the neck of the sack, then suddenly seized it by the bottom and shook it vigorously. Before my horrified gaze four huge rats came tumbling out from the bag into the cage!

The dacoit snatched away the sack and snapped the shutter fast. A moving mist obscured my sight, a mist through which I saw the green eyes of Dr. Fu-Manchu fixed upon me, and through which, as from a great distance, his voice, sunk to a snakelike hiss, came to my ears.

"Cantonese rats, Dr. Petrie—the most ravenous in the world—they have eaten nothing for nearly a week!"

Then all became blurred, as though a painter with a brush steeped in red had smudged out the details of the picture. For an indefinite period, which seemed like many minutes, yet probably was only a few seconds, I saw nothing and heard nothing; my sensory nerves were dulled entirely. From this state I was awakened and brought back to the realities by a sound which ever afterward I was doomed to associate with that ghastly scene.

This was the squealing of the rats.

The red mist seemed to disperse at that, and with frightfully intense interest I began to study the awful torture to which Nayland Smith was being subjected. The dacoit had disappeared, and Fu-Manchu placidly was watching the four lean and hideous animals in the cage. As I also turned my eyes in that direction the rats overcame their temporary fear and began. * * *

"You have been good enough to notice," said the Chinaman, his voice still sunk in that sibilant whisper, "my partiality for dumb allies. You have met my scorpions, my death adders, my baboon man. The uses of such a playful little animal as a marmoset have never been fully appreciated before, I think, but to an indiscretion of this last named pet of mine I seem to remember that you owed something in the past, Dr. Petrie."

Nayland Smith stifled a deep groan. One rapid glance I ventured at his face. It was a grayish hue now and dank with perspiration. His gaze met mine.

The rats had almost ceased squealing.

"Much depends upon yourself, doctor," continued Fu-Manchu, slightly raising his voice. "I credit Mr. Commissioner Nayland Smith with courage high enough to sustain the raising of all the gates; but I estimate the strength of your friendship highly also and predict that you will use the sword of the samurai certainly not later than the time when I shall raise the third gate."

A low shuddering sound, which I cannot hope to describe, but, alas! can never forget, broke from the lips of the tortured man.

"In China," resumed Fu-Manchu, "we call this quaint fancy the Six Gates of Joyful Wisdom. The first gate, by which the rats are admitted, is called the Gate of Joyous Hope; the second, the Gate of Mirthful Doubt; the third gate is poetically named the Gate of True Rapture, and the fourth, the Gate of Gentle Sorrow. I once was honored in the friendship of an exalted mandarin who sustained the course of Joyful Wisdom to the rising of the fifth gate (called the Gate of Sweet Desires) and the admission of the twentieth rat. I esteem him also equally with my ancestors. The sixth, or Gate Celestial—whereby a man enters into the Joy of Complete Understanding—I have dispensed with here, substituting a Japanese fancy of an antiquity nearly as great and honorable. The introduction of this element of speculation I count a happy thought, and accordingly take pride to myself."

"The sword, Petrie!" whispered Smith. I should not have recognized his voice, but he spoke quite evenly and steadily. "I rely upon you, old man, to spare me the humiliation of asking mercy from that yellow fiend!"

My mind throughout this time had been gaining a sort of dreadful clarity. I had avoided looking at the sword of hari-kiri, but my thoughts had been leading me mercilessly up to the point at which we were now arrived. No vestige of anger, of condemnation of the inhuman being seated in the ebony chair, remained; that was past. Of all that had gone before and of what was to come in the future I thought nothing, knew nothing. Our long fight against the yellow group, our encounters with the numberless creatures of Fu-Manchu, the dacoits—even Karamaneh—were forgotten, blotted out. I saw nothing of the strange appointments of that subterranean chamber; but face to face with the supreme moment of a lifetime, I was alone with my poor friend—and God.

The rats began squealing again. They were fighting.

"Quick, Petrie! Quick, man! I am weakening."

I turned and took up the samurai sword. My hands were very hot and dry, but perfectly steady, and I tested the edge of the heavy weapon upon my left thumb nail as quietly as one might test a razor blade. It was as keen, this blade of ghastly history, as any razor ever wrought in Sheffield. I seized the graven hilt, bent forward in my chair, and raised the Friend's Sword high above my head. With the heavy weapon poised there I looked into my friend's eyes. They were feverishly bright, but never in all my days, nor upon the many beds of suffering which it had been my lot to visit, had I seen an expression like that within them.

"The raising of the first gate is always a crucial moment," came the guttural voice of the Chinaman.

Although I did not see him and barely heard his words, I was aware that he had stood up and was bending forward over the lower end of the cage.

"Now, Petrie, now! God bless you—and good-by.

From somewhere—somewhere remote—I heard a hoarse and animal-like cry, followed by the sound of a heavy fall. I can scarcely bear to write of that moment, for I had actually begun the downward sweep of the great sword when that sound came—a faint hope, speaking of aid where I had thought no aid possible.

How I contrived to divert the blade I do not know to this day, but I do know that its mighty sweep sheared a lock from Smith's head and laid open the scalp. With the hilt in my quivering hands I saw the blade bite deeply through the carpet and floor above Nayland Smith's skull. There, buried fully two inches in the woodwork, it stuck; and still clutching the hilt I looked to the right and across the room—I looked to the curtained doorway.

Fu-Manchu with one long, clawlike hand upon the top of the first gate, was bending over the trap, but his brilliant green eyes were turned in the same direction as my own—upon the curtained doorway.

Upright within it, her beautiful face as pale as death, but her great eyes blazing with a sort of splendid madness, stood Karamaneh!

She looked, not at the tortured man, not at me, but fully at Dr. Fu-Manchu. One hand clutched the trembling draperies; now she suddenly raised the other so that the jewels on her white arm glittered in the light of the lamp above the door. She held my Browning pistol! Fu-Manchu sprang upright, inhaling sibilantly as Karamaneh pointed the pistol point-blank at his high skull and fired.

I saw a little red streak appear up by the neutral-colored hair under the black cap. I became as a detached intelligence, unlinked with the corporeal, looking down upon a thing which for some reason I had never thought to witness.

Fu-Manchu threw up both arms, so that the sleeves of the green robe fell back to the elbows. He clutched at his head, and the black cap fell behind him. He began to utter short, guttural cries; he swayed backward—to the right—to the left—then lurched forward right across the cage. There he lay, writhing, for a moment, his baneful eyes turned up, revealing the whites; and the great gray rats, released, began leaping about the room. Two shot like gray streaks past the slim figure in the doorway, one darted behind the chair to which I was lashed, and the fourth ran all around against the wall. Fu-Manchu, prostrate across the overturned cage, lay still, his massive head sagging downward.

I experienced a mental repetition of my adventure in the earlier evening—I was dropping, dropping, dropping into some bottomless pit—warm arms were about my neck, and burning kisses upon my lips.

I seemed to haul myself back out of the pit of unconsciousness, by the aid of two little hands which clasped my own, and uttered a sigh that was almost a groan and opened my eyes.

I am sitting in the big red leathern armchair in my own study—and a lovely, but truly bizarre figure in a harem dress was kneeling on the carpet at my feet; so that my first sight of the world was the sweetest sight that the world had to offer me, the dark eyes of Karamaneh, with tears trembling like jewels upon her lashes!

I looked no further than that, heeded not if there were others in the room beside us two, but, gripping the jewel-laden fingers in what must have been a cruel clasp, I searched the depths of the glorious eyes in ever-growing wonder. What change had taken place in those limpid, mysterious pools? Why was a wild madness growing up within me like a flame? Why was the old longing returned, ten thousandfold, to snatch that pliant, exquisite shape to my breast?

No word was spoken, but the spoken words of a thousand ages could not have expressed one tithe what was held in that silent communion. A hand was laid hesitatingly on my shoulder. I tore my gaze away from the lovely face so near to mine and glanced up.

Aziz stood at the back of my chair!

"God is all merciful," he said. "My sister is restored to us." (I loved him for the plural), "and she remembers."

Those few words were enough; I understood now that this lovely girl, who had knelt, half lain, at my feet, was not the evil, perverted creature of Fu-Manchu whom we had gone out to arrest with the other vile servants of the Chinese doctor, but was the old, beloved companion of two years ago, the Karamaneh for whom I had sought long and wearily in Egypt, who had been swallowed up and lost to me in that land of mystery

The loss of memory which Fu-Manchu had artificially induced was subject to the same inexplicable laws which ordinarily rule in cases of amnesia. The shock of her brave action that night had begun to effect a cure; the sight of Aziz had completed it.

Inspector Weymouth was standing by the writing table. My mind cleared rapidly now, and standing up, but without releasing the girl's hands, so that I drew her up beside me, I said: "Weymouth, where is?"——

"He's waiting to see you, doctor," replied the Inspector.

A pang, almost physical, struck at my heart. "Poor, dear old Smith!" I cried with a break in my voice.

Dr. Gray, a neighboring practitioner, appeared in the doorway at the moment that I spoke the words:

"It's all right, Petrie," he said reassuringly; "I think we took it in time. I have thoroughly cauterized the wounds, and, granted that no complication sets in, he'll be on his feet again in a week or two."

I suppose I was in a condition closely bordering upon the hysterical. At any rate, my behavior was extraordinary. I raised both my hands above my head.

"Thank God!" I cried at the top of my voice. "Thank God! thank God!"

"Thank Him, indeed," responded the musical voice of Aziz. He spoke with all the devoutness of a true Moslem.

Everything, even Karamaneh, was forgotten, and I started for the door as though my life depended upon my speed. With one foot upon the landing, I turned, looked back, and met the glance of Inspector Weymouth.

"What have you done with—the body?" I asked.

"We haven't been able to get to it. That end of the vault collapsed two minutes after we hauled you out."

"The magistrate?" said Louise. "M. de Presles? Why, he is here now—in the library."

"I leave the prisoners with you, Morand," said the sergeant curtly; "don't let them out of your sight. I am going to the magistrate."

Morand's job was easy. The two tramps, huddled up in a corner of the kitchen opposite the stove, showed no disposition to make their escape. One, a tall, strongly built man, with thick hair crowned by a little jockey cap, enveloped in a kind of overcoat which might have been black once, but which was now of a greenish hue, gnawed his heavy moustache in silence. He wore hob-nailed shoes and carried a stout cudgel. He was more like a piece of human wreckage one sees in the street corners of great cities than a genuine tramp. His name, he had told the sergeant, was Francois Paul.

The other man was a typical country tramp. An old soft felt hat and a hairy beard concealed his face. All that could be seen of it was a pair of sparkling eyes. Whereas his companion maintained a rigid silence, this man never stopped talking. Nudging his neighbor he whispered:

"Say, where do you come from? Everybody round here knows me. Bouzille—my name's Bouzille. This is the fourth or fifth time they've pinched me."

Bouzille's companion vouchsafed him a glance.

"So it's a habit of yours, is it?" he said in the same low tone; "you often get nabbed?"

"As to 'often,'" the garrulous fellow replied, "that depends. In winter time it's not bad business to go back to clink. In summer you can find all you want on the road. They have done me down tonight for Mother Chiquard's rabbit, I expect."

The gendarme chimed in:

"So it was you who stole the rabbit, was it, Bouzille?"

"What's the good of your asking me that, M'sieu Morand?" protested Bouzille.

Bouzille's companion bent his head and whispered very low:

"There has been something worse than that—the job with the lady of this house."

"Oh, that!" said Bouzille, with a gesture of complete indifference. But he did not proceed. The sergeant came back to the kitchen and said sternly:

"Francois Paul, forward; the examining magistrate will hear you now."

The man quietly submitted to being taken by the arm. Bouzille winked knowingly at the gendarme, now his sole remaining confidant, and remarked with satisfaction:

"Good luck! We are getting on today! Not too much 'remanded' about it. Suits me just as well to be committed for trial, especially since there's a really beautiful prison at Brives now." He unceremoniously addressed the cook, who was busy at her work: "Mightn't there perhaps be a bit of a blowout for me, Mme. Louise?"

The cook hesitated. Morand shrugged his shoulders.

"Give him something if you like, Mme. Louise. After all, he is well known. And for my own part I don't believe he could have done it."

Louise had handed Bouzille a huge chunk of bread, which he immediately interned in the depths of his enormous bag.

The sergeant came back alone and addressed the gendarme.

"The other man has been discharged," he said. "As for Bouzille, M. de Presles does not think there is any need to interrogate him, but there's the little matter of the rabbit to be cleared up, you know. Come now, quick march! Take him to Saint-Jaury, Morand!"

Left alone in her kitchen, Louise put out her lamp.

"I've a kind of idea that they would have done better to keep that other man," she muttered. "He was a villainous looking fellow!"

The sad, depressing day had passed without any notable incident.

Charles Rambert and his father had spent the afternoon with Therese and the Baronne de Vibray. A hasty dinner had been served.

Therese was terribly shocked, but the Baronne de Vibray had failed in the attempt to persuade her to come to Quereles to sleep.

"Marie will stay with me," she assured the kind Baronne, "and I promise you I shall have sufficient courage to go to sleep tonight."

So her friend got into her car alone at 9 o'clock and went back to her own house, and Therese went up at once to bed with Marie, the faithful servant, who, like Louise, the cook, had been with her ever since she was born.

After having read all the newspapers, M. Etienne Rambert said to his son, simply, but with marked gravity:

"Let us go upstairs, my son; it is time."

At the door of his room Charles deferentially offered his cheek. M. Etienne Rambert seemed to hesitate; then, as if taking a sudden resolution, he entered his son's room instead of going on to his own. Charles refrained from asking any questions. He had noticed how lost in sad thought his father had seemed to be since the day before.

Charles Rambert was very tired. He began to undress at once, when his father, with an abrupt movement, put both hands on his son's shoulders and looked him straight in the eyes. Then in a stifled but peremptory tone he said:

"Now confess, unhappy boy! Confess to your father! It was you who committed the murder!"

The ringing denial that the young man tried to utter was strangled in his throat.

"Committed the murder? I? You accuse me of having killed the Marquise?"

"Alas, yes!"

"No, no! Good God, no!"

"Yes!" Etienne Rambert insisted.

The two men faced each other, panting.

"And it is actually my own father who says that—who suspects me!"

Tears filled the young fellow's eyes and sobs choked him; he grew whiter still, and seemed so near collapse that his father had to support him to a chair.

(Next week Inspector Juve is suddenly called to Paris just as sensational clews at the chateau point to the mysterious murder. Follow them!)

Artificial Camphor

THE attention of the Department of Commerce has been called to a new industry that has just been established in this country, the manufacture of synthetic camphor. Turpentine is the basic material used, and to meet the American demand would require 10,000 barrels, so the industry will greatly stimulate the market for turpentine. This country required 4,899,873 pounds of camphor for the year ending June, 1915.

Dr. Crile's Experiments on Animals to Define Centers of Most Intense Pain

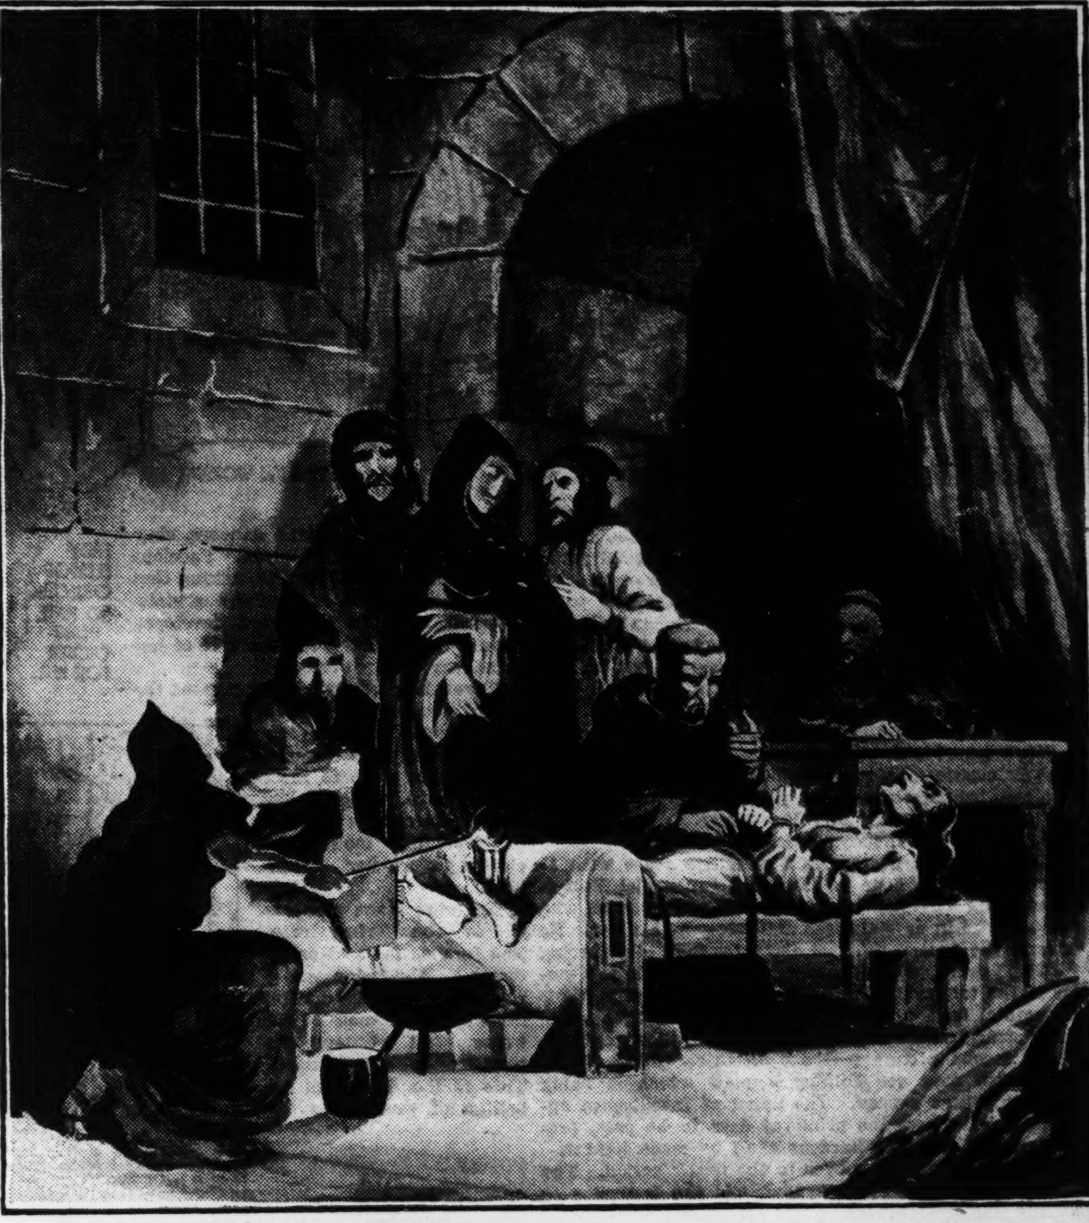
Famous Cleveland surgeon tells in book how he used dogs and rabbits, under anesthesia, to discover parts of body to which burning, tearing, cutting and crushing cause the most exquisite agony — Blood-pressure and respiratory rate taken as indices of suffering unconscious animals would have endured—Bodily surfaces most susceptible to pain, but brain, heart and internal organs have little sensibility :: ::

ADVOCATES of animal experimentation often complain justly that their opponents, in indicting them for cruelty, do not always make clear the fact that vivisection is almost invariably conducted under anesthesia.

But bearing this truth in mind, it is not a little repellent to read the account given by Dr. George W. Crile, the famous Cleveland surgeon, of his experiments upon living creatures, drugged though they were with ether. In his latest book, "Man, an Adaptive Mechanism," (MacMillan), he relates how he scorched the paws of dogs, crunched the bones of breathing animals, tore their tissues, bruised their nerve trunks, lacerated their nostrils, crushed their livers and kidneys and burned their stomachs and intestines. He also kept rabbits—not anesthetized—awake until they were exhausted to the point of death, and terrified them for as long as 40 minutes at a time by loosing upon them dogs that had been muzzled, as a preliminary to putting them to death.

Vivisectionists have offered the powerful defense that their experiments have conferred priceless boons upon mankind. Without animal experimentation, they assert, surgical operations upon the vital organs would be impossible; and smallpox, diphtheria, bubonic plague, typhoid, yellow fever and other epidemics would still range without control.

Dr. Crile's researches, so far as his book shows, were mainly for the purpose of proving his theory that the human mind can be explained on mechanistic principles—a philosophy of much interest, but scarcely a matter of life and death to the race. However, as he states in the introduction, the volume is offered "with the desire of increasing the scope of preventive medicine; with the hope of relieving and even curing certain acute and chronic diseases, and of stimulating a biologic trend of thought in medicine to the end that disease, like health, may be given its evolutionary setting."



Centuries ago the Inquisitioners were experts at finding the "centers of intensest pain"—Drawing from an old illustration of the "question of fire."

"FOR more than 20 years," Dr. Crile explains in his preface, "the general theme treated in this volume has been under investigation in my laboratory and my clinic," and "has included some 2500 experiments."

One of the fields in which extensive research was prosecuted was that of defining the "areas of pain;" that is, those parts of the body which respond most exquisitely to injury. The experiments in this inquiry were conducted upon animals under ether anesthesia; and the rise or fall of blood-pressure and the respiratory rate were taken as indices of the torture the animals would have endured had they been conscious.

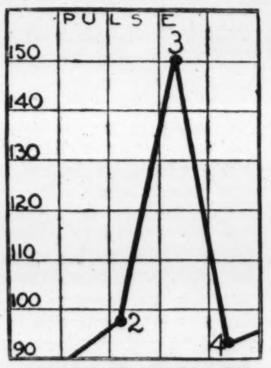


CHART SHOWING EFFECT OF FEAR UPON THE PULSE.

Through dread that his leg was about to be amputated, a patient's pulse arose from 90 to 150, and his temperature soared to 101 degrees.

"Injuries to the paws of an anesthetized dog—cutting, crushing, fracturing, amputating and burning—were," the surgeon reports, "attended by a sharp rise in blood-pressure, followed by a fall; and the respirations increased in frequency and became irregular." But Dr. Crile already knew the effect such injuries would have upon man, for he adds: "These responses are identical with those which follow the crushing or burning of the hand of a conscious human being."

"Injuries to the muscles of the trunk and extremities caused a rise in blood-pressure similar to that caused by cutting the skin," he proceeds. "The rise was more marked when the muscles most exposed to attack were injured—such as the muscles of the extremities and abdomen—and was less marked when the protected deep lumbar muscles were injured.

"When amputating the hip of a dog, the skin incision alone caused almost as much change in the circulation and respiration as was caused by severing the entire muscular mass of the thigh.

"The cutting, burning and tearing of connective tissues—fascia, tendons and ligaments—produced little or no appreciative effect on the blood-pressure.

"Injury to the bone disclosed the fact that roughly cutting or separating the periosteum (membrane covering the bone) caused a slight rise in blood-pressure, while no alteration in blood-pressure was produced by sawing, curetting, cutting or crushing cartilage or bones from which the periosteum had previously been removed. Injury of either the large or the small joints is likewise attended by little or no response.

"In traumatizing (wounding) the peripheral nerve trunks we found that the type of injury had an important bearing upon the response elicited. Thus the dragging, pulling, tearing and contusing of nerve trunks produced marked changes in the blood-pressure and respiration. Thermal irritation (burning) caused an even greater rise in blood-pressure; but if the nerves were severed quickly with a sharp knife, the resultant response was slight. * * *

"If the eyes, the conjunctiva, the eyeball or the optic nerve were injured, there was occasionaly a slight though scarcely perceptible change in blood-pressure. The adaptive change here is confined chiefly to winking, which exerts but slight demand on the general muscular system, hence no circulatory changes are seen.

"But such injuries as the contusion, laceration or dilation of the nostrils were met promptly by a distinct rise in the blood-pressure. In this case a vital function of the body—respiration—was threatened. The response was equivalent to that frantic fighting to be free which follows any attempt to obstruct the nostrils of any animal or of man.

THE ANGUISH OF VIOLENT EFFORT.

Head of a runner, sculptured by Prof. R. Tait McKenzie of the University of Pennsylvania, after studies of athletes in moments of supreme exertion.

"The same loyalty to the respiratory function and indifference to other menaces was manifested by the larynx, trachea and esophagus, when these parts were subjected to injury under anesthesia. Injuring the trachea caused coughing, but injuring the esophagus caused no response. Extensive dissections of other tissues of the neck caused no disturbance of the blood-pressure and respiration provided that the vagi (pneumogastric) and sympathetic nerves were uninjured. * * *

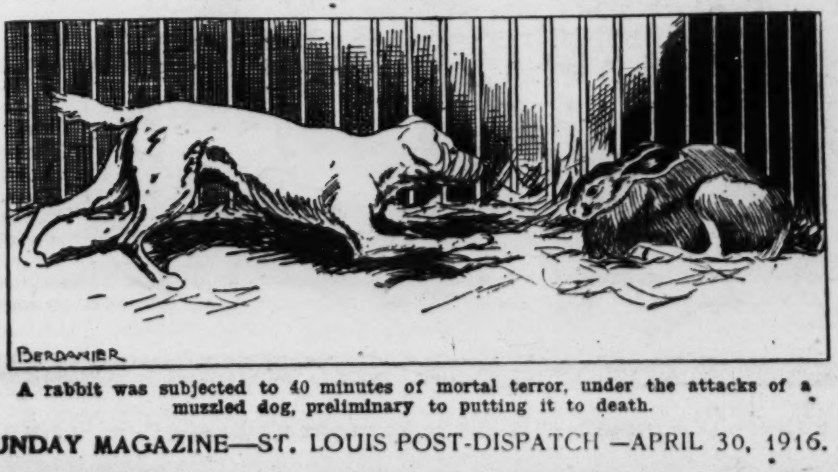
"The brains of anesthetized dogs were exposed and one hemisphere of each subjected to trauma (injury). No change in blood-pressure or respiration was noted in any instance; and microscopic examination of the uninjured hemispheres showed no histologic (structural) changes. So complete throughout phylogeny (racial evolution) has been this protection of the brain from injury that if the skull has previously been opened under anesthesia, the brain of a conscious patient may be explored with a probe for a tumor or other lesion without causing the slightest pain—indeed, the entire brain could be removed without the patient's knowledge.

"After the extremities, the greatest shock-absorbing areas of the body were shown to be the chest and the abdomen. The deeper areas, the organs of the retroperitoneal region and the muscles of the spine showed slight or no response in injury.

"Although injury to the chest wall causes pain, the heart may be pierced by a needle without pain. The lungs likewise are pain-silent to gunshot wounds, stabs, contusions and punctures. In opening lung abcesses no pain is caused by the penetration of the lung tissue.

"Within the abdomen we found similar contrasts in sensibility, and here, too, the type of trauma determined the degree of shock. Thus, in our experiments, pulling upon, dragging and roughly manipulating the stomach and intestines caused an immediate fall in blood-pressure; but a swift, keen incision, even the crushing and burning of the inert organ, held gently and carefully, caused no response. * * *

"Rubbing, dragging, pulling upon or tearing the parietal peritoneum caused a lowered blood-pressure, but the same injury inflicted upon tissues behind the peritoneum caused no marked change in blood-pressure or respiration.



A rabbit was subjected to 40 minutes of mortal terror, under the attacks of a muzzled dog, preliminary to putting it to death.

"In our researches the liver was crushed or cut, the cystic duct was dilated, the kidneys were cut, crushed and contused, the spleen was excised—all these operations being performed without any appreciable effect upon blood-pressure or respiration. Specific injury, such as cutting, compressing and overdistending the bladder caused a rise in blood-pressure."

All of these experiments were made upon living animals, but upon animals under the influence of ether. But without anesthesia were those animals experimented upon to discover the effects of insomnia and terror.

ESTIMATE OF GERMAN LOSSES

TO those who believe that ultimate victory of the allies will be due to the exhaustion of the Central Powers' supply of men, the estimate of German losses made by the well-known military critic, Hilare Belloc, in Land and Water, will have profound significance, says an editorial in the Scientific American.

The point of departure of Belloc's study is the official lists published by the German Government from the outbreak of the war to Jan. 31, 1916. The number of official lists thus published is 860, and the total number of German dead on these lists is 651,768. This total, it is claimed, is not complete; for over and above the number admitted as dead, the official lists give a certain number as missing. The missing can conceivably cover only three categories: First, prisoners in the hands of the allies; second, deserters; third, dead left upon the battlefield after a German retirement. The number of prisoners is, of course, known to the allies with precision; the number of deserters is negligibly small, the devotion and patriotism of the German people being answerable for that. After deducting the known number of prisoners and a small percentage for desertion, it is certain that the remainder represents a number of Germans who, though dead, appear under the category of "missing." The total figure thus reached is 160,000. Adding this to the official list of 651,768 gives a total of 811,000 dead, up to and including the last day of January, 1916.

Now a comparison of the private with the official lists reveals the very significant fact that for the first few months of the war the two lists practically agree. At the beginning of the winter of 1914, however, a grave disparity appears, and continues through 1915. The death rate established by the detailed private lists rises regularly and uninterruptedly, whereas the course of the death rate drawn from the general public and official lists as regularly declines. The conclusion, says Belloc, is inevitable: the private lists give the true death rate; the public lists, although at first carefully and fully maintained, give as the year proceeds figures less and less reliable. By adding the shortage in the official lists, as shown by the more accurate private lists, it was found that the total of 811,000 dead, mentioned above, would have to be raised, on Dec. 31, 1915, to over 1,000,000.

Adding to this total of 1,000,000 the corresponding number of wounded (as shown by the ratio of wounded to dead established by the statistics of the present war), and making a liberal allowance of between 50 and 60 per cent of the wounded returned as once more efficient to the front, Belloc estimates that, at the very minimum, over 3,500,000 men had been permanently lost to German fighting forces by Jan. 1, 1916, leaving only 5,500,000 out of the original 9,000,000 maximum possible recruitment of German men effective for war.

Monkey vs. Child

fore it began to fall, and launch himself as powerfully as he could in the air towards the prize. After coming down twice rather hard on the cement floor, much to his disgust, he succeeded at the third attempt.

His second method was even more ingenious. One end of the stick he braced firmly between a loop in the wire netting and a wooden upright, so that the pole stuck out in the air towards the banana at an angle of about 45 degrees. Then he climbed up, holding with one hand and one foot to a timber of the cage and to the stick with the other foot. When on a level with the banana, he swung outward as far as possible without losing his hold on the cage timber, and succeeded in grasping the banana with his free hand. Having once succeeded by this method, he used it whenever given an opportunity, easily and regularly.

But Julius did not fare so well with another set of problems, which Yerkes calls those of "multiple choice." Here the apparatus was a series of adjacent and covered stalls, large enough for a monkey to enter, and numbered from 1 to 9. The observer sat on a stand above and in front of them, with pulleys at hand controlling the doors at the front and rear of the stalls. At the rear and outside of each stall were boxes in which food could be placed, and which the monkey could reach only by passing through the stall.

Four sets of problems were devised. The first of these, termed "lefthandedness," was set by opening the front doors of various groups of stalls, in which the first stall on the left hand was the one at the rear of which food was placed. For instance, if the group was composed of stalls 1, 2 and 3, right choice would be 1; if the group were 6, 7, 8 and 9, the correct selection would be 6.

The second problem was called "secondness from the right end." In this the correct cell in the group was always the second from the right; for instance, in the group 1, 2, 3 and 4, the answer would be 3; in 6, 7, 8 and 9 it would be 8. The third, called "alternation of ends," was one in which the right answers were the first stall to the left and the first to the right, in alternation. In the group 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, the answer would be 2 and 6. The fourth termed "middleness," was one in which the central stall of the group was the right choice. In the group 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9, the answer would be 5; in 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, the solution would be 4. If the monkey entered the right stall at the first trial, the rear door was raised and he received food as his reward; if he entered the wrong stall, he was imprisoned for a short time as a punishment.

It took Julius a month to solve the first problem; that is, to reason out that if he found food in the lefthand stall of one group he would also find it in the lefthand stall of another group. The second problem he was utterly unable to solve. Yerkes points out that a pig, with a lower intelligence, would have succeeded better, for the pig would have tried first one stall and then another until it found the right one. But Julius was just sagacious enough to have a glimmering that there was some sort of system behind the problem; but what this system was he could not discover.

Julius was far outstripped in these tests by two other monkeys, Sobke, a young adult Rhesus monkey, and Skirrl, an adult male of the Pithecus Irus species. Sobke mastered the first, second and third problems and was well along with the fourth when the observations came to an end; and Skirrl was at work on the third.

Nevertheless, the experimenter, from the results of other tests, became convinced that Julius was the most intelligent of the monkeys, and that Sobke, who romped through the multiple choice problems, was in reality feeble-minded.

Dr. Crile's Experiments on Animals

lates, "were kept awake continuously from 90 to 112 hours by relays of students. They were given abundant food and water and were subjected to no physical violence, fear, drugs or infection. Their external and their internal environments were normal excepting that they were not allowed to sleep.

"At the end of the periods of insomnia all the animals were exhausted, some to the point of death.

"All were killed; some immediately, some after periods of rest."

The result of this experiment was to prove that the brain, the adrenal glands and the liver, alone of the bodily organs, showed marked and widespread histological changes as a result of the prolonged consciousness. Dr. Crile continues:

"We repeated the investigation in other typical cases of exhaustion by physical and chemical stimuli. We examined the organs of animals exhausted by the muscular work of running and fighting; the organs of foxes chased by hounds; of dogs and woodchucks exhausted by fighting; we examined the organs of animals exhausted by excessive emotional excitation; of animals exhausted by strychnin convulsions; of animals to which had been given alcohol, nicotin, morphia, scopolomin, ether and nitrous acid; of animals subjected to injections of colon, tetanus, diphtheria and typhoid bacilli * * * We examined the organs and tissues of animals from which the adrenals, the pancreas or the liver had been excised; the organs of animals given toxins and strychnin under anesthesia and while under the influence of curare (a virulent poison); of animals first given heavy doses of opium, then traumatized, or given toxins, acids, strychnin and adrenin."

The lesson gained from these studies, which extended over a period of six years, was that in every species of exhaustion, whatever the cause, except when the vitality had been depressed by narcotics and anesthetics, identical changes were produced in the same three organs—the brain, the adrenals and the liver.

Three microphotographs shown on one page of the book bear the captions: "Section of cerebellum of rabbit killed immediately after 25 minutes of fright;" "Section of cerebellum of rabbit after 40 minutes of fright, killed after 2½ hours of rest;" and "Section of cerebellum of rabbit frightened twice a day for two weeks." How the animals were tortured with fear preliminary to being put to death is told in the following passage; which, with a certain professional humor, the author cites as an illustration of the phenomenon of laughter, under his theory that every one of the causes of laughter resolves itself into a stimulation to motor activities of some kind:

"Quite by accident this point was tested in our laboratory during the course of some experiments on fear. A keen, snappy fox terrier was completely muzzled by winding a strip of adhesive plaster around his jaws, so as to include all but the nostrils. He was then turned loose upon a rabbit.

"When the aggressive terrier and the rabbit found themselves in close quarters, the instinct of each animal asserted itself. The rabbit crouched in fear, while the terrier, with all the assurance of its kind when confronted by its natural prey, rushed upon the rabbit to seize it, his muzzle glancing off at each attempt and the attack ending in awkward failure.

"These actions were witnessed, at various times, by various scientific visitors, and in every instance the sight provoked laughter.

"This laughter was undoubtedly due to the fact that in the mind of each onlooker the spectacle of the savage terrier rushing upon the helpless rabbit as if to mangle it aroused a strong desire to exert a muscular act to prevent cruelty. When the danger was unexpectedly averted, the preparation for muscular activity was appropriated by the neutral muscular reaction of laughter."

Dr. Crile makes it clear that he is a believer in the Darwinian theory of the survival of the fit, which shows the earth as drenched over and over again with the blood shed in the titanic struggle of the extant species to maintain themselves. Before so sanguinary a perspective, a few hundreds of animals experimented upon in a laboratory are as a drop of water in the ocean. "Everywhere," the author avers, "something is pursuing and something is escaping another creature. It is a constant drama of getting food and of seeking to escape being made into food. Everywhere the strong prey upon the weak, the swift upon the slow, the clever upon the stupid."

dress on the stage at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

"But," adds the lady, naively, "I obtained the compliment of immediate attention and created the effect I wished."

Similar temerity achieved a similar result on the occasion of her first appearance before the Kaiser.

This took place during her second season, in January, 1903. A formal visit from a Hofmarshal notified her that she was expected to appear at the palace, and that official, having "commanded" her presence, added that the court dress was either black or lavender, with gloves and no jewelry.

"I am very sorry," came the unexpected assertion, "but I never wear black and I never wear lavender. Neither color is becoming to me."

"But it is the custom of the court," began the perturbed ambassador.

"It is my custom," came the firm reply, "to wear what I choose when I sing, and according to my mood; and I choose to wear white. Furthermore, I never wear gloves when singing."

With this answer he had perforce to return. But again the "crazy American" had her way.

"Miss Farrar," came back the official decree, "could wear whatever she desired, but she must come." And she went in white.

By this time Miss Farrar was under contract at the Royal Opera, but under terms so elastic as to allow of her appearing elsewhere. But to such an extent did she strain this elasticity that at length she frightened the Intendant. Finally, when she applied for an unusually long intermission, he frankly confessed his fear. He would not again approach the Kaiser. But the singer knew no such qualms.

"But why should you leave Berlin?" asked his majesty. "We admire you; we love you. What more can you gain elsewhere?"

"Pardon me, your majesty," was the frank reply. "Already I have become accustomed as a spoiled prima donna of luxurious habits to ride in automobiles, and I don't wish to have to walk when I am an old lady and when this," indicating her throat, "has ceased to interest the public."

So to Monte Carlo she was allowed to go in search of gold.

Miss Farrar recalls her first meeting with Caruso, whose voice at their first appearance so transported her that she forgot herself and had to be sharply recalled to her senses. In Monte Carlo, too, she first met Gatti Casazza, who records a first impression of a "pair of eyes and a very tempestuous young person." It was not long after this rencontre that she signed her first contract to visit New York.

All through this story of herself, Miss Farrar emphasizes her predilection for the profession of actress. When a child, she relates, she remembers hearing of a fatal accident to a discarded beau for whom she had no love in life. But in death he assumed more importance. Immediately she assumed the role of widow, which she acted for six consecutive weeks.

During the stages of early training, she mentions her inability to follow stereotyped directions.

"After 10 bars, lift the right hand; two more, then point it at the villain"—such set stage effects were not for her. She mentions apropos of her first appearance in "Traviata" that she had studied Camille as presented by the great Sarah and that she had determined to act as well as sing the part. Finally comes the frank confession: "I ADORE to act," and the tentative: "Who knows? Some day may see me a candidate for such honors," an admission prompted by Mr. Belasco's laughing suggestion that she quit opera and come on the dramatic stage.

Yes, indeed, to echo her. Who knows? Some day may see Miss Farrar play opposite Mr. Lou-Tellegen on the legitimate stage.

Stop Using a Truss

STUART'S PLAPAO-PADS are different from the truss, being medicine applicators made self-adhesive purposely to hold the parts securely in place. No straps or buckles attached—no obnoxious springs. Cannot slip, so cannot chafe or press against the bone. Thousands have successfully treated themselves at home without hindrance from work—most obstinate cases cured. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. Awarded Gold Medal. Process of recovery is natural, so afterwards no further use for trusses. We prove it by sending you Trial of Plapao absolutely free. Want Free Offer
REPEATED

Within the last few days, many Deaf people have asked me to repeat the free offer which I made in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch last month to all Deafness sufferers.

The letters have been filled with the most pitiful appeals for help. They have told me of the terrible loneliness, the cruel setting aside of the sufferer from the active pleasures and duties of life. "I would rather die, Doctor, than be Deaf, but I know I am doomed," is the burden of many a letter.

R. SPROULE
Specialist in Ear Troubles.

"Were I to think of only this side of the picture I should be desperate." But almost every one of the letters contained also this: "A friend of mine was cured of Deafness by your treatment. Please repeat again that offer of Deafness Treatment Free, that I, too, may see your method. Surely what you have done for others you can do for me."

I have sent the Free treatments. I know only too well with what heartburnings of discouragement the person with the at-first occasional noises in the ear—the occasional Deaf cold—the gradual loss of keen hearing—realizes that he or she is slowly but surely being imprisoned in a tomb of silence, none the less horrible because of the forewarnings. And so, thankful as I am to help these friends of my cured patients, I cannot rest until I say again

TO ALL WHO ARE DEAF

I will give away Free treatment for Deafness to every Deaf person who asks for it.

You who are Deaf—don't hesitate—don't delay, but get pen and ink or a pencil—write on any sort of paper—a post card is just the thing—

Please send me your Free treatment for Deafness—Sign your full name and address and send it to me.

When your letter reaches me I will send you one of the treatments free. My treatment has restored good hearing to hundreds and hundreds. Why should it not do the same for you?

It doesn't matter how slight your Deafness is—how severe it is—how long you have had it—send for a treatment. Many have been cured who thought their cases hopeless. I won't tell you about the treatment, because I want you to see for yourself—note its results in your own case. If you had answered my previous offer you might have now been in the blessed possession of good hearing. Don't miss this opportunity, but write right now for a Deafness Treatment. It is Free. Write

Evolution of Woman Shown in Pageantry

Allegorical play, written by two St. Louisans, which is to be presented by the Woman's Council, depicts her development from prehistoric times, when she was a drudge and a burden bearer, to the twentieth century, when she plays a part in arts, professions and affairs of state as well as in home

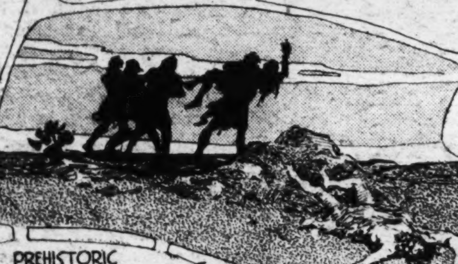
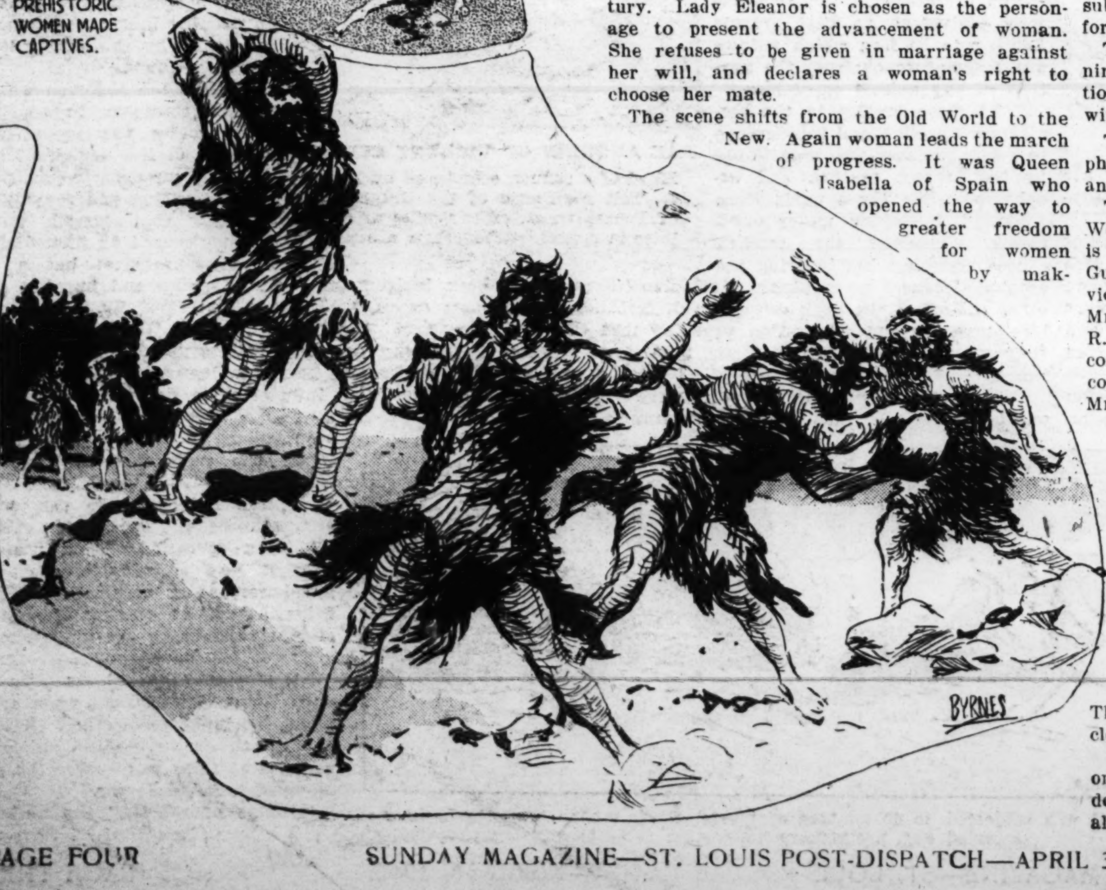
WOMAN, THE DRUDGE AND BURDEN BEARER



PREHISTORIC WOMEN MADE CAPTIVES.



A PAGEANT which is to depict the evolution of woman from the primordial period to the present—from the time of the cave man to the twentieth century—is to be given by the St. Louis Woman's Council at the Odeon, May 5 and 6. "The Woman's Pageant," as it is called, was written by two St. Louis women—Mrs. Charles Morehead Viley and Miss Lorena Jamison, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jamison of 5168 Vernon avenue.

The pageant is dominated by the Spirit of Intelligence who in classic language tells of woman's bondage, her burdens, her heartaches, her joys, her sorrows, her rebellion, her struggles and her victories, her courage of spirit and her virtues of heart and mind.

The first picture presents a primitive scene with 15 characters. The hour is dawn. A Primordial Man is standing on a pyramid of rock guarding two women, who are wrapped in animal skins and asleep at his feet. He arouses the women, who set about the task of gathering food and drink; while the man remains on guard. Woman is the toiler, the burden bearer. The enemy, three primordial men, attack and slay the man with stones. They struggle with the women and make them captives.

The second picture presents primitive tilling of the soil. Two men are holding a plow which is being pulled by three women. The Spirit of Intelligence appears and declares the primeval days to be past, predicting that woman's burdens shall be made lighter.

The pageantry then moves to the Greek period. The scene is the House of Alexander, and the festival of the Goddess Athena is in progress. Singers and dancers pay tribute to the Goddess of Science and invoke her aid for woman. They make offerings of woven garments. The characters who tell the lot of woman of this period are Alexander and Penelope, supported by weavers and soldiers, dancers, singers, musicians and children. Penelope pleads the cause of woman, asking that they be given a voice in affairs of state. Woman, still the toiler, has developed manual skill, and with the toil of her hand her mind develops.

Through necessity woman created the art of weaving. With the development of man economic conditions change, and woman rises to meet the change. Upon her still remains the burden of providing food and clothing for her household.

The next stage presented is the Triumvirate. The scene is a Roman forum. Alexander and Augusta, the triumvirs, lictors and a mob of 50 women tell of woman's position in this period. This is the first open rebellion of woman—as the authors find it. Augusta leads the women, who rebel against the levying of a tax against their property for the purpose of raising funds with which to finance civil wars, and against robbing women of their husbands and sons for the battlefields.

The Spirit of Intelligence again foretells greater intellectual triumph for woman. The drudgery has grown less, woman's spirit more courageous, her freedom greater, her hopes and ambitions have grown apace. She resents being held as a chattel to be bartered for political honors or wealth.

The next stage of woman's development is shown in the Baronial Period, sixteenth century. Lady Eleanor is chosen as the personage to present the advancement of woman. She refuses to be given in marriage against her will, and declares a woman's right to choose her mate.

The scene shifts from the Old World to the New. Again woman leads the march of progress. It was Queen Isabella of Spain who opened the way to greater freedom for women by making Columbus' expedition possible.

Priscilla, John and the Pilgrims and Indians are the characters chosen to present the sweet, brave woman of Pilgrim times, and how she, in time of danger and trial, stood by the side of man and courageously bore her part of the burden.

The Pioneer woman closely follows the Pilgrim woman. More rugged in body, keener in intellect is she than her elder sister, made so by meeting every problem fearlessly and honestly. In industry and courage woman is now man's equal.

The Pioneer days are past. There is no longer need for the woman to spend her life in being the burden bearer and defender of her home. Danger is past, man has more time to devote to providing for his family, and lifts the burden from her shoulders. Always the burden bearer, the leader in development of life, she does not rest, but accepts the economic conditions as she finds them. The rushing tide of progress has carried her work in strange places, and she follows not blindly, not submissively, but with seeing eyes, brave heart and great fortitude. She now seeks new fields.

The next scene is a village common, time the early nineteenth century. Woman now enters in the educational field, a teacher of the youth of the land.
with man, marching on to greater achievement.

The closing scene presents the woman of today in every phase of industry, education, art, science, the professions and in affairs civic and political, shoulder to shoulder

There are more than 500 persons in the cast. The Woman's Council has a membership of 9700 women and is composed of 63 organizations. The officers are: Mrs. Gus V. R. Mechin, president; Mrs. Ottmar Moll, first vice president; Mrs. J. E. Allen, second vice president; Mrs. Louis B. Woodward, third vice president; Mrs. D. R. Parman, recording secretary; Mrs. E. B. Watson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Joseph Jamison, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. M. Durdy, treasurer; Mrs. William Kinsey, auditor; Mrs. Emma Oppenheimer, chairman Ways and Means Committee, and Mrs. Albert Cleaver, chairman Civics Committee.

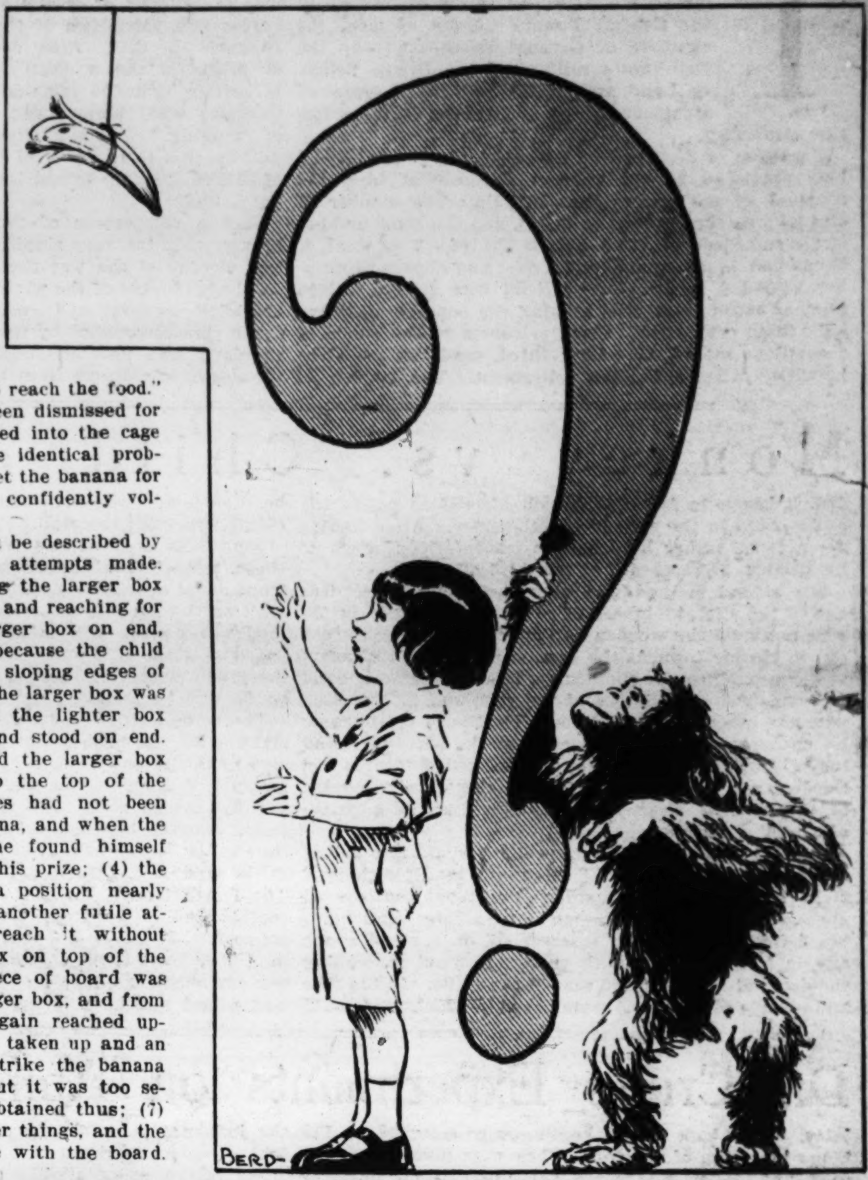
The chairmen of the committees for the pageant are: Production, Mrs. Grace de Lauzainghein; Finance, Mrs. William H. Allen; Program, Mrs. Henry M. Whelpley; Cast, Mrs. L. M. Ottofy; Music, Mrs. John Trigg Moss; Property, Mrs. Louis Dragon; Dance, Mrs. Louis P. Aloe; Costume, Mrs. J. W. Jamison; Stage, Mrs. W. A. Sinclair; Publicity, Mrs Walter Mitchell; Door, Mrs. M. E. Begg.

The production is under the direction of Joseph Solari, who selected the cast for the St. Louis Pageant, staged in Forest Park two years ago. The dialogue of the Woman's Pageant is said to be clever and the staging effective and artistic.

The Council, which is said to be the largest woman's organization in any city, was organized to promote the development of the women of St. Louis and environs along social and educational lines.

MONKEY vs. CHILD! Which Is Entitled to Verdi as Possessor of Greater Brains

Orang utan and 3-year-old boy put on trial by Harvard savant, who decides child has wider variety of ideas but ape is superior in stick-to-it-iveness—Neither able to solve problem of stacking boxes to reach banana suspended on string, but monkey showed striking cleverness in obtaining prize with six-foot pole



ARE a monkey's reasoning powers equal to those of a 3-year-old child?

To throw light upon this question Robert M. Yerkes of the Harvard University faculty conducted an interesting comparative test last summer in an animal laboratory at Montecito, Cal., the results of which have just been published at Cambridge, Mass., in connection with the Journal of Animal Behavior.

The test was an incident in a research of several months, during which Yerkes constructed elaborate apparatus, made endless charts and kept a daily and minute record of occurrences which would seem to most persons—so trivial, in fact, that most people will wonder what significance such experiments would have if successful. The answer is if a monkey were proved equal in aptitude and intelligence to a child, scientists would be encouraged in asserting the mental kinship of man to his nearest physical relatives among animals, and might even obtain some evidence as to the problem whether man is super-monkey or the monkey is degenerate man.

The experimenter's conclusion was that while both child and monkey failed at the problem set them, the former displayed a greater versatility of ideas, but the ape was superior in the qualities of attentiveness and steady application.

The participants in the experiment were a boy 3 years and 4 months of age, and orang utan, 5 years old, and perfectly normal and active, which rejoiced in the name of Julius. From the ceiling of a large cage a banana was suspended by a string so that it was approximately six feet from the floor, five feet from either side of the cage and 12 feet from either end. Two boxes were placed on the floor of the cage several feet from the point directly under the banana. The larger of the boxes was heavy and irregular in shape. According to the experimenter's calculations, the only way in which the child or Julius could obtain the banana was by placing the smaller box under the larger and then climbing upon them. In adition, a light stick about six feet feet long and a piece of board were placed in the cage.

Julius was admitted to the cage and the banana pointed out to him. He immediately set about trying to get it, and worked diligently during the whole of the period of observation, which, because of the unfinished condition of the cage, was limited to slightly over 10 minutes. Within this period he made upwards of a dozen fairly well directed attempts to obtain the food.

Chief among them were three attempts to reach the banana from different positions on the left wall; two attempts to reach it from different positions on the right wall; two from the large box in position nearly under the banana; two from the large box with the aid of the experimenter's hand, and one from the distant end of the cage.

On account of the condition of the cage, Yerkes had to remain in the cage with Julius during the test, and particularly interesting were the animal's attempts to get the experimenter to help him in his task. After the orang had made two or three futile efforts to get the food he went to Yerkes, who was standing in one corner of the cage, took him by the hand and led him to a point directly under the banana. He then looked up towards the banana, grasped Yerkes' arm, raised it and then tried to pull himself up. He wes not permitted to get the food in this way. A few minutes later he again led Yerkes toward the banana, but receiving discouragement in this activity, proceeded to devote himself to other methods.

The monkey's attention to the food was surprisingly constant, the observer notes. "Despite all that has been written concerning the intelligent behavior of the orang utan," he writes: "I was amazed by Julius' behavior, for it was far more deliberate and apparently reflective as well as more persistently directed toward the goal than I had anticipated. I had looked for sporadic attempts to obtain the banana, with speedy discouragement and such fluctuations of attention as would be exhibited by a child 2 to 4 years old. But in less than 10 minutes Julius made at least 10 obvious and well directed attempts to reach the food."

After the orang had been dismissed for the day, the child was led into the cage and confronted with the identical problem. He was asked to get the banana for Julius and eagerly and confidently volunteered to do so.

His behavior may best be described by an enumeration of the attempts made. They include (1) placing the larger box nearly under the banana and reaching for it; (2) standing the larger box on end, with resulting failure, because the child could not stand on the sloping edges of the top of the box; (3) the larger box was turned on its side and the lighter box drawn up opposite it and stood on end. The child then mounted the larger box and stepped from it to the top of the smaller. But the boxes had not been placed beneath the banana, and when the child reached for it, he found himself several feet away from his prize; (4) the boxes were moved to a position nearly under the banana and another futile attempt was made to reach it without placing the smaller box on top of the larger one; (5) the piece of board was placed on top of the larger box, and from this height the child again reached upward; (6) the stick was taken up and an attempt was made to strike the banana and thus dislodge it, but it was too securely fastened to be obtained thus; (7) attention shifted to other things, and the child played for a time with the board.

Julius, the orang utan hero of the experiment.

Reminded of the banana by the experimenter, he again tried method 3. (8) He again used the stick on the banana; (9) the effort to knock the prize to the floor having failed, he became discouraged and said that he must go home; (10) when told that Julius was very hungry and wanted the banana, he repeated attempts similar to those described in 3 and 6.

The experiment had now covered a period of 20 minutes; the child was taken from the cage and permitted to play for 15 minutes. He was then asked whether he would go back and try to get the banana, and replied: "No, 'cause I don't want to get it," thus showing his discouragement with the situation. But when taken into the cage he tried one of the boxes, and remarking, "Now I know I'll get it," repeated 3. Failing, he turned to the experimenter, and said: "I could get it if I was on your head," but he did not, as Julius had done, lead Yerkes to the proper place and try to reach the banana by climbing up or by urging Yerkes to lift him. Later, he played in the boxes, apparently forgetful of his task. Finally he remarked: "I'll get the banana," but he made no attempt to do so, and instead watched the monkeys intently. Thereafter he showed no further interest in the solution of the problem, and the experiment, after a total period of 55 minutes, was discontinued.

The conclusion drawn from this test was that, although both failed, the human child excelled the monkey in variety of ideas, while the orang far surpassed the boy in concentration upon the task. Indeed, Julius thereafter worked almost every day for a month before he finally gave up the undertaking as hopeless. Julius guaged his distances more accurately than the boy, attended more steadily and worked more persistently to obtain the reward, but he did not so nearly approach the idea of stacking the boxes as did the child, for the latter, in placing the board on one of the boxes, exhibited in ineffective form the idea which alone could yield a solution of the problem. The child readily conceived the notion of using the stick as a tool with which to knock the banana down; this did not occur to Julius on the first or on any succeeding day.

No further opportunity was given the child to work at the problem, but the orang was confronted with it for about a month, during the last week of which he became gradually so disheartened that he gave up all voluntary effort to solve the difficulty. Then Yerkes, in the presence of the monkey, stacked the boxes, climbed up and got the banana. But it was not until after five days of displaying this example to Julius that "he suddenly seized the smaller box by two corners with his hands and by one edge with his teeth, and after a few attempts placed it on top of the larger box, climbed up and obtained the fruit."

Thereafter the ape, without wasting time, immediately placed the small box on top of the large one, climbed up and seized the banana. It had taken him some time to grasp the idea, but once he had it, it was firmly lodged in his mind.

"No unprejudiced psychologist," says Yerkes, "would be likely to interpret the activities of the orang utan in the box-stacking experiment as other than imaginal or ideational. He went directly and in the most business-like manner from point to point, from method to method, trying in turn and more or less persistently almost all of the possible ways of obtaining the coveted food. The fact that he did not happen upon the only certain road to success is surprising indeed, in view of the many ineffective methods which he used. It seemed almost as it he avoided the easy method."

But Julius displayed genuine cleverness when the boxes were taken from him and a broom and a six-foot pole were the only tools left to him as means for obtaining the banana. His first solution was to stand the broom erect, climb up it as high as he could go be-

After Julius had learned the solution of the problem, he manipulated the boxes with great skill.

HOW LOU-TELLEGEN BECAME A "CAVE MAN" TO WIN THE HAND OF GERALDINE FARRAR

"I am going to marry you," he told her, and he did, although she had conceived a dislike for him, had refused to meet him, and gave out interviews up to three days before their wedding, asserting that she wouldn't wed until she was forty and that her husband must be an American—Glimpses of the early life of the Metropolitan Opera Company star and screen actress, told by herself

GERALDINE FARRAR (Mrs. Lou-Tellegen).

NO stage wedding in recent years has attracted the attention and interest of the American public like that of Geraldine Farrar, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and more recently a moving picture star, and the actor, Lou-Tellegen, who was comparatively unknown until his ardent wooing of the singer brought public notice to him. The romance derived an added interest from the fact that Miss Farrar had pronounced views on marriage, repeatedly asserting that she would not wed until she was 40 and that when she did she would become the wife of an American. She gave out interviews summing up her convictions, until three days before her marriage. Furthermore she conceived an instinctive dislike of Lou-Tellegen even before she had met him and refused to be presented to him, a movie director finally arranging that they should meet unavoidably. The following account of the inception and progress of the romance and the methods Lou-Tellegen used to break down Miss Farrar's prejudices and convictions, is based on revelations of a friend of both principals who was a witness to incidents at many stages of the courtship.

"I AM going to marry you," said Lou-Tellegen.

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Geraldine Farrar.

"I am going to marry you," repeated Lou-Tellegen.

"No," said Geraldine Farrar, forcefully. "I shall never marry until I am 40 and perhaps not then. And if I ever do, he will be an American. You are a Frenchman."

"Pardon me, but I was born in Holland. But that makes no difference. I have made up my mind to marry you."

"Then," declared Geraldine Farrar, "you will have to be a cave man and hit me over the head and drag me off by the hair."

This is just exactly what Lou-Tellegen did, according to a chronicler who gives us the inside story of the romance between the Metropolitan songbird and screen actress and the noted actor which resulted in their marriage six months after the foregoing conversation took place. Of course, Lou-Tellegen didn't literally hit her with a club and drag her off by her hair, but he used cave man tactics just the same—modern, refined cave man tactics. He took Miss Farrar's tip seriously and so spirited was his wooing that his bride-that-was-to-be herself got to calling him her "cave man."

Immediately after Lou-Tellegen delivered himself of this pronunciamento his courtship began. He devoted all his spare time to it. He gave her no peace, even for a day. There were motor rides, suppers—but this is getting 'way ahead of the story. Let's begin right at the very beginning.

The very beginning had for its stage setting the interior of a moving picture studio in Hollywood, a suburb of Los Angeles, where Miss Farrar was "doing" her first picture. The play in which she was being filmed was one in which Lou-Tellegen had appeared the previous season, and somebody casually remarked this, observing in passing that Lou-Tellegen would be in Hollywood in a few days. Miss Farrar said that she didn't think she would care to meet him; she had heard that he was a good deal of a dandy, a sort of "ladies' man." She was sure she wouldn't like him.

The director, who knew that she entertained a wrong impression, fixed it one day, after Lou-Tellegen's arrival, so that an accidental meeting was unavoidable. The actor was dressed for his part in a film called "The Explorer," and looked every inch a man—he must have looked like a cave man, in fact. Right at the start he disarmed Miss Farrar and sent all her prejudices and preconceived notions of him tumbling by declaring that he had always wanted to meet the "protege and friend of my dear comrade and associate, Sarah Bernhardt."

LOU-TELLEGEN.

Then what do you suppose Geraldine Farrar did? She invited him to lunch in her dressing room and showed him a wonderful new picture Mme. Bernhardt had just sent her and demanded that he tell her all he knew about Bernhardt. This, mind you, after she had turned up her nose at the thought of him, and had told her friends that she didn't want to meet him because he must be a prig and a bore. But this was not strange for her to do, as will appear later on.

Well, after this, Lou-Tellegen became a daily visitor at the Farrar home and then one night came the conversation which is set down in detail at the beginning of this story. The funny thing about that was that he didn't do like other wooers and lead her off to a sequestered nook to get it off his mind, but spoke right out in the presence of a number of guests at a house party at the Farrar home. That is why the text of their exchange of words can be given to the world. As related before, she laughed and all the rest of the company laughed, too. But Lou-Tellegen, naturally, was serious.

Now we can begin where we left off. Daily for six weeks there were motor rides, dinners, suppers, and a round of gaiety of all sorts until Miss Farrar departed for the East. Her train made 49 stops between Los Angeles and New York and at every stop a telegram from Lou-Tellegen was waiting to be delivered to Miss Farrar in her private car. Here was where he began getting in the "cave man" work, you see.

Those motor rides, dinners and other entertainments and the dispatching of the telegrams apparently marked only a beginning, for at this juncture, Miss Farrar had the effrontery to give out this interview to a newspaper person in Boston:

"I shall never marry, because marriage means for life. No man could ever mean to me what my art does. Marriage may be all right for some people and probably is, but not for an artist. You can't study an opera role with a baby squalling in the next room. No woman could be a successful singer until midnight, and then suddenly transform herself into a wife and mother. If I ever do marry I shall wait until I am 40 and then I shall marry an American. No, you cannot make it too strong for me—I am not going to marry Lou-Tellegen."

On second thought, the courtship must have been pretty well along, for she kept giving out interviews like this until three days before her capitulation. The man who tells the story relates that the beginning of the end must have been one day in Boston when he was seated in a baseball grandstand with Miss Farrar's father and mentioned Lou-Tellegen's name.

"She just got another telegram from him," the father said. "The cave man is on his way East."

So much for the events which led up to Miss Geraldine Farrar becoming Mrs. Lou-Tellegen. What happened to her before that she herself tells in the pages of "The Story of an American Singer by Herself," published recently by the Houghton Mifflin company. This time we'll start at the beginning, which was when Miss Farrar was three years old. At that age she made her debut in a church concert. She did well, and the applause was unstinted. But when the time came for her to retire from the stage, the child made instead for the footlights.

"Did I do well, mamma?" she queried of a lady in the front row, ignoring the rest of the audience.

Thus early did she display the talents and aplomb which were to be the formative factors of her career. The stage of the Metropolitan Opera House was, she tells, her objective. She knew she had the necessary talent, and that no self-consciousness delayed her progress, she proves by the many anecdotes with which she intersperses her narrative.

The manner of her meeting with Nordica is typical.

In 1899, then 17 years of age, she was studying with Trabadello in Paris. A series of small triumphs had marked her progress to the French capital from Melrose, Mass., via Boston and New York. She had every reason to be satisfied thus far, yet she was restless, not quite sure of her course.

Who could advise her? She was casting about, when in the spring of 1900 she heard that Nordica had arrived. They had met once before, but she was aware that her impression had not been lasting. She must find some means to bring herself to the native singer's immediate notice. Very shortly she found a way.

Nordica drove each day in the Bois, and Miss Farrar had a friend who owned a smart carriage. Soon she, too, was driving in the Bois, and the very first day, she sighted her quarry. The rest was simple.

If Lou-Tellegen woos thus fervently before the motion picture camera, it can readily be seen that in real life he must have been a veritable "cave man." The picture was taken after his marriage, and the lady is playing opposite him in a love drama.

They were driving in opposite directions, and as the carriages met, she stood up. A sweep of her arm, and there lay in Nordica's lap a locket containing her own picture. Naturally, they met forthwith, and the result was Miss Farrar's long years of success in Berlin.

In an official-rid city like the German capital, success comes slowly as a rule. It is not easy to achieve distinction when uniformity is the law, for not everyone has the courage to be a deliberate exception. However, to Miss Farrar, the matter was simple from the start.

Her premiere appearance before the Intendant of the Royal Opera had been set for an evening performance. She arranged accordingly, her arrangements consisting of a blue crepe de chine gown, to be worn with pearls and diamonds.

At the last moment the performance was switched to the afternoon.

Consternation on the part of Miss Farrar? Confusion on that of her dressmaker? Not in the least.

"The crazy American!" was the scarcely suppressed murmur that ran through the elite assemblage, as the recent arrival from New York appeared in full evening

Fantomas

"We are very early," Therese remarked, pointing to the station clock in the distance. "Your father's train is due at 6:55, and it is only 6:40 now; we still have a quarter of an hour to wait, and more, if the train is not punctual!"

They went into the station. A porter appeared.

"Ah, Mlle. Therese," he said with the familiar yet perfectly respectful cordiality that marks countryfolk, "up already? Have you come to meet somebody, or are you going away?"

"No, I am not going away," Therese replied. "I have accompanied M. Rambert, who has come to meet his father from Paris. Is the train signaled yet?"

The man drew out a watch like a turnip.

"It won't be here for quite another 20 minutes. The work on the tunnel makes it necessary to be careful and it's always late now."

Therese turned to Charles Rambert.

"Shall we go onto the platform? Then we shall see the train come in."

So they left the waiting room and began to walk up and down the whole length of the platform.

"Ah!" said Charles Rambert; "at last!"

The two porters who, with the station master, constituted the entire railway staff at Verrieres, came bustling along the platform, the engine slackened speed, and the heavy train slowed down and stopped.

The first-class carriages had stopped immediately in front of Charles and Therese, and on the footboard Etienne Rambert stood, a tall, elderly man of distinguished appearance, proud bearing and energetic attitude, with extraordinarily keen eyes and an unusually high and intelligent forehead.

"My boy!" he exclaimed; "my dear boy!"

Therese had drawn tactfully aside. M. Rambert held his son by the shoulders and stepped back a pace, the better to consider him.

"Why, you are a man! You are just what I hoped you would be; tall and strong! Yet you look tired."

"I did not sleep well," Charles explained with a smile. "I was afraid I should not wake up."

Turning his head, M. Rambert saw Therese and held out his hand.

"How do you do, my little Therese?" he exclaimed. "I left a little chit of a child, and now I behold a grown-up young lady. Well! I must be off at once to pay my respects to my dear old friend, your grandmother. All well at the chateau, eh?"

Meanwhile the train had gone on again, and now a porter came up to M. Rambert.

"Will you take your luggage with you, sir?"

"Grandmamma said," Therese interrupted, "she would send for your heavy luggage during the morning, and that you could take your valise and any small parcels with us in the brougham."

"What's that? Your grandmamma has taken the trouble to send her carriage?"

The three had reached the station yard, and Therese stopped in surprise.

"Why, how's that?" she exclaimed; "the carriage is not here. And yet Jean was beginning to get it ready when we left the chateau."

M. Etienne Rambert smiled at Therese.

"He may have been delayed, dear. We can leave everything in the cloakroom and start for the chateau on foot. We shall meet Jean and can get into the carriage on the way."

A few minutes later all three set out on the road to Beaulieu.

M. Etienne Rambert enjoyed the walk in the quiet morning through the peaceful countryside.

"Just fancy my coming back here at 60 years of age, with a great son of 18!" he said with a laugh. "It must be quite 40 years since I came this way, and yet I remember every bit of it. Isn't it the fact that we shall see the front of the chateau directly we have passed this little copse?"

For a few minutes M. Rambert remained silent, as if absorbed in somewhat melancholy reflections. But he soon recovered himself and shook off the tender sadness evoked in his mind by memories of the past.

"Why the park inclosure has been altered," he exclaimed. "Here is a wall which used not to be here; there was only a hedge. Must we go on to the main gate? Or has your grandmamma had another gate made?"

"We are going in by the outbuildings," the girl answered; "then we shall hear why Jean did not come to meet us." She opened a little door half-hidden among the moss and ivy that clothed the wall surrounding the park, and making M. Rambert and Charles pass in before her, cried: "But Jean has gone with the brougham, for the horses are not in the stable. How was it we did not meet him?" Then she laughed. "Poor Jean! He is so muddle-headed! I would not mind betting he went to meet us at Sant-Jaury, as he does every morning to bring me home from church."

The little company, Etienne Rambert, Therese and Charles, were now approaching the chateau. Passing beneath Mme. de Langrune's windows Therese called merrily up to them:

"Here we are, grandmamma!"

There was no reply.

But at the window of an adjoining room appeared the figure of the steward, Dollon, making a gesture, as if asking for silence.

Therese, in advance of her guests, had proceeded but a few yards when Mme. de Langrune's old servant rushed down the stone flight of steps in front of the chateau, toward M. Rambert.

Dollon seemed distraught. Usually so respectful and so deferential in manner, he now seized M. Rambert by the arm, and imperiously waving Therese and Charles away, drew him aside.

"It is awful, sir," he exclaimed, "horrible; a fearful thing has happened. We have just found Mme. la Marquise dead—murdered—in her room!"

CHAPTER III.

The Hunt for the Man.

WHEN M. de Presles, the examining magistrate in charge of the Court at Brives, arrived at the chateau of Beaulieu he first of all made inquiry as to who was in the house at the time. From the information given him he was satisfied that it was unnecessary to subject either Therese or Charles Rambert to immediate examination. It was also clear that M. Rambert senior, who had only arrived after the crime, could not furnish any interesting information.

"Tell me exactly how you discovered the crime, M. Dollon," he said as, pale and trembling, the steward accompanied him along the corridor to the scene of the murder.

"This morning as usual, sir," the steward replied, "I knocked at her door, as I always did, but got no answer. I don't know why I opened the door instead of going away; perhaps I had some kind of presentiment. I saw my poor dear mistress lying dead at the foot of her bed, steeped in blood, and with such a horrible gash in her throat that for a moment I thought [illegible] was severed from the trunk."

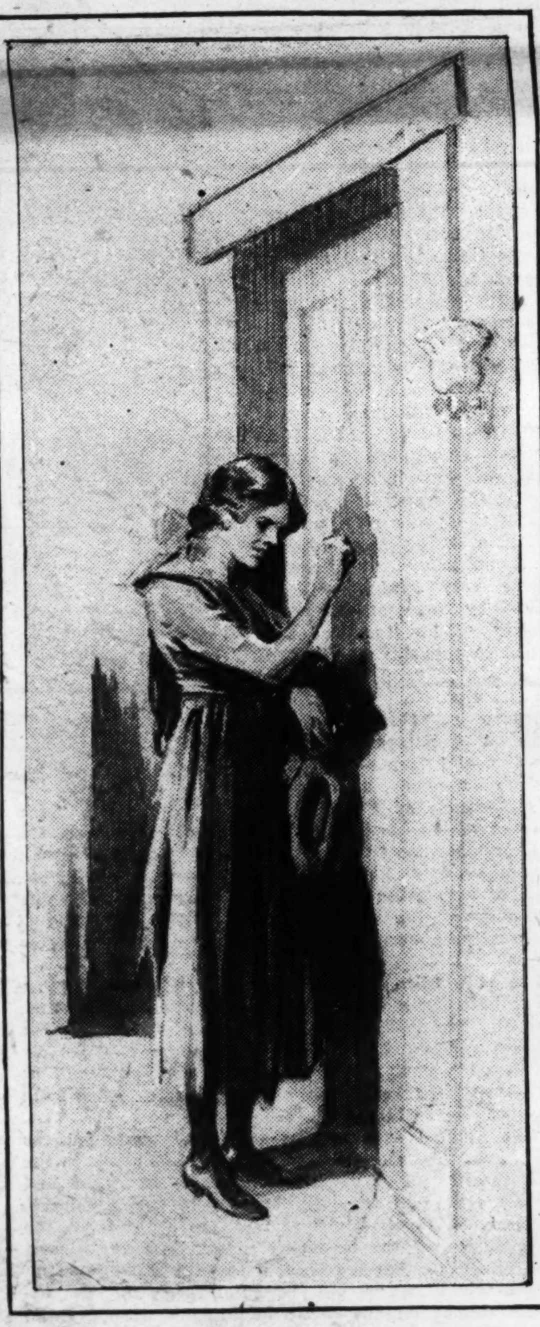
The police sergeant corroborated the steward's story.

"The murder certainly was committed with peculiarly horrible violence, sir," he remarked. "The wounds are shocking!"

The magistrate followed the steward into the room, where Dollon had taken care that nothing was touched.

Mme. de Langrune's room was large, and quietly furnished with old presses, arm chairs, chairs and old-fashioned tables. The whole of one side was filled by the Marquise's bed, large and raised upon a kind of dais. At the foot of the bed, on the right, was a large window, fastened half open despite the keen cold. In the middle of the room was a round mahogany table and a little farther away was a small escritoire, half open, with its drawers gaping and papers scattered on the floor.

There were only two ways of ingress; one by the door through which the magistrate had entered, which opened onto the main corridor on the first floor, and the other by a door communicating with the Marquise's dressing room; this dressing room was lighted by a large window, which was shut.



"At the chateau of Beaulieu young Charles Rambert was just finishing dressing when a gentle tap sounded on the door of his room."

The corpse of the Marquise was lying on its back on the floor, with the head toward the bed, the feet toward the window. A gash ran almost right across the throat and on the carpet around the body a wide stain was still slowly spreading wider.

M. de Presles stooped over the dead woman.

"What an appalling wound!" he muttered. "Nothing has been moved in the room, eh?"

"Nothing, sir."

The magistrate pointed to the escritoire with its open drawers.

"That has not been touched?"

"No, sir."

"I suppose that is where Mme. de Langrune kept her valuables?"

The steward shook his head.

"The Marquise had in the house a few hundred francs perhaps, for daily expenses, but certainly no more."

"So you do not think robbery was the motive of the crime?"

The steward shrugged his shoulders.

The magistrate walked slowly around the room.

"This window was open?" he asked.

The Marquise always left it like that; she liked all the fresh air she could get."

"Might not the murderer have got in that way?"

The steward shook his head.

"It is most unlikely, sir. See; the windows are fitted outside with a kind of grating pointing outward and downward, and I think that would prevent anyone from climbing in."

M. de Presles came to the door which opened onto the corridor.

"Ah!" he exclaimed; "this is interesting!" and with a finger he pointed to the inner bolt on the door, the screws of which were wrenched half out, showing that an attempt had been made to force the door. "Did Mme. de Langrune bolt her door every night?" he asked.

"Yes, always," Dollon answered. "She was very nervous, and if I was the first to come to bid her good-morning I always heard her unfasten that bolt when I knocked."

M. de Presles followed Dollon down to the library on the ground floor, where his enterprising clerk had already established himself. The magistrate took his seat behind a large table and turned to Dollon.

"What is the exact plan of the chateau?" was his first inquiry.

"The passage from the front door leads to the main staircase, which we went up just now, to the first floor, where the bedroom of the Marquise is situated. The first floor contains a series of rooms separated by a corridor. On the right is Mlle. Therese's room ,and then come guest chambers, which are not occupied now. On the left is the bedroom of the Marquise, followed by her dressing room on the same side, and after that there is another dressing room and then the bedroom occupied by M. Charles Rambert. The second floor is exactly like the first floor, sir, except that there are only servants' rooms there."

"What servants sleep in the house?"

"As a general rule, sir, the two maid servants, Marie the housemaid and Louise the cook, and also Herve the butler; but Herve did not sleep in the chateau last night. He had the mistress' permission to go into the village, on condition that he did not come back that night."

"What do you mean?" inquired the magistrate, rather surprised.

"The Marquise was rather nervous, so she was always careful to double lock the front door and the kitchen door herself every night. When Herve goes out in the evenings he either sleeps in the village or else asks the coachman to leave the yard door unlocked, and sleeps in a room above the stables, which as a rule is not occupied."

"That is where the other servants sleep, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir. The gardeners, the coachman and the keepers all live in the outbuildings. I have a small cottage a little farther away in the park."

"So, on the night of the crime the only persons sleeping in the chateau were Mme. de Langrune, her granddaughter, Mlle. Therese, M. Charles Rambert and the two maids. Is that so?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then it does not seem likely that the crime was committed by anyone living in the chateau?"

"That is so, sir—and yet I do not believe that anybody got into the chateau; only two people had a key to the front door—the Marquise and myself. This morning Mlle. Therese went out early with M. Charles Rambert to meet M. Rambert senior, at the station, and she opened the door with the keys that the Marquise had given into her care the night before; but she told me herself that when she started to meet the train at 5 o'clock the door was shut. Mlle. Therese had put the keys under her pillow, and my bunch had never left my possession.

"Is it not possible," the magistrate suggested, "that someone may have got in during the day, hidden himself and have committed the crime when night came?"

But the steward shook his head.

"No, sir, nobody could have secreted himself in the chateau during the day. The back door is under constant supervision. All yesterday afternoon there were gardeners at work on the lawn in front of the main entrance. I always kept the door locked through which one gets down to the cellars. So the murderer could not have hidden in the basement, and where else could he have hidden? Not in the rooms on the ground floor; there was company to dinner last night. So he would have had to be upstairs, either on the first or second floor; that is most unlikely. The big house dog is fastened up at the foot of the staircase during the day, and he would not have let any stranger pass him."

The magistrate was much perplexed.

"Then the crime is inexplicable, M. Dollon. You have just told me yourself that there was no one in the chateau but Mme. Langrune, the two young people, Therese and Charles, and the two maids. The way the crime was committed and the force of the blows dealt show that the criminal was a man—a professional murderer, in fact. He must have gotten in from outside. Come, now, have you no suspicions at all? Someone has committed a murder. That someone was hidden inside the chateau when Mme. de Langrune herself locked the front door, or else he got in during the night. Do you not see yourself, M. Dollon, that one or the other of these two hypotheses must be correct?"

The steward hesitated.

"It is a mystery, sir," he declared at last. "I swear to you, sir, that nobody could have got in, and yet it is perfectly clear also that neither M. Charles nor Mlle. Therese, nor yet either of the two maids, Marie and Louise, is the murderer."

M. de Presles sat wrapped in thought for a few minutes and then desired the old steward to fetch the two women servants.

CHAPTER IV.

"No! I Am Not Mad!"

THE next day but one after the crime, on the Friday, Louise the cook, still terribly upset by the death of the good mistress in whose service she had been for 15 years, was mechanically getting breakfast, when a sharp knock on the back door made her jump. She screamed as she saw the cocked hats of gendarmes silhouetted against the wan light.

Between the gendarmes were two miserable looking specimens of humanity. The sergeant, who had known her for many years, took a step forward.

"I must ask your hospitality for us and for these two fellows."

The dismayed Louise broke in.

"Good heavens, sergeant, are you bringing thieves here? Where do you expect me to put them?"

"Put them? Why, in your kitchen, of course. There's nothing for you to be afraid of; the men are handcuffed. We are going to wait here for the magistrate."

The gendarmes had pushed their wretched captives in before them, two tramps of the shadiest appearance.

CHAPTER I.

The Genius of Crime.

DINNER was just over, and the company were moving into the drawing room.

During the 10 consecutive months she spent every year at her chateau of Beaulieu, on the outskirts of Correce, that picturesque district bounded by the Dordogne, it had been the custom of the Marquise de Langrune to entertain a few of her personal friends in the neighborhood to dinner every Wednesday.

On this particular winter evening the good lady's guests included President Bonnet, a retired magistrate, the Abbe Sicot, who was the parish priest, and a more occasional friend, the Baronne de Vibray, a young and wealthy widow, a typical woman of the world. When she put herself out to grass, as she racily phrased it, and spent a few weeks at Querelles, her estate close to the chateau of Beaulieu, she liked to take her place again in the delightful company of the Marquise de Langrune and her friends.

Finally, youth was represented by Charles Rambert, who had arrived at the chateau a couple of days before, a charming lad of about 18, who was treated with warm affection by the Marquise and by Therese Auvernois, the granddaughter of the Marquise, with whom since her parents' death she had lived as a daughter.

Certain odd and even mysterious words spoken by President Bonnet as they were leaving the table had excited the curiosity of the company. Crowding round the fire, for the evening was very cold, Mme. de Langrune's friends showered fresh questions upon the old magistrate, who secretly enjoyed the interest he had inspired. Young Charles Rambert broke in with a voice that quivered slightly.

"You were talking about Fantomas just now sir"——

The President cast a cryptic look at the lad and did not reply directly to him.

"That was what I was coming to, for, of course, you have understood me, ladies. In these days we have been distressed by a steady access of criminality, and among the assets we shall henceforth have to count a mysterious and most dangerous creature, to whom the baffled authorities and public rumor generally have for some time now given the name Fantomas. It is impossible to say exactly or to know precisely whom Fantomas is. Sometimes he works alone, sometimes with accomplices; sometimes he can be identified as such and such a person, but no one has ever yet arrived at knowing Fantomas himself. That he is a living person is certain and undeniable, yet he is impossible to catch or to identify. He is nowhere and everywhere at once, his shadow hovers above the strangest mysteries, and his traces are found near the most inexplicable crimes, and yet"——

"You are frightening us!" exclaimed the Baronne de Vibray, with a little forced laugh that did not ring true, and the Marquise de Langrune turned to Charles Rambert and Therese.

"You must find it very dull here with all of us grown-up people, dears, so run away now. Therese," she added with a smile to her granddaughter, who had risen obediently, "there is a splendid new puzzle in the library; you ought to try it with Charles."

The young fellow realized that he must comply with the desire of the Marquise, although the conversation interested him intensely; but he was too well bred to betray his thoughts, and the next moment he was in the adjoining room, sitting opposite the girl, and deep in the intricacies of the latest fashionable game.

The Baronne de Vibray brought the conversation back to the subject of Fantomas.

"What connection is there, President, between this uncanny creature and the disappearance of Lord Beltham, of which we were talking at dinner?"

"I should certainly have thought there was none," the old magistrate replied, "if Lord Beltham's disappearance had been unattended by any mysterious circumstances. But it is said that when Lady Beltham began to be uneasy about her husband's disappearance, the morning of the day following his disappearance, she remembered noticing just as he was going out that he was reading a particular letter, the handwriting of which was very heavy and black. Now, she found the letter in question upon her husband's desk, but the whole of the writing had disappeared, and it was only the most minute examination that resulted in the discovery of a few almost imperceptible stains which proved that it really was the identical document that had been in her husband's hands. Lady Beltham would not have thought very much about it if it had not occurred to the editor of La Capitale to interview Detective Juve about it, the famous Inspector of the Criminal Investigation Department, you know, who has brought so many notorious criminals to justice. Now M. Juve manifested the greatest excitement over the discovery and the nature of this document; and he did not attempt to hide from his interviewer his belief that the strange nature of this unusual epistle was proof of the intervention of Fantomas. You very likely know that Juve has made it his special business to follow up Fantomas; he has sworn that he will take him. Let us hope he will succeed! But it is no good pretending that Juve's job is not as difficult a one as can be imagined."

President Bonnet had convinced his audience completely, and his closing words cast a chill upon them all.

The Marquise de Langrune deemed it time to create a diversion.

"Who are these people, Lord and Lady Beltham?" she inquired.

"Oh, my dear!" the Baronne de Vibray answered, "Lord and Lady Beltham are among the best known and most popular people in society. He was formerly attached to the English Embassy, but left Paris to fight in the Transvaal, and his wife went with him and showed magnificent courage and compassion in charge of the ambulance and hospital work. They then went back to London, and a couple of years ago they settled once more in Paris. They lived, and still live, in the Boulevard Inkermann at Neuilly-sur-Seine, in a delightful house, where they entertain a great deal. I have often been one of Lady Beltham's guests; she is a most fascinating woman, distinguished, tall, fair, and endowed with the charm that is peculiar to the women of the North. I am very distressed at the trouble that is hanging over her"

The clock chimed 10, and her duties as hostess did not make the Marquise forgetful of her duties as grandmother.

"Therese," she called, "it is your bedtime. It is very late, darling."

The child obediently left her game, said good-night to the Baronne de Vibray and President Bonnet, and last of all to the old priest, who gave her a paternal embrace.

"Shall I see you at the 7 o'clock mass, Therese?" he asked.

The child turned to the Marquise.

"Will you let me accompany Charles to the station tomorrow morning?"

The Marquise looked at Charles Rambert.

"Your father really is coming by the train that reaches Verrieres at 6:55?" and when he assented, "Very well, then," the kind old lady said, "arrange it as you please. But, Therese, before you go upstairs, tell our good steward, Dollon, to give orders for the carriage to be ready by 6 o'clock. It is a long way to the station."

Therese promised and the two young people left the drawing room.

"Who is this Charles Rambert?" the Abbe asked.

"I am not surprised," the Marquise laughed, "that you do not know him. But you may perhaps have heard me mention a M. Etienne Rambert, an old friend of mine, whom I had lost sight of completely until about two years ago. The poor man has had a rather checkered life; twenty years ago he married a woman who was perfectly charming, but who is, I believe, very ill with a distressing malady. Quite lately Etienne Rambert has been compelled to send her to an asylum."

"That does not tell us how his son comes to be your guest," President Bonnet urged.

"It is very simple. Etienne Rambert is an energetic man, who is always moving about. Although he is quite 60, he still occupies himself with some rubber plantations he possesses in Colombia, and he often goes to America. Well, just recently young Charles Rambert was leaving the pension in Hamburg where he had been living in order to perfect his German; I knew from his father's letters that Mme. Rambert was about to be put away, and that Etienne Rambert was obliged to be ab-those dark eyes. Nayland Smith brought me sharply to my senses.

"Steady with the light, Petrie!" he hissed in my ear. "My skepticism has been shaken tonight, but I am taking no chances."

He moved from my side and forward toward that lovely, unreal figure which stood immediately before the model's throne and its background of plush curtains. Karamaneh started forward to meet him, suppressing a little cry, whose real anguish could not have been simulated.

"Go back! go back!" she whispered urgently, and thrust out her hands against Smith's breast. "For God's sake, go back! I have risked my life to come here tonight. He knows, and is ready!" * * *

The words were spoken with passionate intensity, and Nayland Smith hesitated. To my nostrils was wafted that faint, delightful perfume which, since one night, two years ago, it had come to disturb my senses, had taunted me many times as the mirage taunts the parched Sahara traveler. I took a step forward.

"Don't move!" snapped Smith.

Karamaneh clutched frenziedly at the lapels of his coat.

"Listen to me!" she said, beseechingly, and stamped her little foot upon the floor—"listen to me! You are a clever man, but you know nothing of a woman's heart—nothing—nothing—if seeing me, hearing me, knowing, as you do know, what I risk, you can doubt that I speak the truth. And I tell you that it is death to go behind those curtains—that he" * * *

"That's what I wanted to know!" snapped Smith. His voice quivered with excitement.

Suddenly grasping Karamaneh by the waist, he lifted her and set her aside; then in three bounds he was on to the model's throne and had torn the plush curtains bodily from their fastenings.

How it occurred I cannot hope to make clear, for here my recollections merge into a chaos. I know that Smith seemed to topple forward amid the purple billows of velvet, and his muffled cry came to me:

"Petrie! My God, Petrie!" * * *

The pale face of Karamaneh looked up into mine and her hands were clutching me, but the glamour of her personality had lost its hold, for I knew—heavens, how poignantly it struck home to me!—that Nayland Smith was gone to his death. What I hoped to achieve I know not, but hurling the trembling girl aside, I snatched the Browning pistol from my coat pocket, and with the ray of the lamp directed upon the purple mound of velvet, I leaped forward.

I think I realized that the curtains had masked a collapsible trap, a sheer pit of blackness, an instant before I was precipitated into it, but certainly the knowledge came too late. With the sound of a soft, shuddering cry in my ears, I fell, dropping lamp and pistol, and clutching at the fallen hangings. But they offered me no support. My head seemed to be bursting; I could utter only a hoarse groan as I fell—fell—fell * * *

When my mind began to work again, in returning consciousness, I found it to be laden with reproach. How often in the past had we blindly hurled ourselves into just such a trap as this? Should we never learn that where Fu-Manchu was, impetuousity must prove fatal? On two distinct occasions in the past we had been made the victims of this device, yet even although we had had practically conclusive evidence that this studio was used by Dr. Fu-Manchu, we had relied upon its floor being as secure as that of any other studio, we had failed to sound every foot of it ere trusting our weight to its support. * * *

"There is such a divine simplicity in the English mind that one may lay one's plans with mathematical precision, and rely upon the Nayland Smiths and Dr. Petries to play their allotted parts. Excepting two faithful followers, my friends are long since departed. But here, in these vaults which time has overlooked and which are as secret and as serviceable today as they were 200 years ago, I wait patiently with my trap set, like the spider for the fly." * * *

To the sound of that taunting voice I opened my eyes. As I did so I strove to spring upright—only to realize that I was tied fast to a heavy ebony chair inlaid with ivory, and attached by means of two iron brackets to the floor.

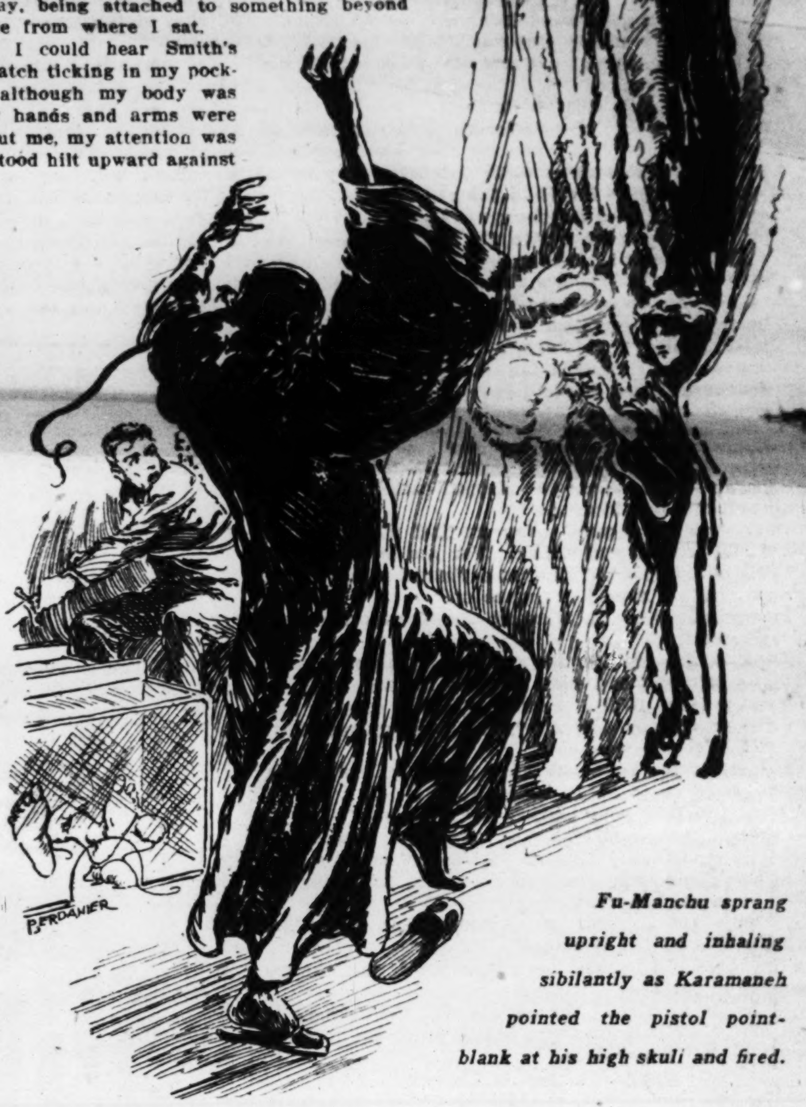
"Even children learn from experience," continued the unforgetable voice, alternately guttural and sibilant, but always as deliberate as though the speaker were choosing with care words which should perfectly clothe his thoughts. "For 'a burnt child fears the fire,' says your English adage. But Mr. Commissioner Nayland Smith, who enjoys the confidence of the India office, and who is empowered to control the movements of the criminal investigation department, learns nothing from experience. He is less than a child, since he has twice rashly precipitated himself into a chamber charged with an anesthetic prepared, by a process of my own, from the lycoperdon or common puffball."

I became fully master of my senses, and I became fully alive to a stupendous fact. At last it was ended; we were utterly in the power of Dr. Fu-Manchu; our race was run. I sat in a low-vaulted room. The roof was of ancient brickwork, but the walls were draped with exquisite Chinese fabrics; a green ground whereon was a design representing a grotesque procession of white peacocks. A green carpet covered the floor, and the whole of the furniture was of the same material as the chair to which I was strapped, viz., ebony inlaid with ivory. This furniture was scanty. There was a heavy table in one corner of the dungeonesque place, on which were a number of books and papers Before this table was a high-backed heavily carved chair A smaller table stood upon the right of the only visible opening, a low door partially draped and beadwork curtains, above which hung a silver lamp On this smaller table a stick of incense, in a silver holder, sent up a pencil of vapor into the air, and the chamber was loaded with sickly sweet fumes A faint haze from the incense stick hovered up under the roof.

In the high-backed chair sat Dr. Fu-Manchu, wearing a green robe upon which was embroidered a design, the subject of which at first glance was not perceptible, but which presently I made out to be a huge white peacock. He wore a little cap perched upon the dome of his amazing skull and with one clawish hand resting upon the ebony of the table, he sat slightly turned toward me, his emotionless face a mask of incredible evil. In spite of, or because of, the high intellect written upon it, the face of Dr. Fu-Manchu was more utterly repellent than any I have ever known, and the green eyes—eyes green as those of a cat in the darkness, which sometimes burned like witch lamps, and sometimes were horribly filmed like nothing human or imaginable—might have mirrored not a soul, but an emanation of hell, incarnate in his gaunt, high-shouldered body.

Stretched flat upon the floor lay Nayland Smith, partially stripped, his arms thrown back over his head and his wrists chained to a stout iron staple attached to the wall; he was fully conscious and staring intently at the Chinese doctor. His bare ankles also were manacled and fixed to a second chain, which quivered tautly across the green carpet and passed out through the doorway, being attached to something beyond the curtain and invisible to me from where I sat.

Fu-Manchu was not silent. I could hear Smith's heavy breathing and hear my watch ticking in my pocket. I suddenly realized that, although my body was lashed to the ebony chair, my hands and arms were free. Next, looking dazedly about me, my attention was drawn to a heavy sword which stood hilt upward against the wall within reach of my hand. It was a magnificent piece of Japanese workmanship; a long, curved damascened blade having a double-handled hilt of steel, inlaid with gold, resembling fine Kuft work. A host of possibilities swept through my mind. Then I perceived that the sword was attached to the wall by a thin steel chain some five feet in length.



Fu-Manchu sprang upright and inhaling sibilantly as Karamaneh pointed the pistol point-blank at his high skull and fired.

"Even if you had the dexterity of a Mexican knife-thrower," came the guttural voice of Fu-Manchu, "you would be unable to reach me, dear Dr. Petrie."

The Chinaman had read my thoughts.

Smith turned his eyes upon me momentarily, only to look away again in the direction of Fu-Manchu. My friend's face was slightly pale beneath the tan, and his jaw muscles stood out with unusual prominence. By this fact alone did he reveal the knowledge that he lay at the mercy of this enemy of the white race, of this inhuman being who himself knew no mercy, of this man whose very genius was inspired by the cool, calculated cruelty of his race, of that which to this day disposed of hundreds, nay, thousands of its girl children by the simple measure of throwing them down a well specially dedicated to the purpose.

"The weapon near your hand," continued the Chinaman imperturbably, "is a product of the civilization of our near neighbors, the Japanese, a race to whose courage I prostrate myself in meekness. It is the sword of a samurai, Dr. Petrie. It is of very great age and was, until an unfortunate misunderstanding with myself led to the extinction of the family, a treasured possession of a noble Japanese house."

The soft voice, into which an occasional sibilance crept, but which never rose above a cool monotone, gradually was lashing me into fury, and I could see the muscles moving in Smith's jaws as he convulsively clenched his teeth; whereby I knew that, impotent, he burned with a rage at least as great as mine. But I did not speak and did not move.

"The ancient tradition of seppuku," continued the Chinaman, "or hara-kiri, still rules, as you know, in the great families of Japan. There is a sacred ritual, and the samurai who dedicates himself to this honorable end must follow strictly the ritual. As a physician, the exact nature of the ceremony might possibly interest you, Dr. Petrie, but a technical account of the two incisions which the sacrificant employs in his self-dismissal might, on the other hand, bore Mr. Nayland Smith. Therefore I will merely enlighten you upon one little point, a minor one, but interesting to the student of human nature. In short, even a samurai—and no braver race has ever honored the world—sometimes hesitates to complete the operation. The weapon near to your hand, my dear Dr. Betrie, is known as the Friend's Sword. On such occasions as we are discussing a trusty friend is given the post—an honored one—of standing behind the brave man who offers himself to his gods, and should the latter's courage momentarily fail him the friend with the trusty blade (to which now I especially direct your attention) diverts the hierophant's mind from his digression, and recites his temporary breach of etiquette by severing the cervical vertebrae of the spinal column with the friendly blade—which you can reach quite easily, Dr. Petrie, if you care to extend your hand."

Some dim perception of the truth was beginning to creep into my mind. When I say a perception of the truth I mean rather of some part of the purpose of Dr. Fu-Manchu. Of the whole horrible truth, of the scheme which had been conceived in that mighty, evil man, I had no glimmering, but I foresaw that a frightful ordeal was before us both.

"That I hold you in high esteem," continued Fu-Manchu, "is a fact which must be apparent to you by this time; but in regard to your companion, I entertain very different sentiments."

Always underlying the deliberate calm of the speaker, sometimes showing itself in an unusually deep guttural, sometimes in an unusually serpentine sibilant, lurked the frenzy of hatred which in the past had revealed itself occasionally in wild outbursts. Momentarily I expected such an outburst now, but it did not come.

"One quality possessed by Mr. Nayland Smith" resumed the Chinaman, "I admire. I refer to his courage. I would wish that so courageous a man should seek his own end, should voluntarily efface himself from the path of the world movement which he is powerless to check. In short, I would have him show himself a samurai. Always his friend, you shall remain so to the end, Dr. Petrie. I have arranged for this."

He struck lightly a little silver gong dependent from the corner of the table, whereupon, from the curtained doorway, there entered a short, thickly built Burman whom I recognized for a dacoit. He wore a shoddy blue suit, which had been made for a much larger man; but these things claimed little of my attention, which automatically was directed to the load beneath which the Burman labored.

Upon his back he carried a sort of wire box rather less than six feet long, some two feet high, and about two feet wide. In short, it was a stout framework covered with fine wire netting on the tops, sides and ends, but being open at the bottom. It seemed to be made in five sections, or to contain four sliding partitions which could be raised or lowered at will. These were of wood, and in the bottom of each was cut a little arch. The arches in the four partitions varied in size, so that whereas the first was not more than five inches high, the fourth opened almost to the wire roof of the box or cage; and a fifth, which was but little higher than the first, was cut in the actual end of the contrivance.

So intent was I upon this device, the purpose of which I was wholly unable to divine, that I directed the whole of my attention upon it. Then, as the Burman paused in the doorway, resting a corner of the cage upon the brilliant carpet, I glanced toward Dr. Fu-Manchu. He was watching Nayland Smith and revealing his irregular yellow teeth—the teeth of an opium smoker—in the awful mirthless smile which I knew.

"God!" whispered Smith. "The Six Gates!"

"Your knowledge of my beautiful country serves you well," replied Fu-Manchu gently.

Instantly I looked to my friend—and every drop of blood seemed to recede from my heart, leaving it cold in my breast. If I did not know the purpose of the cage, obviously Smith knew it all too well. His pallor had grown more marked, and although his gray eyes stared defiantly at the Chinaman, I, who knew him, could read a deathly horror in their depths.

The dacoit, in obedience to a guttural order from Dr. Fu-Manchu, placed the cage upon the carpet, completely covering Smith's body, but leaving his neck and head exposed. The seared and pock-marked face set in a sort of placid leer, the dacoit adjusted the sliding partitions to Smith's recumbent form, and I saw the purpose of the graduated arches. They were intended to divide a human body in just such fashion and, as I realized, were most cunningly shaped to that end. The whole of Smith's body lay now in the wire cage, each of the five compartments whereof was shut off from its neighbor.

The Burman stepped back and stood waiting in the doorway. Dr. Fu-Manchu, removing his gaze from the face of my friend, directed it upon me.

"Mr. Commissioner Nayland Smith shall have the honor of acting as hierophant, admitting himself to the Mysteries," said Fu-Manchu softly, "and you, Dr. Petrie, shall be the Friend."

He glanced toward the Burman, who retired, immediately to re-enter a moment later carrying a curious leather sack, in shape not unlike that of a sakka, or Arab water carrier. Opening a little trap in the top of the first compartment of the cage (that is, the compartment which covered Smith's bare feet and ankles), he sent, so I offered to receive Charles here until his father should return to Paris. Charles came the day before yesterday, and that is the whole story."

"And M. Etienne Rambert joins him here tomorrow?" said the Abbe.

"That is so"——

The Marquise de Langrune would have given other information about her young friend had he not come into the room just then, an attractive lad, with refined and distinguished features, clear, intelligent eyes and graceful figure. He went up to President Bonnet and plucked up sudden courage.

"And what then, sir?" he asked in a low tone.

"I don't understand, my boy," said the magistrate.

"Oh!" said Charles Rambert, "have you finished talk- about Fantomas? It was so amusing!"

"For my part," the president answered dryly, "I do not find these stories about criminals 'amusing.'"

But the lad did not detect the shade of reproach in the words.

"But still it is very odd, very extraordinary that such mysterious characters as Fantomas can exist nowadays. Is it really possible that a single man can commit such a number of crimes and that any human being can escape discovery, as they say Fantomas can, and be able to foil the cleverest devices of the police? I think it is"——

The president's manner grew steadily more chilly as the boy's curiosity waxed more enthusiastic, and he interrupted curtly:

"I fail to understand your attitude, young man. You appear to be hypnotised, fascinated. You speak of Fantomas as if he were something interesting. It is out of place, to put it mildly," and he turned to the Abbe Sicot. "There, sir, that is the result of this modern education and the state of mind produced in the younger generation by the newspaper press and even by literature. Criminals are given haloes and proclaimed from the housetops. It is astounding!"

But Charles Rambert was not the least impressed.

"But it is life, sir; it is history, it is the real thing!" he insisted. "Why, you yourself, in just a few words, have thrown an atmosphere round this Fantomas which makes him absolutely fascinating! I would give anything to have known Vidocq and Cartouche and Rocambole, and to have seen them at close quarters. Those were men!"

President Bonnet contemplated the young man in astonishment; his eyes flashed lightning at him and he burst out:

"You are mad, boy, absolutely mad! Vidocq—Rocambole! You mix up legend and history, bracket murderers with detectives, and make no distinction between right and wrong! You would not hesitate to set the heroes of crime and the heroes of law and order on one and the same pedestal!"

Even the indulgent Marquise de Langrune ceased to smile. Charles Rambert perceived that he had gone too far.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he murmured. "I spoke without thinking; please forgive me."

He raised his eyes and looked at President Bonnet, blushing to the tips of his ears and looking so abashed that the magistrate, who was a kind-hearted man at bottom, tried to reassure him.

It was very late now, and a few minutes after this incident the guests of the Marquise de Langrune took their departure.

Charles Rambert accompanied the Marquise to the door of her own private rooms, and was about to bid her a respectful good-night before going on to his bedroom, which adjoined hers, when she asked him to follow her.

"Come in and get the book I promised you, Charles. Put your light down on that table. I have got to open my desk, for I must look at the lottery tickets I gave to Therese a few weeks ago." She pushed back the roll top of her empire desk and looked up at the young fellow. "It would be a piece of good luck if my little Therese won the first prize, eh, Charles? A million francs! That would be worth winning!"

The Marquise found the book she was searching for and gave it to the lad with one hand, while with the other she smoothed out several variegated papers.

"These are my tickets," she said, and then the old lady turned away from her writing table, which she left wide open, conducted the young man to the door and held out a friendly hand. "It is tomorrow morning already!" she said. "So now good-night, dear Charles!"

In his own room, with the lights extinguished and the curtains closed, Charles Rambert lay wide awake, a prey to strange excitement. If for an instant he dozed off, the image of Fantomas took shape in his mind, but never twice the same. Sometimes he saw a colossal figure with bestial face and muscular shoulders; sometimes a wan, thin creature, with strange and piercing eyes.

Charles Rambert slept and woke and dozed again. Then suddenly, bathed in cold sweat, he started and sat upright in bed, every muscle tense, listening with all his ears. Was he dreaming, or had he really waked up? He did not know. And still, still he had a consciousness of Fantomas—of mystery—of Fantomas!

Charles Rambert heard the clock strike 4.

CHAPTER II.

The Tragic Dawn.

As his cab turned by the end of the Pont Royal toward the Dare d'Orsay, M. Etienne Rambert found that he had a good quarter of an hour before the train that he intended to take was due to start. He proceeded to the booking office and took a first-class ticket.

"The Luchon train," he said to his porter; "where is it?" and as the man only made a vague gesture and growled something wholly indistinct, he added: "Lead the way, and I will follow."

"You want the express, sir?"

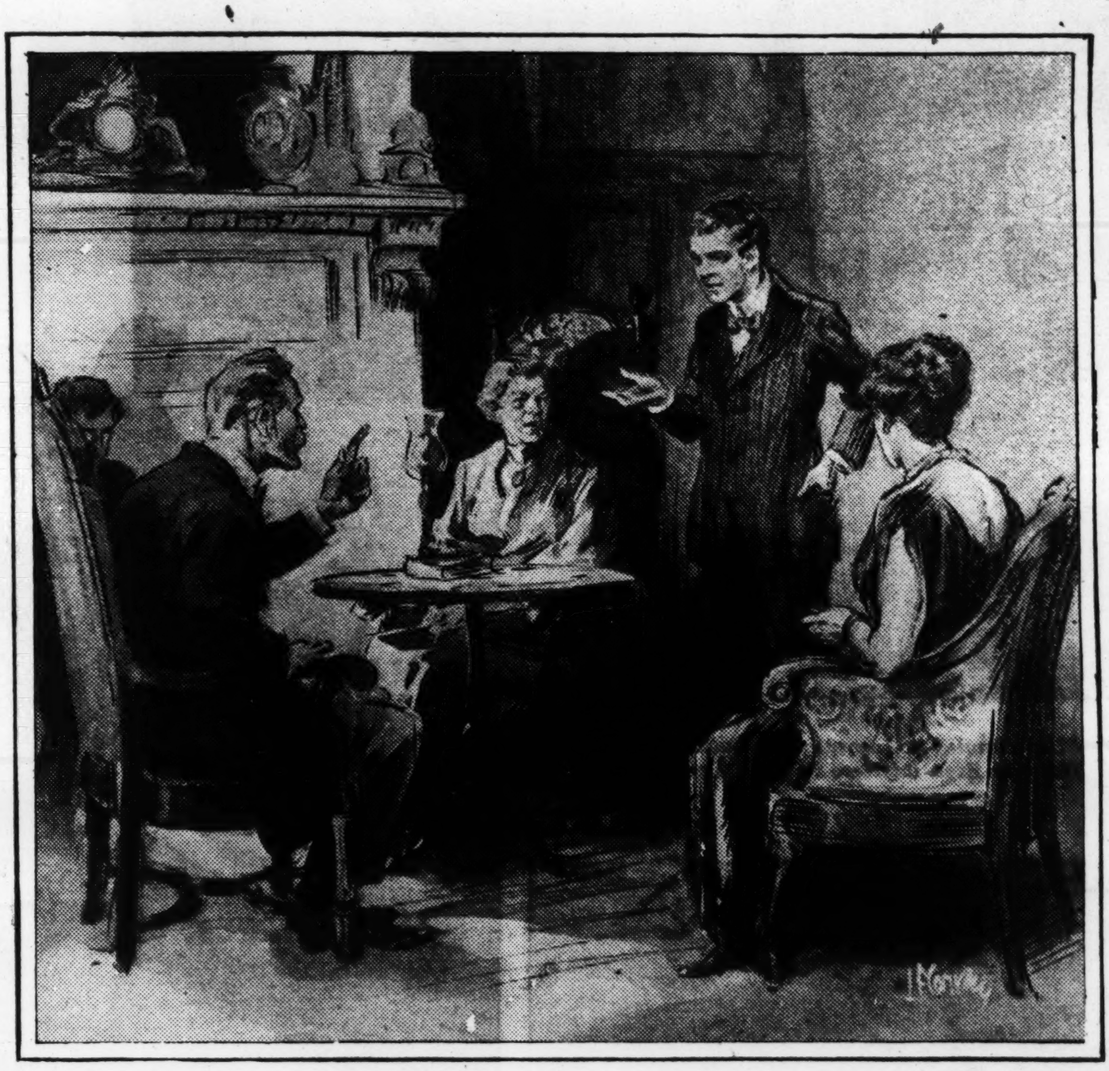
"No, the slow train, my man."

The porter, who had stopped a moment, picked up the heavy valise again.

"Then there isn't any choice. There are only two first-class carriages on the slow train, and they are both in the middle."

"They are corridor carriages, I suppose?" said Etienne Rambert.

"Yes, sir; there are hardly any others on the main line trains, especially first-class."



"You are mad, boy, absolutely mad! You mix up legend and history, bracket murderers with detectives, and make no distinction between right and wrong!"

On the right of the platform was the train which was to take Etienne Rambert beyond Brives to Verrieres, the slow train to Luchon; and on the left of the same platform was another train for Juvisy and all the small stations in the suburbs of Paris.

The porter who was piloting M. Etienne Rambert set the baggage down on the footboard of a first-class carriage, and he had hardly set foot in the corridor before the guard, also scenting a generous tip, came to offer his services.

"It really is the 8:50 you want, sir?" was his first inquiry. "A great many first-class passengers confuse the 8:50 with the 8:45."

"The 8:45 is the express, isn't it?" M. Rambert inquired.

"Yes," the guard answered; "it goes in front of this one and gets to Luchon three hours earlier. There it is on the side there," and he pointed through the window in the door on the far side to another train on the next rails, in which a number of travelers were already taking their seats. "If you prefer to go by that one, sir," he went on, "there is still time for you to change; you are entitled to take your choice, since you have a first-class ticket."

"No, the slow train stops at Verrieres, where, by the way, I have already telegraphed to say I shall arrive tomorrow morning."

He walked a little way along the corridor, assuring himself that the various compartments were still quite empty, and then turned to the guard.

"Look here, my man," he said, "I am awfully tired, and I mean to get some sleep tonight; consequently I should like to be alone. Now, where shall I be most quiet and undisturbed?"

The man understood. M. Etienne Rambert's inquiry was an implicit promise of a handsome tip.

"If you like to settle yourself here, sir," the man answered, "you can draw down the blinds at once, and I dare say I shall be able to find room for any other passengers somewhere else."

"Good," said M. Rambert, moving toward the compartment indicated. "By the way, my man, since you seem so obliging, I wish you would undertake to call me tomorrow morning in time for me to get out at Verrieres."

"You can be perfectly easy, sir, and sleep without the least anxiety. I won't fail."

When his baggage had been stowed away, M. Etienne Rambert repeated his appeal, for he was an old traveler and knew that it does not do to rely too much upon the promise of chance attendants.

"I can rely upon you, can't I? I may sleep as sound as I like, and you will wake me at Verrieres?" And the more to assure himself that the guard would execute his orders he slipped a franc into his hand.

When he was left alone, M. Rambert carefully drew down the blinds over the door and over the windows of the compartment that gave on to the corridor, and also lowered the shade over the electric light, and then in order to enjoy the last puffs at his cigar in peace, he opened the window over the other door and leaned his elbows on it, watching the final preparations being made by the travelers by the express on the other line.

There were not many people in the train. If the number of passengers in the express were any criterion Etienne Rambert might reasonably expect that he would be the only one in the slow strain. Meanwhile the guard was doing wonders. Shamelessly resolved to assure perfect quiet to "his" passenger, he managed to insinuate discreetly that M. Rambert's carriage was reserved.

A few minutes after the express had gone, the slow train drew out in its turn, and disappeared into the darkness of the underground tunnel.

At the chateau of Beaulieu, young Charles Rambert was just finishing dressing when a gentle tap sounded on the door of his room.

"It is a quarter to 5, Charles. I will wait for you in the dining room. Come down as soon as you are dressed."

"All right!" the young man answered.

He wasted no time over his toilet, and then, taking his light, he tiptoed along the landing, and went down the staircase to join Therese in the dining room.

"Let us have breakfast quickly," she suggested. "If you like we might walk to the station."

"It will warm us up anyhow," Charles Rambert replied; he was only half awake, but he sat beside Therese and did justice to the preparations she had made.

"Shall we start?" the girl asked then.

Therese opened the hall door and the two young people went down the flight of steps leading to the garden. As they passed the stables they came across a groom who was leisurely getting an old brougham out of the coach house.

"Don't hurry, Jean," Therese called out as she greeted him. "We are going to walk to the station, and the only important thing is that you should be there to bring us back."

The man touched his cap and the two young people passed through the park gate and found themselves upon the high road.

"It must please you awfully to be going to meet your father," said Mme. de Langrune's granddaughter, half-questioningly. "It is a long time since you have seen him, isn't it?"

"Three years," Charles Rambert answered. "He is coming home from America now, and before that he traveled in Spain for a long time."

"He was traveling the whole time you were a child, wasn't he?"

"Yes, always. When he was in Paris he used to come to the school and I saw him in the parlor—for a quarter of an hour."

"And your mother?"

"Oh, mamma was different. You know, Therese, I spent all the childhood that I can remember at the school."

"But you loved your mother very much?"

"Oh, yes, I loved her," Charles Rambert answered; "but I hardly knew her, either. You see, Therese, now that I am a man I guess a lot of things that I could not have had even a suspicion of then. My father and mother did not get on well together. They were both very good, but their characters did not harmonize. My father was constantly away, whereas mamma hardly ever went out. When a servant took me to the house on Thursday, I was taken up to say good-morning to her and I invariably found her lying on a sofa in her room, with the blinds down and almost dark. Then I was taken away again because I tired her."

"Was she ill, then?"

"Mamma has always been ill. I suppose you know, Therese, that three months ago she was sent to an asylum? I believe my father had wanted her to agree to undergo careful treatment of the kind long before, but she would not."

Therese was silent for a few minutes.

"You have not been very happy," she said presently.

Day was breaking now; a dirty December day, with light flickering through heavy gray clouds.

"I have not been very happy either," said Therese, "for I lost my father when I was tiny. I don't even remember him; and mamma must be dead as well."

The ambiguous turning of the child's phrase caught Charles Rambert's interested attention.

"What does that mean, Therese? Don't you know if your mother is dead?"

"Yes, oh, yes; grandmamma says so. But whenever I ask for particulars, grandmamma always changes the subject. I sometimes wonder if something is not being kept back from me—whether it is really true that mamma is no more in this world."

Talking like this Therese and Charles had walked at a good pace, and now they came to the few houses built around Verrieres station.

FU-MANCHU & CO.

By Sax Rohmer

THE SIX GATES

"D[illegible] Petrie!" cried Smith, "this is most annoying!"

The bell was ringing furiously, although midnight was long past. Who could my late visitor be? Almost certainly this ringing portended an urgent case. In other words, I was not fated to take part in what I anticipated would prove to be the closing scene of the Fu-Manchu drama.

"Everyone in bed," I said ruefully, "and how can I possibly see a patient—in this costume?"

Smith and I were both arrayed in rough tweeds, and, anticipating the labors before us, had dispensed with collars and wore soft mufflers. It was hard to be called upon to face a professional interview dressed thus, and having a big tweed cap pulled down over my eyes.

Across the writing table we confronted each other in dismayed silence, while below the bell sent up its ceaseless clangor.

"It has to be done, Smith," I said regretfully. "Almost certainly it means a journey and probably an absence of some hours."

I threw my cap upon the table, turned up my coat to hide the absence of a collar, and started for the door. My last sight of Smith showed him standing looking after me, tugging at the lobe of his ear and clicking his teeth together with suppressed irritability. I stumbled down the dark stairs, along the hall, and opened the front door. Vaguely visible in the light of a street lamp, which stood at no great distance away, I saw a slender man of medium height confronting me. From the shadowed face two large and luminous eyes looked out into mine. My visitor, who, despite the warmth of the evening, wore a greatcoat, was an Oriental!

I drew back apprehensively, then:

"Ah, Dr. Petrie!" he said in a softly musical voice, which made me start again, "to God be all praise that I have found you!"

Some emotion, which at present I could not define, was stirring within me. Where had I seen this graceful Eastern youth before? Where had I heard that soft voice?

"Do you wish to see me professionally?" I asked—yet even as I put the question I seemed to know it unnecessary.

"So you know me no more?" said the stranger, and his teeth gleamed in a slight smile.

Heavens! I knew what had struck that vibrant chord within me! The voice, though infinitely deeper, yet had an unmistakable resemblance to the dulcet tones of Karamaneh—of Karamaneh, the slave of Fu-Manchu, the girl whose eyes haunted my dreams, whose beauty had done much to embitter my years.

The Oriental youth stepped forward with outstretched hand.

"So you know me no more?" he repeated. "But I know you, and give praise to Allah that I have found you!"

I stepped back, pressed the electric switch, and turned with leaping heart to look into the face of my visitor. It was a face of the purest Greek beauty, a face that might have served as a model for Praxiteles; the skin had a golden pallor, which, with the crisp black hair and magnetic yet velvety eyes, suggested to my fancy was the young Antinous risen from the Nile, whose wraith now appeared to me out of the night. I stifled a cry of surprise, not unmingled with gladness.

It was Aziz, the brother of Karamaneh!

Never could the entrance of a figure upon the stage of a drama have been more dramatic than the coming of Aziz upon the night of all nights. I seized the outstretched hand and drew him forward, then reclosed the door and stood before him a moment in doubt.

A vaguely troubled look momentarily crossed the handsome face; with the Oriental's unerring instinct he had detected the reserve of my greeting. Yet, when I thought of the treachery of Karamaneh, when I remembered how she, whom we had befriended, whom we had rescued from the house of Fu-Manchu, now had turned, like the beautiful viper that she was, to strike at the hand that caressed her; when I thought how tonight we were set upon raiding the place where the evil Chinese doctor lurked in hiding, were set upon the arrest of that malignant genius and of all his creatures, Karamaneh among them, is it strange that I hesitated?

So, avoiding the gaze of the lad, I took his arm, and in silence we two ascended the stairs and entered my study, where Nayland Smith stood bolt upright beside the table, his steely eyes fixed upon the face of the new arrival.

No look of recognition crossed the bronzed features, and Aziz, who had started forward with outstretched hands, fell back a step and looked pathetically from me to Nayland Smith and from the grim commissioner back to be. The appeal in the velvet eyes was more than I could tolerate, unmoved.

"Smith," I said shortly, "you remember Aziz?"

Not a muscle visible moved in Smith's face as he snapped back: "I remember him perfectly."

"He has come, I think, to seek our assistance."

"Yes, yes," cried Aziz, laying his hand upon my arm with a gesture painfully reminiscent of Karamaneh; "I came only tonight to London. Oh, my gentlemen, I have searched and searched and searched until I am weary. Often I have wished to die. And then at last I come to Rangoon"——

"To Rangoon!" snapped Smith, still with the gray eyes fixed almost fiercely upon the lad's face.

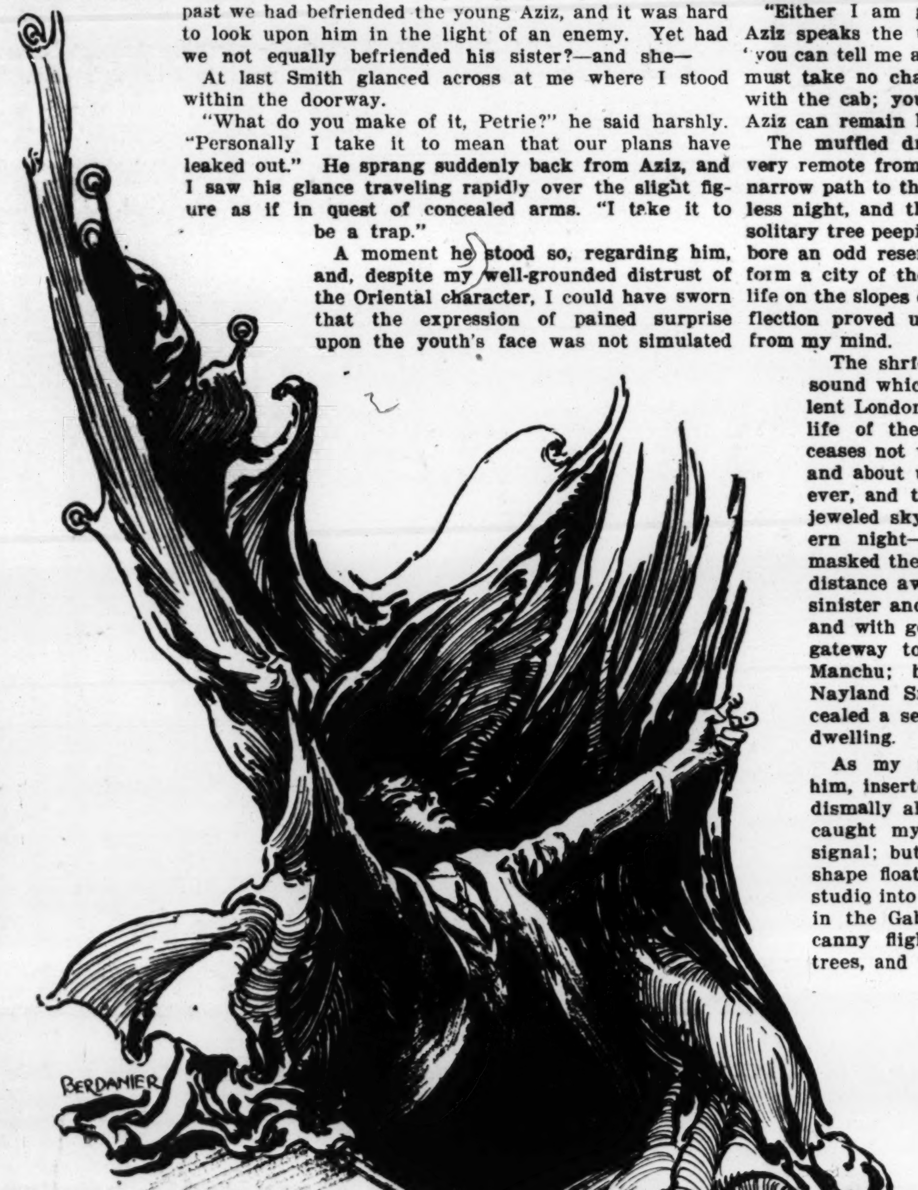
"To Rangoon—yes; and there I hear news at last. I hear that you have seen her—have seen Karamaneh—that you are back in London." He was not entirely at home with his English. "I knew then that she must be here, too. I ask them everywhere, and they answer 'yes.' Oh, Smith Pasha!"—he stepped forward and impulsively seized both Smith's hands—"you know where she is—take me to her!"

Smith's face was a study in perplexity now. In the past we had befriended the young Aziz, and it was hard to look upon him in the light of an enemy. Yet had we not equally befriended his sister?—and she—

At last Smith glanced across at me where I stood within the doorway.

"What do you make of it, Petrie?" he said harshly. "Personally I take it to mean that our plans have leaked out." He sprang suddenly back from Aziz, and I saw his glance traveling rapidly over the slight figure as if in quest of concealed arms. "I take it to be a trap."

A moment he stood so, regarding him, and, despite my well-grounded distrust of the Oriental character, I could have sworn that the expression of pained surprise upon the youth's face was not simulated but real. Even Smith, I think, began to share my view, for suddenly he threw himself into the white cane rest chair, still fixedly regarding Aziz.



"Petrie! My God, Petrie!"

"Perhaps I have wronged you," he said. "If I have, you shall know the reason presently. Tell your own story."

There was a pathetic humidity in the velvet eyes of Aziz—eyes so like those others that were ever looking into mine in dreams—as, glancing from Smith to me, he began, hands outstretched characteristicaly, palms upward and fingers curling, to tell in broken English the story of his search for Karamaneh.

"It was Fu-Manchu, my kind gentlemen—it was the hakeen, who is really not a man at all, but an afreet. He found us again less than four days after you had left us, Smith Pasha! He found us in Cairo, and to Karamaneh he made the forgetting of all things—even of me—even of me"——

Nayland Smith snapped his teeth together sharply; then: "What do you mean by that?" he demanded.

For my own part I understood well enough, remembering how the brilliant Chinese doctor once had performed such an operation as this upon poor Inspector Weymouth; how, by means of an injection of some serum prepared (as Karamaneh afterward told me) from the venom of a swamp adder or similar reptile, he had induced amnesia or complete loss of memory. I felt every drop of blood recede from my cheeks.

"Smith!" I began——

"Let him speak for himself," interrupted my friend sharply.

"They tried to take us both," continued Aziz, still speaking in the soft, melodious manner, but with deep seriousness. "I escaped, I, who am swift of foot, hoping to bring help." He shook his head sadly. "But, except the All Powerful, who is so powerful as the Hakeen Fu-Manchu? I hid, my gentlemen, and watched and waited—one—two—three weeks. At last I saw her again, my sister Karamaneh; but, ah! she did not know me, did not know me, Aziz, her brother! She was in an arabeeyeh, and passed me quickly along the Sharia en-Nahhasim. I ran, and ran, crying her name, but although she looked back, she did not know me—she did not know me! I felt that I was dying, and presently I fell—upon the steps of the Mosque of Abu."

He dropped the expressive hands wearily to his sides and sank his chin upon his breast.

"And then?" I said, huskily—for my heart was fluttering like a captive bird.

"Alas! from that day to this I see her no more, my gentlemen. I travel not only in Egypt but near and far, and still I see her no more until in Rangoon I hear that which brings me to England again"—he extended his palms naively—"and here I am—Smith Pasha."

Smith sprang upright again and turned to me.

"Either I am growing overcredulous," he said, "or Aziz speaks the truth. But"—he held up his hand—"you can tell me all that at some other time, Petrie! We must take no chances. Sergeant Carter is downstairs with the cab; you might ask him to step up. He and Aziz can remain here until our return."

The muffled drumming of sleepless London seemed very remote from us, as side by side we crept up the narrow path to the studio. This was a starry but moonless night, and the little dingy white building, with a solitary tree peeping, in silhouette, above its glazed roof, bore an odd resemblance to one of those tombs which form a city of the dead so near to the city of feverish life on the slopes of the Mokattam hills. This line of reflection proved unpleasant, and I dismissed it sternly from my mind.

The shriek of a train whistle reached me, a sound which breaks the stillness of the most silent London night, telling of the ceaseless, febrile life of the great world capital whose activity ceases not with the coming of darkness. Around and about us a very great stillness reigned, however, and the whole dusk—which, with the star-jeweled sky, was strongly suggestive of an Eastern night—gave up no sign to show that it masked the presence of more than 20 men. Some distance away on our right was the Gables, that sinister and deserted mansion which we assumed, and with good reason, to be nothing less than the gateway to the subterranean abode of Dr. Fu-Manchu; before us was the studio, which, if Nayland Smith's deductions were accurate, concealed a second entrance to the same mysterious dwelling.

As my friend, glancing cautiously all about him, inserted the key in the lock, an owl hooted dismally almost immediately above our heads. I caught my breath sharply, for it might be a signal; but, looking upward, I saw a great black shape float slantingly from the tree beyond the studio into the copice on the right which hemmed in the Gables. Silently the owl winged its uncanny flight into the greater darkness of the trees, and was gone. Smith opened the door and we stepped into the studio. Our plans had been well considered, and, in accordance with these, I now moved up beside my friend, who was dimly perceptible to me in the starlight which found access through the glass roof, and pressed the catch of my electric pocket lamp.

I suppose that by virtue of my self-imposed duty as chronicler of the deeds of Dr. Fu-Manchu—the greatest and most evil genius whom the latter centuries have produced, the man who dreamed of a universal Yellow Empire—I should have acquired a certain facility in describing bizarre happenings. But I confess that it fails me now as I attempt in cold English to portray my emotions when the white beam from the little lamp cut through the darkness of the studio and shone fully upon the beautiful face of Karamaneh!

Less than six feet away from me she stood, arrayed in the gaudy dress of the harem, her fingers and slim white arms laden with barbaric jewelry! The light wavered in my suddenly nerveless hand, gleaming momentarily upon bare ankles and golden anklets, upon little red leather shoes.

I spoke no word, and Smith was as silent as I; both of us, I think, were speechless rather from amazement than in obedience to the evident wishes of Fu-Manchu's slave girl. Yet I have only to close my eyes at this moment to see her as she stood, one finger raised to her lips, enjoining us to silence. She looked ghastly pale in the light of the lamp, but so lovely that my rebellious heart threatened already to make a fool of me.

So we stood in that untidy studio, with canvases and easels heaped against the wall and with all sorts of litter about us, a trio strangely met, and one to have amused the high gods watching through the windows of the stars.

"Go back!" came a whisper from Karamaneh.

I saw the red lips moving and read a dreadful horror in the widely opened eyes, in those eyes like pools of mystery to taunt the thirsty soul. The world of realities was slipping past me. I seemed to be losing my hold on things actual; I had built up an Eastern palace about myself and Karamaneh, wherein, the world shut out, I might pass the hours in reading the mystery of

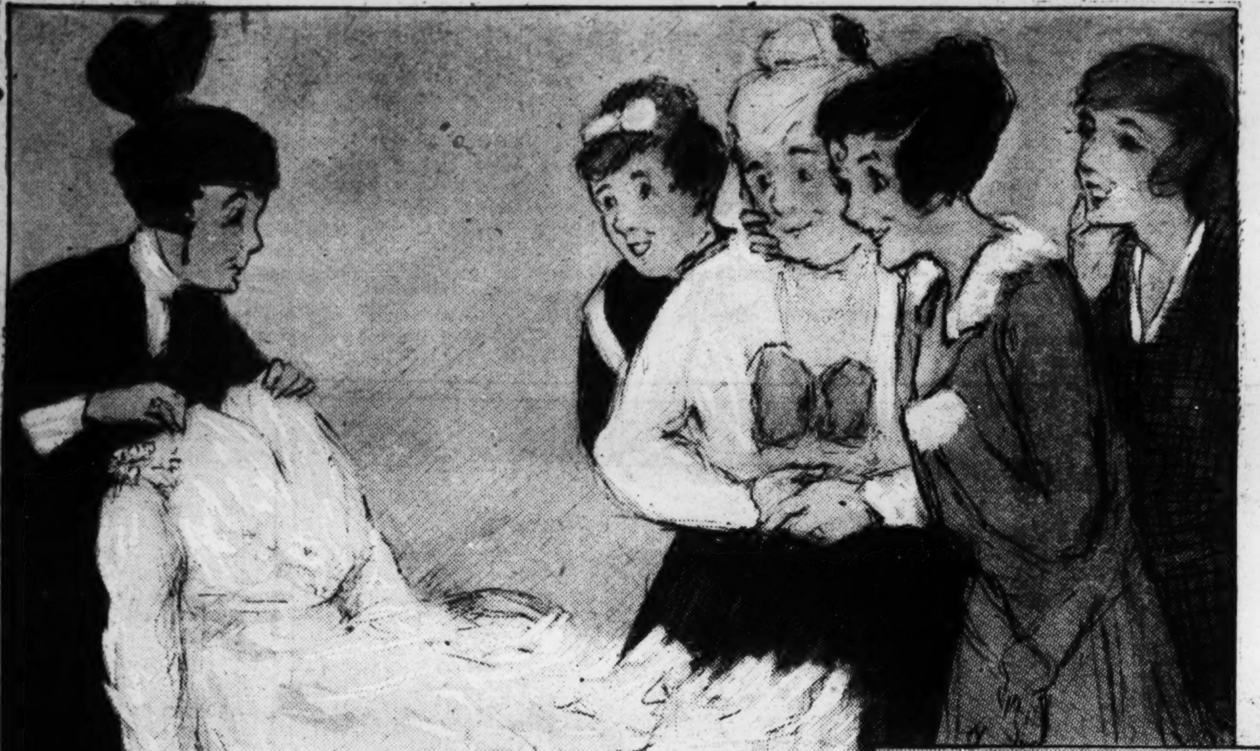
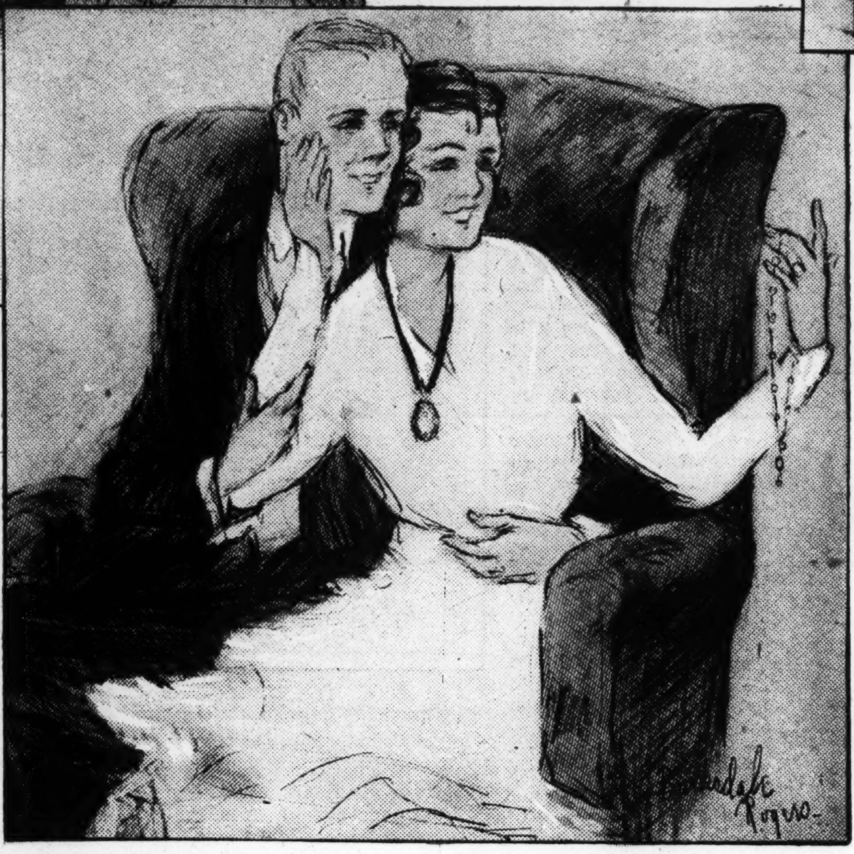
MRS. JOHN GOODHUE LIVINGSTON

THESE clever sketches by Barksdale Rogers, the gifted young Southern artist, carry her heroine, already familiar to Post-Dispatch Magazine readers, a step further into life



THE GOWN AT LAST—Miss Dorothy and mother and Celeste (nee Maggie) all sigh with relief. The war does interfere so with Parisian commerce.



THE BRIDEGROOM'S GIFT—Star sapphires in platinum. "Oh, Jack, it's such a lovely, simple thing!" "Color of your eyes, sweetheart," says honest John.
